When President Bent rapped to order, he was greeted by nearly 5,000 people. After a brief reference to the recent victory as establishing the principles of the club, he introduced Gov. Greenhalge to welcome the guests. The next speaker was Senator Hoar, who was greeted with three cheers and frequently applauded. He was followed by ex-Speaker Reed. He spoke for an hour. Referring to the republican landslide he said:

"The retribution has certainly been tremenduous. You don't half realize how immense it was.

"When, in 1840, the people rose in such wrath that 1840 has been in American politics the symbol of an Alpine avalanche, the house of representatives only changed from 12 democratic to 37 whig, a change of 49, and even when you add one-half for increase of size, you have only 98 for a total.

"When Franklin Pierce swept the country in 1852, the whigs lost but 13 seats. In the great upheaval of 1874, which exceeded that of 1890, 99 republican majority was changed to 45 democratic majority, and the south assumed that solidity which has been the misfortune of this country ever since. The total change then was 144.

"The change a week ago last Monday was 258. If you take off 58 for increase of the house, you still have a change of 200. A change of 258 in a body of 356 is unparalleled in the history of this country, and so far as I now recall, of any legislative body in any free government in this world.

"It would mean a change of 500 in the British house of commons.

Regarding the tariff bill he said: "What the Gorman bill means for the industries of this country, we have yet to see. That it favors Canada, and gives it at least $5,000,000, we already know.

"That it destroys sheep husbandry is all too probable. That many small woollen manufactories must go under seems unavoidable, and that wages must come nearer the European standard seems inevitable. But this need not last more than three years if the American people are steadfast and wise and determined.

"This country is in favor of the doctrine of protection, largely in favor of it. Everything shows this, and no man, whose brains are not suffering from recent concussion from the heels, can think otherwise."

Mr. Reed was followed by William J. Parkinson of Louisania who spoke on the republican victories in that state. A telegram from Gov. McKinley was read. Senator Hoar spoke for an hour and the party broke up.

ROASTED THE BABY.

An Awful Struggle With a Maniac Servant Girl.

Riverton, N. J., Nov. 23.—Annie Quinn, a servant girl, attempted to cremate the two-year-old baby of Edward Pearson here. Mrs. Pearson was in the kitchen assisting the girl in the preparation of dinner, but passed into the store. Scarcely had she turned her back when she was startled by the screams of the older of her two children. She hurried back and found Annie holding the two-year-old baby over the stove, from which she had removed all the lids, and in which a furious fire was burning. The little one was writhing over the fierce heat.

Mrs. Pearson bravely attacked the girl, who, dropping the little one upon the floor, turned and fought the mother like a tigress. Mrs. Pearson was no match for her and the girl thrust her from the room and locked the door.

The frenzied cries for help of Mrs. Pearson brought Frank Dean. He burst through the kitchen door just as the girl had seized the baby again.

Though a strong, hearty fellow, he was no match for the girl in her frenzied condition and he summoned assistance. She was overpowered by three men, and Dr. Marcy administered opiates which quieted her.

Dr. Marcy said the girl's condition was due to hysteria arising from angry passion. Her mother had called at the house during the morning and collected the wages due her daughter. Annie flew into a violent rage, and for the balance of the morning was like one in a trance.

BOB FITZSIMMONS CLEARED.

A Coroner's Jury Says He Is Not To Blame for Riordan's Death.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The inquest touching the death of Cornelius Riordan, who was killed in a sparring bout with Robert Fitzsimmons, was held before Coroner Roberts and a jury. The jury brought in the following verdict:

"We find that Cornelius Riordan came to his death on the evenig of Friday, Nov. 16 from an accidental blow delivered by Robert Fitzsimmons while engaged in a sparring exhibition. We exonerate Robert Fitzsimmons from all blame."

Strong testimony against Fitzsimmons was given by Dr. D. M. Totman, who attended Riordan. He testified that the blow delivered by Fitzsimmons alone caused death.

WITH GORGEOUS ARRAY

Superb Scenes Will Mark Nicholas' Wedding.

Papers of the Dead Emperor Ordered the Ceremony at Once—With Magnificence Never Known Outside the White Czar's Domains Will the Wedding Be Performed.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 23.—Czar Alexander left a document to be opened nine days after his death. It was found to contain an entreaty to Czar Nicholas to marry Princess Alix directly after the funeral. Hence the wedding has been fixed to take place on Monday.

It is reported that Czar Nicholas was disappointed by the apparent coolness of the residents of St. Petersburg.

When he discovered the reason, he reprimanded the chief of police for ordering windows to be closed and balconies and roofs not to be occupied on the day the late czars body arrived in the city and on the day of the funeral.

The details of the wedding have all been arranged. The bride will be dressed at he Grand Duke Sergius' palace in the historic national costume and a small diamond crown. The procession will go to the winter palace, led by the emperor's Cossack guard. Behind the military will come the master of ceremonies, the court marshals, the minister of the household, riding in gilt carriages surrounded by mounted officials, huntsmen and lackeys in gorgeous uniforms.

The czar will ride in a splendid modern chariot drawn by eight white horses with trappings of scarlet and gold. The ex-czarina and the bride will in a carved gilt carriage presented to the empress of Russia in 1746 by Frederick the Great.

The imperial arms in jewels on the panels are surmounted with a jewelled crown. Six carriages each drawn by eight horses, will convey the duchesses and princesses.

The carriages belong to the Empress Catherine and are costly works of art painted by Watteau, Bouche and Gravello.

After them will come a brilliant cavalcade of grand dukes, foreign princes, generals and court ladies, followed by the empress' own cuirassiers in white and silver uniforms. The procession will be closed by more Cossack guards. It will stop at the Kazan cathedral. The bride will walk alone at he head of the family to the platform, where the metropolitan and clergy will present the miraculous image of the Holy Virgin of Kazan, which all will kiss.

The church is hung with the flags and keys of captured fortresses and other war trophies. After the prayer the imperial family will return to the platform outside, where the city delegates will do them homage and offer them bread and salt on a golden salver.

The party will re-enter the carriages and the procession will go via the Newski Prospect to the winter palace, where the courtiers, diplomats, delegates, nobility, etc., will be assembled. Te ceremony will be performed on a raised dais in the palace church.

The bride's godfather will lead the couple to the dais and the late czar's confessor, Janischeff, will begin the service. The priest will place the two rings on the fingers of the bride and bridegroom. These they will exchange thrice. While the choir sings the priest will join their hands and will cover the pair with his robe.

The bridesmaids and groomsmen will hold the marriage crowns over their heads and the priest will lead them thrice around the dais. Each will sip hot wine, which act is symbolical of their sharing everything.

After the prayers the marriage will be declared effected and the bride's new names will be pronounced and the images will be kissed. The grand dinner afterwards will be the only festivity in consequence of the mourning.

TORTURED THIRTY YEARS.

His Suffering Ended After Using Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Mr. George Smith, of Tacony, Pa., says: "I suffered from rheumatism for 30 years, and had so many severe attacks that some of my joints were twisted out of shape. At times I suffered terrible pain, and, although I tried many remedies, I never obtained any permanent relief until I procured Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. The action of this remedy was wonderfully quick, and although I have only taken a small quantity, I consider myself permanently cured."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

RELIEF FROM BANKERS

An Agreement Is Reached To Furnish Gold.

Representatives of Trust Companies and Financial Institutions Hold a Bond Conference—Will Yield Forty Per Cent. of Their Holdings. Officials Expect $30,000,000.

New York, Nov. 23.—A number of bankers held a conference with the presidents of the leading trust companies in the United States Trust company's offices. Arrangements were perfected for taking a block of bonds, but whether the bids would be for the whole amount or not Mr. John A. Stewart, president of the United States Trust company, declined to say. Arrangements were also made to secure the gold. The national banks will put in their bids on a three per cent. basis, while the combination of trust companies and foreign bankers will bid slightly under three per cent.

There has been no formal agreement between the banks regarding the method of furnishing the gold. It is expected that the banks will part with 40 per cent. of their gold holdings.

As it is expected that the bond issue will be overscribed, each subscriber will not know what amount of gold he will need until the treasury allotment is made. The New York banks will then know how much gold will be required by their depositors and can act intelligently.

The presence of a representative from each of the foreign houses which conduct the gold shipping business shows that if the New York banks should fail to do their full duty, the gold will be secured abroad.

When the foreign houses know what amount of bonds is awarded to them they can begin drawing their bills of exchange upon London, and as ample time is allowed for making the full payments to the government, their bills will force down the foreign exchange market and permit gold to be imported more cheaply than it can be obtained here.

The local treasury officials, who are watching the bankers very closely, have reduced their estimates of the amount of gold that will be secured through the bond issue, and are not sanguine that over $30,000,000 gold will be furnished by the New York banks.

It is believed, however, that some gold which was hoarded during the panic by timid capitalists will be tempted from the private hoards by the bond issue.

It is estimated by New York bankers that the subscriptions will not aggregate less than $75,000,000 and will reach over $100,000,000.

Washington, Nov. 23.—The treasury lost yesterday $50,000 in gold taken out by Charles Hathaway & Co., at the New York sub-treasury. This reduces the gold reserve to $57,000,000. The general balance is $100,411,000. A rumor was prevalent here that a half dozen of the large New York national banks had agreed to furnish to private parties all the gold necessary for them to purchase bonds with.

No official information of this character had been received at the treasury at the close of business, but it would not surprise treasury officials if such were done.

A number of bids have been received here for bonds but their amount or price remain unknown as the envelopes have not been opened and will not be until to-morrw.

TROUBLE FOR KNIGHTS.

Seven Thousand Miners May Leave the Labor Organization.

Columbus, O., Nov. 23.—John McBride, head of the miners division of the Knights of Labor, is preparing a circular to the local organizations, setting forth the fact that at the national convention of the Knights of Labor, at New Orleans, just held, they were denied representation. He asks them to send delegates to the convention here in February next, instructed to take action in the matter.

The miners will probably withdraw from the Knights of Labor. There are about 7,000 of them members of the organization now.

MILLIONS AT STAKE.

Trying to Settle Up the Estate of Andrew J. Davis.

Boston, Nov. 23.—The sensational case, in which is involved the estate of millionaire Andrew J. Davis, late of Montana, will come up in the Suffolk county probate court next month.

Mr. Davis died about four years ago in Montana, leaving an estate valued at over $5,000,000, more than $1,000,000 of which is in this commonwealth.

Soon after his death search was made for a will, but none was found, and Hon. R. M. Morse of Boston and Judge Gideon Wells of Springfield were appointed special administrators of the estate in this commonwealth.

Later on, what was alleged to be the last will of Mr. Davis was said to have been discovered in Montana, but was declared to be a forgery, and in a subsequent trial, which lasted more than three weeks, the jury disagreed, and since then matters have stood still, the will being neither set up nor set aside.

There is in the Boston Safe Deposit company's vaults to-day more than $1,000,000 belonging to the estate, and held held by Mr. Morse and Judge Wells, who have been anxious to have something done in the matter of settling the estate.

Recently Mr. Morse applied to the Suffolk county probate court, to take up the case and settle the estate so far as it has jurisdiction, and the Court has set the matter down for Dec. 17.

It is probable that an effort will be made to induce the court to defer hearing the case until the matter is decided in Montana.

EZETA'S AMERICAN BRIDE

The General Betrothed to a Woman from Rochester, This State.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 23—Mrs Bessie E. Paxton, who reports from San Francisco say is to wed General Antonio Ezeta, a brother of the deposed president of San Salvador, Carlos Ezeta, the leader and head of the army, was formerly a resident of this city. Mrs. Paxton is the daughter of the late Col. Wm. Emerson of this city and is well known in Rochester society.

In 1882 she was married to Blitz W. Paxton, a member of a wealthy family in Santa Rosa, Sonomo county, Cal., and a man reputed to be worth between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000. The couple lived together until 1884, when, it is alleged, the husband deserted his wife.

HOWE BLAMES MRS. PITZEL.

The St. Louis Lawyer Disclaims Fraud in the Holmes Swindle.

Philadelphia, Nov. 23.—Jeptha D. Howe, the St. Louis lawyer, implicated in the Holmes insurance swindle, who gave himself up to the police, blames Mrs. Pitezel for his connection with the affair. She called upon him, he said, and employed him to secure the money which in good faith he did. McDonald, Howe's partner, says the case was the latter's first, and he was easily duped.

It has been discovered that the Pitezel children were in St. Louis Sept. 27. They were taken away by an unknown man. Miss Durkee, one of Holmes' accomplices, lives at No. 4,320 Burdette street, Omaha. She is a sister of a Burlington railroad official.

Murdered By Clara Ford.

Toronto, Nov. 23.—Clara Ford, a mulatto of handsome appearance, who was arrested Tuesday, has confessed to the murder of Frank B. Westwood. On October 6 the young man was shot down in his own door, when he answered the bell. The crime was a mystery, and no clue to the perpetrator was obtained until a few days ago, when it was learned that Westwood, before his death, had written to a local paper telling of a woman who masqueraded in man's clothing. The detectives learned that Miss Ford was given to this practice, and arrested her. The confession followed. The woman refuses to give any reason for the crime.

Heavy Damages for a Foot.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 23.—The jury in the case of William H. Sandford vs. The Union Railroad company for $25,000 damages for injuries received in September, 1890, when he had a foot crushed while on one of the defendant's cars, has rendered a verdict for the plaintiff for $15,000.

SUNK THEIR BEST SHIP

Admiral Ito Deals China's Navy a Death Blow.

Another Great Battle Fought at Wei-Hai-Wei, With Disastrous Results To Li Hung Chang—Suicide of the Chinese Commander—China Ready To Pay an Indemnity.

London, Nov. 23.—Dispatches from Japan tell of another great naval battle in which China suffered defeat, losing her best ship, the Chen-Yuen. The vessel was blown up by a Chinese torpedo in the bay of Wei-Hai-Wei, and Li Hung Chang is now powerless at sea.

The Chinese Pei-Yang squadron of warships attacked and shelled the Japanese troops who were marching upon Port Arthur, the troops having taken a road near the coast.

The Japanese fleet came to the rescue of the troops and a desperate fight took place between the Chinese and Japanese warships.

For several days the Japanese fleet had been watching Wei-Hai-Wei, where the Chinese vessels were anchored. Admiral Ito tried to get them out but failed. He sailed away, ostensibly, and the Chinese, falling into the trap, ran out to shell the troops, when the Japs intercepted them.

Details of the fight are lacking, but it is known that Admiral Ito, has gained a great victory.

When he saw his great vessel wrecked Commodore Lin anticipated official condemnation by killing himself.

The Chen-Yuen was very much like the Maine of the United States navy. She was 7,430 tons displacement, and had a belt of 14-inch composite armor, her turrets being 12 inches thick. She was armed with four 12-inch Krupp guns, two of 15 centimetre calibre; four of one ton, eight machine guns, two light rapid fire rifles and was provided with two torpedo launching tubes. She cost $3,000,000 in 1882.

A second dispatch from Japan states that China has intimated her willingness to pay an indemnity of 100,000,000 taels and in addition pay all the war expenses incurred by Japan. As the war expenses reach 150,000,000 taels, the total offer of China would be 250,000,000 taels. The whole payment would be approximately, $175,000,000 in American money.

Reports from Tien-Tsin state that Commissioner of Customs Detring has started for Japan to arrange terms of peace.

Port Arthur resembles a city of the dead. The streets are empty. The soldiers, of which there are 20,000 here, occupy the houses. All the troops are of superior quality and are well armed and drilled. Ammunition is plentiful and the town is victualed for six weeks.

The Mongolians are rebelling on account of General Yek's execution of six Mongolian princes and many Chinese soldiers are joining them. A correspondent in Shanghai says: "The road from Tien-Tsin to Pekin is occupied by Hunanese troops and is becoming unpleasant for travelers. The Catholic fathers remain at their stations in Manchuria but the protestant missionaries have returned.

"The latter report that the Chinese fought stubbornly under General Sung and if well led, would repel the Japanese. The cold weather is setting in."

Washington, Nov. 23.—Lieut. Miyoka, naval attache of the Japanese legation here, says the advance on Port Arthur has been very cautious, as the ground for miles around has been filled with powder mines connected with electric wires running to Port Arthur.

Three days ago the Japanese were within a day's march of the fortress, but it was necessary to send ahead small scouting parties to pick a route away from the mines and wires.

The regular road could not be used for artillery, as it would have been blown up, and accordingly the big guns have had to be moved through woods and swamps.

This cautious march should have been completed by this time, and the Japanese legation is hourly expecting word that the decisive blow has been struck, though a siege may be necessary, as the fortress has one of the strongest defenses of modern times.

ALLEGED CHILD MURDERERS.

The Men Who Are Charged With Having Killed Four in Court.

Paulding, O., Nov. 23.—Hart, Brindle and Cain, charged with murder of the four Good children, and David Merritt, a witness, were taken to Justice Spring's court. The streets and court room were crowded with excited citizens. Prosecutor Corbett stated that he desired Cain to be held as a witness only. Hart and Brindle pleaded not guilty.

The only new evidence was that of Merritt, who stated that Brindle had made a confession to him. Merritt was held under $1,000 bond as a witness and Hart and Brindle were committed to jail.

Big Legacies for Charity.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 23.—The will of Harvey Keney filed here shows an estate of $800,000, of which Trinity college gets $25,000; Hartford hospital, $50,000, and the Hartford Orphan asylum, $50,000.

Cowes, Nov. 23.—A telegram received here says that Lord Dunraven has definitely decided to issue a challenge for the America's cup.

A VICTORY FOR PASKOLA.

It Receives the Official Endorsement of Eminent Experts and a Jury of Representative Citizens.

The suit brought by Ohio's Food Commissioner against a Cincinnati druggist for selling Paskola on the ground that it was nothing but glucose, resulted in a great victory for Paskola and a verdict against the State.

During the course of the trial, Prof. Shaller of the University of Cincinnati, testified that Paskola was not glucose, and even if it was, it would be harmless. He also bore witness to its activity as a digestive agent.

Prof. Wm. Dickore of the Miami College, testified to the same facts. So did Prof. Schmidt, the chemist of the Board of Health, Prof. Wm. Hoffman and others.

A practical test was made in court, showing the digestive action of Paskola on eggs and meats of various kinds, whereas glucose under precisely the same conditions produced no effect whatever.

This test but confirmed the experts statements and proved Paskola to be of great value in indigestion and wasting diseases.

This verdict disposes of the malicious attack that has been made against Paskola by interested rivals, and suits have now been brought against the proprietors of a well-known emulsion of cod liver oil for having given wide circulation to a false formula and other misrepresentations regarding it.

The animus of this attack will be the better understood when it is stated that Paskola is being largely used in the place of cod liver oil.

CHAPTER I.—WOMAN'S WILES.

Whew-w-w-w! how the wind blew! How it swept along the Kentish fields, driving the snow into drifts, whistling through the bare branches of the trees, and hurrying the black clouds along in the lowering sky!

The mail train was speeding along to Dover, and the passengers, blinking out of the windows, shrugged their shoulders and shivered at the prospect before them.

"If it's like this inland," said one prosperous-looking old gentleman, tucked up in rugs in the corner of a first-class compartment, to his opposite neighbor, "what will it be like at Dover? Ten to one the boat won't cross to-night!"

At the further end of the carriage a young man was sitting, who seemed much disturbed by this remark.

"Do you really think so?" he asked anxiously, joining in the talk for the first time. "It takes a great deal to stop the mail boat."

The first speaker replied with the calm and pompous assurance of an experienced traveler.

"Well, and what do you call 'a great deal,' if you haven't got it there?"

And he pointed with his finger to the snow-covered landscape just as a fresh blast came howling round the flying train, covering the window with a thick white sheet of driving snow.

The young man looked more anxious than ever. He was a clerk in the employ of a firm of stock brokers, and had been intrusted for the first time with a duty of great importance. He was the bearer of a large amount of negotiable securities which, for safety, it was thought advisable to send by hand, and he had to deliver them in Paris on the following day.

When the train stopped at Dover station, therefore, George Llewellyn, for that was the young fellow's name, was among the first of the passengers to spring on to the platform, and to ask eagerly whether the mail boat was going to cross.

THE DETECTIVE CAME UP TO HIM.

"No, sir. She won't cross to-night. The storm's too high," was the disappointing answer of the official.

Llewellyn, however, would not give up hope at once. He had no luggage but his hand bag, and he waited about, refusing all offers of the porters to carry it for him, and made further inquiries, in the vain hope of at length hearing better news.

At last he became aware that something about him had made him an object of suspicion to two men whom, by their boots, he guessed to be detectives; and as, recognizing this, he was about to leave the station, one of these men came up to him very quietly and requested him to step into the superintendent's office.

Llewellyn saw that it was best to comply quietly, and, on finding himself shut in with the detective and a couple of policemen in uniform, he gave at once the fullest details as to his name, his residence, his place of employment, and his present errand. He also gave up his keys, so that the detective could inspect the documents he was carrying.

The examination lasted a very few moments.

"Quite right, sir, thank you," said the man, touching his hat with a smile; "and now you must excuse me for having detained you, but we've just had a wire telling us to be on the lookout for two well-known thieves, a man and a woman, who are supposed to have come down by this train with a number of stolen securities. So you see, sir, although it was a bad shot in one way to suspect you, on the other it was a good one, for you were traveling with securities, although they didn't happen to be stolen ones."

George Llewellyn accepted the apology and explanation good-humoredly and asked if it was by order of the police that the boat was stopped.

"Oh, no, sir. The weather's responsible for that," answered the man, shaking his head. "Though I don't say it won't help us to have a little more time to look around."

And he opened the door, saluting George respectfully as the latter passed out.

Out in the little squalid street outside the station, with the wind whistling round the corners and the snow melting into a dirty slush at his feet, Llewellyn asked himself what he should do. [illegible] he put up at a hotel in [illegible] did he make his [illegible] old friend [illegible] he knew a little way out of Dover, off the high road over the cliffs?

He decided on the latter course. Dr. Lowe was not a man who kept early hours, and George, who remembered in what direction the house lay although he had not been there since his boyhood, decided that he would be able to reach it in an hour, allowing for the state of the weather.

It was by this time twenty-five minutes past ten o'clock, and the snow was falling less thickly. It did occur to Llewellyn that the expedition had its risks, considering the value of the property he was carrying, but on the other hand a night spent at a hotel was not without its dangers in the circumstances. So George, who was young, tall, muscular, and provided with a revolver, started on his way through the town.

He could hear the roar of the waves as they broke upon the beach; he had to fight against the wind when he reached the corner of the street. But on the whole the walk, for a strong young man, had its pleasures, for the snow had ceased to be blinding, and a battle with the wind stirs young blood into pleasurable excitement. In a very short time he had got clear of the town, and was on the high road in the open country.

Here the snow impeded his progress more than he had expected; for there was nothing in this high bleak spot to check the caprices of the wind, which swept almost bare great patches of the open land, and swirled the snow into heaps in unexpected places. It was a lonely walk enough, and George began to be puzzled as to whether he was keeping the right way. There were so few hedges or trees, and the featureless character of the country made it easy for the snow to blurr its outlines until they were quite undistinguishable.

He felt rather relieved when he caught the sound of human voices. He waited, as they seemed to be behind him. He heard them again in the roar of the wind. He hailed the unseen persons, but then the voices ceased. He presently went on again until he was startled to see in the darkness between him and the sea the dim outlines of two figures keeping pace with him at a little distance. He hailed them again, and the figures promptly vanished.

Without giving way to any cowardly fears George began to wish that he had been more discreet and that he had stayed at a hotel. There was nothing to do now, however, but to go forward as quickly and carefully as he could, for more than two-thirds of the distance must have been traversed by this time.

Unfortunately, however, soon after this incident he lost his way, hopelessly, undeniably. He found himself floundering, knee-deep, in snow, over something which might be a freshly-plowed field or which might be the ruins of a house, but which was certainly not the open road.

After a few fruitless struggles to get on firmer ground George again caught sight, a little way to the left this time, of two figures, which he perceived to be those of a man and a woman. Just at the moment of his discerning them the figures parted, that of the man disappearing from view, while the woman held on her way.

As she was evidently on firm ground, George made towards her at once, not calling out, lest he should frighten her.

Before he came up with her, he saw, by her walk and by her figure, that she was young; and when he addressed her, saying that he had lost his way, she turned her head quickly, and showed him that she was adorably pretty. So entirely was he thrown off his balance by the unexpected sight of such a lovely face, that he stopped short in the middle of his speech, and left her to answer a question which he had not finished asking.

"You are on the high road—to St. Placid's," she said, quickly. "Keep straight on."

And then she glanced, with a sudden change of expression, at the bag he was carrying. Before he could do more than raise his hat and thank her, she had hurried past him like a hare, with just one more look, penetrating, intelligent, from his face to the bag in his hand.

George remained for a moment stupefied; he stared at the retreating figure before him, and fancied he saw her turn, with a gesture of invitation to him to follow and catch her up. Acting on the impression, he started forward, and then there flashed into his mind the words used by the detective at the station: "Two well-known thieves, a man and a woman," had traveled down by the same train as himself! He was at once ashamed of his momentary suspicion that the beautiful girl he had just spoken to could be anything but the angel she looked; but her furtive and eager glances at his bag recurred again and again to his mind.

The wind was still blowing very hard, and the snow, which had for some time almost ceased, began to fall again in great flakes, so that the landscape was soon entirely blotted out from view, and George found more difficulty than ever in keeping the road. At last he saw a large, dark object in front of him, which he recognized as the clump of trees which marked the spot where there were crossroads, and where he should have to take the road on his right to get down into the village, where Dr. Lowe's house stood. The crossroads were at the highest point of the neighborhood, and George could scarcely keep his feet, much less choose his way as he approached it.

Just before he reached the turning he came to a fair-sized house of only two stories, shut in by a garden inclosed by a high wall. Just as George got under shelter of the wall, a door in the middle opened, and out of the darkness the voice of the girl he had just met spoke to him:

"You will never find your way into the village through this snow. Won't you come inside the house until it has left off a little?"

George stopped. He could hardly see the girl's pretty face in the darkness and the blinding snow; but the voice was alluring in its sweetness, and the temptation to look once more upon such exceptional beauty as hers decided him.

"Thank you. It is very good of you, very good of you, indeed. If I am not intruding, I shall indeed be glad to accept your kind offer for a few minutes."

She stepped nimbly back, opening the door for him. He passed through on to a stone-flagged path, which led, under cover all the way, to a deep porch, under which the lamplight streamed brightly and invitingly through the open door.

The curtains of a large window on the right of the porch were drawn; but those on the left were still open, and allowed George to see into a dining-room made cozy by the shaded light of lamps, and by the glow of a bright fire. He caught glimpses of armor, helmets, spears, shields, shining on a dark rich wall; and of flowers and sparkling silver on a white-covered table.

George, who was half dazed by his struggle with the wind and by the action of the snow upon his eyes, thought vaguely of the story of "Beauty and the Beast," as he staggered up the stone path. There was something mysterious, almost uncanny about the shut-in house and its curiously hospitable inhabitant, which made him change his mind as he realized it, and turn, with an excuse upon his lips, to go out again.

At that moment he heard a key turned in the door by which he had come, and he knew in a moment that he had done wrong in entering. He made two rapid steps back, and was met by the young girl.

"This way," she said, as, passing him quickly with a smile of invitation on her face, she led the way into the hall.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. St. Nicholas,
For Young Folks.
In 1895.

EDITED BY MARY MAPES DODGE.

The greatest year in the history of this magazine, now without a rival in its field, is the one just closing. Plans for the coming year assure even greater success than in the past.

Rudyard Kipling

wrote his famous "JUNGLE STORIES" for St. Nicholas, and it is a welcome announcement that these will be continued in 1895.

NAPOLEON

FOR YOUNG READERS.

While The Century will have for its leading feature the new life of the French Emperor by Prof. Sloane one of the most popular of St. Nicholas writers takes the same character for his inspiration.

A Boy of the First Empire,

BY ELBRIDGE S. BROOKS,

is the story of a little lad from the streets of Paris (but of good family), who renders a service to Napoleon, and becomes one of his pages and finally an aide. He is with him at the most critical times of his life,—at the departure for Elba, in the glories of the life at Fontainebleau, and finally at Waterloo. The story glows with pageantry, and is a truthful and accurate account based upon the best authorities and verified by the latest information, of the life of "the man of destiny." It is really a delightful story-history of Napoleon.

WEST POINT

will receive attention, Lieutenant Putnam writing of cadet life at the military academy, while Ensign Ellicott, of the flag-ship "Chicago," will describe the experiences of our hardy seamen on the modern ships of war.

Inspiring Tales

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Theodore Roosevelt will write a series to be called "Hero-Tales from American History," recounting famous deeds of heroism about which young people ought to know. Prof. Brander Matthews will include in his entertaining papers on "The Great American Authors" accounts of the lives of Bryant, Emerson, Longfellow, Hawthorne, Whittier, Poe and Lowell. Stories of famous horses in history and mythology—Bucephalus, Napoleon's and Sheridan's etc.—will be told by James Baldwin, author of "Stories from the Northern Myths." City Fire Departments will be treated, and there will be two or three papers on The Boys' Brigade. The serial stories are many. One called "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp" recounts the marvelous adventures of a modern boy who became the accidental purchaser of Aladdin's lamp and summoned the jinn while cleaning it. A delightful story of college girls, "The Three Freshmen" will appeal to every girl; and "Teddy and Carrots," James Otis's serial of newsboy life, will be read by every boy. A serial story by Frances Courtenay Baylor is one of the features.

Price of St. Nicholas is 25 cents a number or $3.00 a year. New subscriptions should begin with November, the first issue of the year. Subscribe through dealers, or remit by check, draft, or money-order to

'TWAS DONE AT BOUND BROOK.

Ex-Rabbi Falks Tells the Story of His Robbery by Green Goods Men.

Buffalo, Nov. 23.—Ex-Rabbi David Falk and Tailor Joseph Peristein, who were victimized by green goods men in New York on Tuesday last, have returned home poorer in pocket, but richer in experience. The story they tell differs materially from that already published. According to Mr. Falk, after reaching Bound Brook they were taken into a private room and negotiations were about to open for $1,000 worth of green goods, when Peristein suddenly announced that he had no money, not a cent. Falk had $55 with him, and said so. Then the green goods robber suddenly drew a gun, pointed it at his head, and exclaimed, "Well, give me that, and unload quickly, to, or you are a dead man". Mr Falk unloaded, as he says, and the two dupes then made their way out and back to New York. Falk got back to Buffalo on Thursday morning, but Peristein, owing to shortage of funds, had to stay over until his wife wired him money. He got back late last night.

Delightful and Instructive.

Concerning his lecture on "The Rhine and Switzerland", to be given in Music Hall next Wednesday night, Thanksgiving Eve, the Grand Rapids Daily Eagle says:

"Mr. Ragan is a thoroughly educated gentleman—a graduate of Yale College—has traveled extensively and spent many months at the places which he illustrates and of which he speaks for the especial purpose of securing the best views possible and becoming personally acquainted with the scenes. He is a fluent and polished speaker, and makes his lectures the more valuable by the interesting historical facts which he introduces. These entertainments have been given before large audiences in nearly every large city in this country, and they have everywhere been pronounced unequaled by any other entertainment of similar character. To attempt a description in detail of the many beautiful scenes presented last evening, would be to attempt an impossible task, since words can convey but a faint idea of the grand scenery, the quaint architecture, the rich coloring and the delicate lights and shades shown in Mr. Ragan's views. It is safe to say that no more delightful or instructive entertainments of the kind were ever presented in Grand Rapids."

Latin School Musicale.

A very pleasing little musical entertainment was given last evening at the Latin School by a number of the pupils, assisted by Miss Margaret Harrison. The performance of the boys on the flute and piano showed much skill and training. Miss Harrison, who is still pursuing her musical study at the Conservatory in New York, has a rich soprano voice of great sweetness and volume.

In spite of the bad weather quite a number of the patrons of the school were present. Among those present were Mr and Mrs Edward C Perkins, Mr and Mrs Isaac L Miller, Mr and Mrs Charles E Brooks, Mr and Mrs John T Baker, Mr and Mrs Major Burnett, Mr and Mrs John V. Beekman, Mrs. Sutphen, Mr. and Mrs DuFlon.

Thanksgiving Tableaux.

The Young People's Society of All Saints Church, Scotch Plains, will hold an entertainment in Excelsior Hall, Friday evening, Nov. 30. The little children of the parish will present tableaux, which on a late occasion were so attractive; and a number of young ladies will intersperse the entertainment with choice vocal and instrumental music. The proceeds are to be devoted to the purchase of new hymnals for the choir, and other useful articles in church work.

Supper and Hot Cakes.

The needs of the "inner man" have not been overlooked by the managers of the Y. M. C. A. Fair. At the restaurant on the second floor a hot supper will be served at 6 every evening of the fair, price 50 cents. In close proximity to the restaurant, Hecker has a booth, where hot cakes will be baked to order and served with butter and syrup for 10 cents a plate. All the proceed's of Hecker's sales are to be given to the Furnishing Fund.

The Symphony at the Fair.

One of the most pleasing features of the Y. M. C. A. fair will be the performance of the national airs upon the Symphony. These are preceded by bugle calls. The drum and fife are introduced in some of the military marches with fine effect. There is talk of a Rubinstein programme for Friday afternoon. This was suggested by the death of the great composer and pianist, Nov. 20.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

LOCKED IN.

Camera Club Members Have an Accidental Imprisonment.

J. Bervey Doane and Curt Gothell had an experience last night which they will not forget very soon.

They went to the Camera Club rooms in the Babcock Building about 8 to make a number of slides for some friends. It kept them busy till nearly 10 when they come down stairs to go home. On reaching the ground floor they discovered that the door was locked and neither one of them had a key.

The question of getting outside perplexed them very much. A hunt was made for the janitor but he had gone home, so they went to the second story front, found a window open and thought they would hail some one who might be passing. They did so, but most everyone laughed at them, not knowing the circumstances.

Constable Rockafellow's attention was attracted and he said he would find the janitor. After a long absence he returned but without the important personage.

After another long spell they saw Chief Doane and Second Assistant John Murray, Jr., on the opposite side of the street. They called to them and explained the situation. They happened to think there was a ladder in the rear of the building, and it was placed against the building, and the two prisoners were allowed to escape through the window and down the ladder, after two hours of impatient waiting. They are now looking for the janitor.

FAIR NOTES.

It is something unusual to make the sales of admission to the "National Festivities" so low. In most cities where they have been given the charge has been from $1 to $1.50; but here the rate has been made 25 and 50 cents. This is done to popularize the fair and enable everybody to see them all.

The man, or woman, who did n't go to the World's Fair, and is sorry for it now, should be careful and not repeat the mistake by staying away from "The Midway".

The New York city alderman who wanted to import a "pair" of gondolas for Central Park lake, will be able to secure one of the pair here after the fair. Perhaps this is a little previous. It may be that it has been secured for Tier's lake or South Plainfield.

Thanksgiving for the Poor.

The Relief Association intends giving the usual Thanksgiving dinner this year to its beneficiaries and the town poor. It is hoped that the many friends of the society will contribute generously, as is their custom, towards the supply, for the number to be helped is always a large one.

Contributors of money, vegetables and poultry may be sent to the Relief rooms, 303 West Second street, Tuesday, Nov. 27, and until noon Wednesday, Nov. 28.

If poultry be sent, chickens or turkeys not exceeding in weight 8 lbs are requested.

Secretary.

Potters Win.

A large crowd of friends of Potters and Scotts bowling teams were at the Arlington Hotel last evening, when the former defeated the latter as follows. The score:

"Nutty Flavor"

appeals to one's love of the flavor of nuts acquired in youth. We look for "nutty flavor" in best butter, but for real "nutty flavor" try a package of Hecker's Wheat Granules. Boil a third of it as directed and serve with milk or cream. It adds strength to bone and teeth, while delighting your palate. It is easily assimilated.

The Choral Society.

In order the better to smooth out some of the difficult passages in "The Messiah" the rehearsal on Monday next will be a divided one—the sopranos and altos meeting at 3:45 p.m. and the tenors and basses at 8 p m. It is hoped that there will be a full attendance, as these divided rehearsals are considered very important.

Plainfield Democrats are among the very best Democrats we know of. At the general election they nearly all vote the Republican ticket, and at their own local election they make no nominations.

TO KNOCK OUT PLAINFIELD

Wonderful Gamecocks Devised by Uncle Dan Hetfield and Bob Adrain.

Uncle Dan Hetfield, often called Old Hat, Rahway's famous sportsman and the best judge of gamecocks in Jersey, came over to the Horse Show last week. Among others he met there was ex-Senator Bob Adrain, who is now farming it over in East Brunswick. Naturally, when these men met and had talked horse awhile, Uncle Dan shifted the conversation to gamecocks. For the past two years the Senator and he have been experimenting on a strain, a cross between the Senator's Cubans and Old Hat's pyle muffs. Said the Senator:

"Dan, come up; I want to show you two wonderful cocks out of our cross. I never saw such game. Through their mother's fighting qualities, bred into her by you. They fought their daddy until one of them killed him".

"All right, Senator", said Dan, "I'll come up".

Thursday he went up to Brunswick, and when he returned to Rahway he brought home these two seven-month-old cocks. Yesterday he had a solitaire and set the two birds together with short spurs. The result surprised him. Said he last night:

"Darned if I ever saw such fighters. They fought all the morning. I had a job separating them. When I cooped them separately hang me if they did n't fight the sides of the coops. They fought like pheasants or sparrows until their heads looked like snapping turtles' heads. I'm going to fix them up with some of Sim Lambert's applejack, and I'll bet they'll knockout any Quaker Linden or Plainfield Blue Light Presbyterian in Union county."

Progress of the Trunk Trolley.

(From The Somerville Unionist-Gazette.)

After months of waiting the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company has at last secured the right of way to construct tracks through a portion of Bridgewater Township between Somerville and Bound Brook. Next week work will be begun on the line from Raritan to Bound Brook, a distance of five miles, at the rate of a mile a week. The company has the right of way the entire distance to New Brunswick, and the line will be continued to that city at once. Delay has been caused by the Bridgewater Township Committee.

The right of way has also been obtained on the main line from Bound Brook to Rocky Hill, and objections will soon be overcome all the way to Trenton. Surveys are being made on the route to Paterson, where it will connect for New York.

General Manager Gaddis says the work of construction will be pushed on the main line.

Socialist Meetings.

About one-hundred citizens assembled in Reform Hall last evening at the meeting of the Socialist party of this city.

John James presided and made a few remarks, after which he introduced the speaker of the evening, Charles Matchett of Brooklyn, who made an enthusiastic address on "Municipal Socialism". His remarks were deeply interesting, and considered bp those present to be the best speech ever heard.

Next Friday evening Louis Sernel of New York will address a meeting in the same place. Mr. Sernel at one time was the nominee for Governor of New York on the Socialist ticket.

An Attractive Programme at the Casino.

Tickets are now on sale for the coming recital of Miss Addie Parker Jackson, reader, and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist. Both these artists were warmly received in Plainfield at their respective recitals at the Casino last Spring, and announce their entertainment for December 13, in response to many requests for a repetition of a similar affair. Price of tickets seventy-five cents.

Youthful Wanderers.

(From The New Brunswick Home News.)

James and Joseph McCarty, orphan lads from Plainfield, walked yesterday to this city in search of work, having heard that a farmer named Knapp was in need of help. Upon inquiry, they were told they were too small for him, and as it was too late to return to their home, they were lodged and fed at the police station. They trudged off home this morning.

Court Nash.

The following cases are set down in Justice Nash's Court:

Dunlap against Vandeveer, landlord and tenant, returnable Dec. 3.

Schiff against Miller et als., on contract, returnable Dec. 3.

Hand against Moore, on contract, returnable Dec. 3.

Thanksgiving Dinner.

The beneficiaries of the Relief Association are requested to call at the rooms, 303 West Second street, Wednesday, Nov. 28, for the dinners to be given them for Thanksgiving.

SHUTTLECOCK TOURNEY.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS CONDUCT A NOVEL AFFAIR.

Prizes Won by Miss Edna Howell and Charles B. Morse—Pastor Goodrich Awards Certificates.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Congregational Church gave a social last evening, and, although the attendance was not very large owing to the stormy weather, those who were present pronounced it a great success. The entertainment provided was a novel one. It was called a shuttlecock tournament.

The members were divided into two division, each of which took a separate end of the church parlors. There two tennis rackets and a shuttlecock were provided, and each group or two players had half a minute in which to make as many consecutive returns as possible.

Everyone played some time during the evening with everybody else, and a prize was to be awarded to the two of the highest average. The prize for the highest feminine average was won by Miss Edna Howell, who averaged 19, and whose highest score was 38. The masculine prize was won by Charles B. Morse, with an average of 26, and whose best score was 53, the highest made during the evening. The prizes consisted of certificates, which were presented by Rev. C L Goodrich with appropriate remarks. Cake and lemonade were then served and while they were being enjoyed the two with the highest scores from each side played together to see who could make the highest record. Miss Scott and Chas B. Morse on one side kept the shuttlecock going for 52 consecutive times in the time required, while Miss Edna Howell and Rev. C. L. Goodrich, champions of the other side, only scored 27.

The evening's fun closed with a period of social conversation.

The Social Committee deserve great credit for the success of the sociable and if the coming ones are as good as the last two this will be by far the most successful year in the social history of the society.

BOY BADLY HURT.

George Greenleaf's Son Shot in the Breast.

This afternoon while playing with a flobert rifle near Grant avenue and Front street the 11-year-old son of George Greenleaf was shot.

The ball entered the breast, inflicting a dangerous wound.

Dr. Hedges attended him.

The lad's condition is critical.

Plainfielders Are Concerned in This.

Never since its foundation has the Industrial Christian Alliance been so urgently in need of funds as now. The same commercial and financial conditions which in the past eighteen months have more than trebled the burdens of the Alliance have seriously reduced its income from many sources, and in not a few instances have cut it off entirely. Therefore the Alliance, for the first time in its history, makes a public appeal for financial aid. Cheques of money may be sent to James E Ware, treasurer, 487 Fifth avenue, or to 170 Bleecker street, New York.

In two years and eleven months, ending Nov. 1, 1894, the Alliance gave 60,216 lodgings and 189,712 meals; and more than 1,200 men have been given a temporary home, temporary employment, clothing, and a patient Christian chance to permanently repair their wrecked lives. Situations have been found for nearly half of these, many of whom are now self-supporting men.

Good Roads in Jersey.

Edward Burroughs, the New Jersey State Commissioner of Public Roads, said yesterday that some additional legislation will be attempted in the interest of good roads, and that in the future good roads will be an important factor in politics.

One Year for Haulenbeck.

Frank Haulenbeck, the Plainfield junkman arrested for receiving stolen Central Railroad metal, was sentenced to one year in State Prison, by Judge McCormick this morning.

—D. Kane will sign next year with the Norristown baseball club.

—A grand colored concert will be given in the Arlington Hotel tonight. Frisbie will give his famous locomotive imitation, and a minstrel troupe will appear.

—A. H. Compton of West Front street while out gunning today discovered what are believed to be mastodonic bones. He brought them home for investigation.

SAVED FROM A LONG TERM.

George Shay Acquitted of a Most Serious Charge.

One of the most stubbornly contested criminal cases ever tried in Union County was completed last night after a two days trial. It was the case of the State against George Shay of Scotch Plains who was charged with the crime of rape. Craig A Marsh defended Shay on what was on all sides thought to be a forlorn hope. Three of the witnesses for the State had actually caught the defendant in flagrante delicto, and counsel did not dare to put Shay on the witness stand in his own defense. Nevertheless, the jury refused to convict the man of rape and found him guilty simply of assault. The successful defense of the greater crime was that the offense was not committed violently and against the will of the prosecutrix, and it was established chiefly by her cross-examination. The offense charged is punishable with fifteen years at hard labor in State Prison, whereas the maximum penalty for simple assault is two years and five hundred dollars.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Frank Linke is expected home from Europe today.

A son was born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. August Trust.

Miss Lillie Miller of West Third street is improving from her severe cold.

Mrs. Winfield Schomp has returned home after a visit in Three Bridges.

E. C. Mulford has been nominated by the Republicans as Commissioner of Appeal in place of Joseph B. Coward, who declined.

H. H. Brokaw of 30 Duer street has secured a responsible position with the Hastings Card Co. of Beekman street, New York city.

Mr. and Mrs Alvin E. Hosgland have returned from their wedding trip. An informal reception was enjoyed on their arrival, which was attended by only near friends and relatives.

William Muckay of this city, accompanied by John Rogers of Elizabeth and Frank Murray of New York city, started today for a four-days hunting trip to Red Bank, Monmouth county.

F. L. C. Martin was one of the guests present at the banquet given at Hotel St. Denis last evening in honor of Howard E Raymond, who goes to Chicago to take the vice-presidency of Sterling Cycle Works.

Captain C. P. Staubach and Third Lieutenant C. J. Dimick of the Manhattan Bicycle Club, New York city, stopped at Wheelmen's Headquarters this morning on their way to Philadelphia. They found the roads in fair condition.

A very enjoyable surprise party was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bodenheimer at their Green brook road residence, Wednesday evening. About 30 attended, and the evening was most profitably spent in dancing and the playing of games.

Among the many who have applied for positions with the new Republican County Clerk, is John J. Shotwell, son-in-law of Ex-Freeholder A. Vanderbeek of Plainfield, who is well qualified; and as Plainfield is entitled to at least a clerkship The Press hopes to see Mr. Shotwell's application granted.

Frederick Koechli, son of Rev. F. Koechli, of the Somerville German Church, formerly of Plainfield, died at St. Luke's Hospital in New York Wednesday night, aged 21 years. The funeral was held this afternoon from the German Church at 2:30. The young man had been ill for a long time with enlargement of the heart.

Miss Nellie L. Winckler, daughter of A. J. Winckler, 32 Park place, entertained a number of her friends last evening in honor of her birthday. The evening was spent in playing games, sleight of hand tricks and recitations. A number of very pretty gifts were received. Later in the evening bountiful refreshments were served. The guests were from New Brunswick, Metuchen, Dunellen and Plainfield.

—A large warming-pan filled with a fine supper was jolted out of the wagon of Caterer Max Wiertz last night, and restored by a U. S. expressman.

—The disappointed element of the Republican party is still considering plans for a citizens ticket to bear the nomination of J. A. Hubbard for assessor.

—The City Market Meat Company, corner of North and Park avenue, opposite the Daily Press office, are selling Jersey turkeys for 14 and 16 cents a pound.

—City Clerk MacMurray has received the acceptances of candidates Gilbert, Ginna, See, Moore, Fisk and MacDonald up to the hour of going to press. The other candidates have till Monday night to file their acceptances.

Late Autumn.

This is the season when the light of dreams
Around the year in golden glory lies,
And rarest ornaments of brightest beams,
And novel gifts that glad the people's eyes
Are seen at Collier's, where throughout the year
The best designs in jewelry appear.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

This year seems to be a great one for holidays as we have had almost one extra holiday during every week for some time, and next week we have two.

The quarterly examinations in both the Physics Classes have come and gone and now they are settling down to hard work again. The Zoology Class has been reviewing somewhat of late but after the examination of Friday they will go on with the advance work. The Astronomy Class has come to the most interesting part of its work, the study of the sun and argues on all of the puzzling questions in regard to it.

The Senior English Literature Class has commenced reading the Prologue to Chaucer's Canterbury Tales and is enjoying the oddities and strange phrases of the English.

The fire drill will be next tried when no one expects it and may be looked for any day.

Kappa Delta Phi held its regular meeting yesterday afternoon and the mock trial, provided for the occasion, was carried out with great success. Owing to a misunderstanding a number of the young women understood that it was to be public and were in consequence sadly disappointed at finding that no visitors were allowed. The reason for this was that it was only an experiment to see if a mock trial could be carried out with success in the society before a public one was attempted. John V. Beekman, Jr., '95, acted as judge and George A. Horne as clerk. The charge was against a member of the society for not shoveling the show off his sidewalk on Nov. 9. Arthur B. Crane '97, acted as counsel for the defence, and F. Wilbur Cornwell '96, as prosecuting attorney. The witnesses for the prosecution were Lewis H. Rand '96, Ernest Rapalje '97, and Edgar I. Serrell '95. Those for the defence were Charles Noble '96, Charles B. Morse '95, and J. Hazlewood Craig '96. After lengthy and varied testimony, Judge Beekman decided that the prisoner was guilty and, as punishment, he was ordered to keep the four sides of the block on which he lived free from snow for the rest of the Winter.

Ernest Rapalje '97, was elected president and F. Wilbur Cornwell '96, was made vice-president to fill the place of Rapalje, resigned.

After a lengthy discussion, orange and white were chosen for Kappa Delta Phi colors.

There were several amendments to the constitution proposed, relating principally to the programme committee. F. Wilbur Cornwell '96, was appointed to act as that committee until the amendments shall be decided.

The regular meeting of the Lyceum was held yesterday afternoon. The programme was dispensed with and the business session commenced at once. It was decided to hold an anniversary meeting on December 7, to which everyone should be invited.

In basket-ball practice in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, yesterday afternoon, the High School second team defeated the North Plainfield School team by the score of 13 to 9.

The first and second teams of the High School will meet for final practice Monday afternoon. No one except the players will be admitted. The first game will be played on Tuesday evening between the High School first and scrubs, an exciting game may be looked for as the scrubs put a very strong game.

NINETY-FIVE.

NORTH PLAINFIELD SCHOOL NOTES.

A very enjoyable and instructive exercise was held in the Junior Class yesterday afternoon. It consisted of quotations from well-known authors among whom were the following: J. C. Hare, W. L. Chittendon, Nathaniel Hawthorne, George Eliot, F. T. Munger, Charles Kingsley, Frank R. Stockton and George William Curtis. There was also a two-minute talk by each of the pupils in the Senior Class on any subject that they should choose. This has been a custom of the Senior Class for the last few years and forms an entertaining and amusing exercise besides being very instructive.

An examination in arithmetic occurred in all the classes last Thursday.

The North Plainfield basket-ball team played their first practice game in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium yesterday afternoon. The team that will contest with the High School team next Saturday evening will consist of the following players: Centre, Will Jeffrey; right wing, Everett Peck; left wing, Robert Turril; right guard, Maxwell Honeyman; left guard, Louis Hummer; right forward, Will Buell; left forward, Herbert Moore.

Mr. Ira P. Wetmore, a prominent real estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in his family for several years as occasion required, and always with perfect success. He says: "I find it a perfect cure for our baby when troubled with colic or dysentery. I now feel that my outfit is not complete without a bottle of this Remedy at home or on a trip away from home. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A THANKSGIVING COMPROMISE.

BY LAURA OLIVIA BOOTHE.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

The day after her arrival home Mrs. Bright put this advertisement in The Herald:

"Wanted—To sell out immediately for cash a first class boarding house, fully furnished, on Thirty-eighth street, near Fifth avenue; full of boarders. Apply to G. B., Herald office."

Within a week she notified the boarders she had sold out. She confided her plans to no one when she moved away with enough furniture to furnish an apartment.

Mrs. Bright now took up an unusual mode of life. People passing her doors heard her declaiming. She went every day to a school of dramatic instruction. It soon became known that the pretty young woman with big blue eyes and black hair in the top apartment was studying for the stage.

A new play was to be put on at one of the theaters when an actress who was to play an important part was taken ill. The manager was distracted. In his perplexity he applied to a dramatic school for a substitute. There was a matinee by the pupils that afternoon, and he went in. A young woman on the stage attracted his attention. Turning to the instructor, he asked if she were a professional or a pupil.

"I AM GOING TO THE THEATER NOW."

"A pupil and one of the best in the school," the instructor replied.

The manager adjusted his glasses, looking at the young woman more critically. "By Jove, what a voice she's got! She can act, too the first amateur I ever saw who could."

* * * * * * *

The morning after the matinee Mrs. Bright was sitting in her drawing room staring out over the house tops. She looked displeased. A letter lay open on her lap. "He is getting on very well without me," she thought sadly as she read it again.

There was a ring, and the servant announced a gentleman whom Mrs. Bright recognized as a theatrical manager. Wondering the object of his visit, she offered him a chair. Speedily he told her of his presence at the matinee the day before. "I have come to offer you a position in my company if we can come to satisfactory terms and if you care to accept," he said.

She was bewildered. "It is so sudden," she stammered.

"Take until tomorrow to think it over," he suggested.

"That is not necessary. I accept now."

* * * * * * *

Mrs. Bright had become an actress. Her success from the first night was assured, and the manager congratulated himself upon this latest acquisition to his company. She felt that now the time had come to tell her husband what she had done.

"You did not want me to keep boarders, so I have sold out the boarding house," she wrote. "I did this some time ago and took a small apartment. I would have been very unhappy and lonely without you, only I have been studying very hard. You will no doubt be amazed to learn that I have been studying for the stage, but more amazed to learn that for the past month I have been a member of ——'s company.

"I am sure you will be delighted to have us members of the same profession. After all, husband and wife must have the same interests to be happy. I don't wonder you like it. I am quite infatuated with it myself. Always your devoted Gertrude.

"P. S.—I am off to the theater now, so pardon brevity. G."

Mr. Bright received this letter one morning on his arrival at the theater.

That afternoon found him in a sleeper bound east; the next afternoon in his wife's apartment. She was glad to see him, but deaf to his entreaties to give up what he termed her disgraceful project.

"Think of your child, madam!" he finally roared.

"She is your child as well as mine, sir. Certainly if the theatrical profession is good enough for her father it is quite good enough for her mother."

They ate their dinner in silence. She was absorbed in reading an evening paper and he in watching her. She was dressed in a "chic" and becoming style, and he thought he had never seen her so charming before. "At least she was his wife," with a glad feeling of possession. A spasm contracted his heart. "On the stage what temptations would beset her!" With a fierce resolve he thought, "I must get her off at any price."

"I am going to the theater now," she remarked.

"It is rather early for you to go."

"I suppose you want to see the performance, to say nothing of seeing me act." There was a twinkle in her eye and a touch of compassion, for she divined what he felt.

"I will go with you," he answered grumpily.

He was obliged to leave her at the stage door. It was three-quarters of an hour before the performance began, and he started for a walk.

In no pleasant frame of mind he entered the theater and glared at the programme as he read his wife's name.

The orchestra stopped, and the curtain went up. It was a charming play, beautifully mounted and well acted. The opening act took place in a garden scene. Mrs. Bright entered dressed in a costume of white and a large white hat. She said little, but was perfectly at ease on the stage. The more Mr. Bright realized this the more apprehensive he became.

The play progressed. The next scene was a ballroom. In it Mrs. Bright was simply radiant. She had been almost prudish in the old days, but now her beautiful shoulders were exposed to an extent which her husband denounced as vulgarly indecent. A betrothal between the handsome leading man and Mrs. Bright was sealed with a kiss.

This was too much. Heartsick, he looked at his wife in the arms of the leading man, shamelessly nestling her head on his shoulder with a movement he had seen her make a thousand times.

He rushed out of the theater and back to the stage door, where he awaited the appearance of Mrs. Bright.

Several days passed, and Mr. Bright made no move to return to the Gaiety company. At the end of a week he received a telegram from the manager of the company stating that unless he returned at once they must get some one else.

That decided him, and with the telegram in his hand he confronted his wife. "Gertrude, do you intend to keep this up?" he demanded roughly.

"Keep what up?"

"Keep on acting?"

"Why shouldn't I?"

"Because I don't want you to—because it is driving me mad to think of my wife on the stage. Where is your sweet domestic character? You used to love your home. Oh, Gertrude, it is impossible for me to consent! I cannot, and I will not!"

"Theatrical seasons end about the same time. I shall always try to be home when you are."

"It isn't that. It is death to our domestic happiness. I know it, and"—

"That is what I always told you. What sort of domestic happiness did we have before I went on the stage? Ah, no, George, there is but one thing for us to do—either we must both have nothing to do with the stage, or else we both must belong to it."

"Read that," thrusting the telegram in her hands.

"How funny!" she muttered dreamily.

"What's funny?"

"Why, tonight is Thanksgiving eve, and it is just a year since you received that first telegram. I suppose you will go tomorrow, too!" looking at him earnestly.

"If I send them word to get some one else, will you give it up?" eagerly.

"Well, I rather like the life now, there is so much excitement."

"Oh, Gertrude, don't torture me!"

"When will you give it up?" she persisted.

"At once."

With the identical gesture she had made with the leading man, she buried her face on his sho

"Then is a bargain, sweetheart?" he asked anxiously.

"No, George, not a bargain, but a Thanksgiving compromise. I agree to give up acting just as long as you give up managing, but"—

There was no but, for he closed her mouth with a kiss.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 25. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Thanksgiving and thanks living.—Eph. v, 15-20.

With each recurring Thanksgiving season there are several reasons for giving thanks unto God for His blessings naturally, ecclesiastically and individually. This has been true in the past year. The blessing of God has been upon the nation. It is true that there have been adversity and depression and calamities and the withholding of the rains from heaven, and yet God has blessed us abundantly. With all these things there has been plenty and to spare, and already we can see the clouds of adversity and depression passing away and in their places the signs and evidences of increased national prosperity. God has blessed us as a nation, and there is cause for national thanksgiving. The same providential hand has ministered with the richest blessings to the church of Jesus Christ in the world. It has been a most prosperous year in all religious denominations. Financial failures and disasters seem to drive the thoughts of men to those heavenly treasures that cannot be stolen by thieves or destroyed by anything in the world. The spirit of God has been poured out upon His churches. There have been increased interest and zeal. There have been added to the church many of such as shall be saved. There is therefore great cause of thanksgiving from a church standpoint. Is it not true also of our individual lives? Though we may have had trials and adversities perhaps, has not God blessed us? Can we not even in these very adversities seek the loving hand of God? And have we not, therefore, cause to thank God? Let us then obey the injunction of the apostle and give thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

But in a true expression of our gratitude to God there is something more than mere thanksgiving. That is expressed in the latter part of the topic—thanks living. We are to show by our lives that we are thankful to God for his mercies. Paul points this out to the Ephesians, for before calling upon them for thanksgiving he appeals to them to live their thanks, to do the will of God. Thanksgiving may appropriately follow thanks living, but unless we live our thanks the giving of thanks amounts to nothing. Let us then recall the blessings of God. Let us think much upon them. Let us in return do the will of God, and thus can we prepare the way for giving thanks unto Him for all things in Jesus Christ, our Lord.

What Boys Should Know.

Six things a boy ought to know:

That a quiet voice, courtesy and kind acts are as essential to the part in the world of a gentleman as a gentlewoman.

That roughness, blustering and even foolhardiness are not manliness. The most firm and courageous men have usually been the most gentle.

That muscular strength is not health.

That a brain crammed only with facts is not necessarily a wise one.

That the labor impossible to the boy of 14 will be easy to the man of 20.

The best capital for a boy is not money, but love of work, simple tastes and a heart loyal to his friends and his God. —Selected.

An Australian Endeavor Society.

The fourth annual report of the Christian Endeavor society in the Yarra Street Wesleyan church of Geelong, Australia, presents a picture of an exceedingly vigorous organization. We can give only a few glimpses. Here is a summary of the year's work: 442 members, 86 increase for the year, 44 associates became actives, 7,747 visits made, 2,903 sprays and baskets of flowers taken, 503 meetings carried out, 21,850 people were present, 228 temperance pledges taken, $830 collected.—Golden Rule.

To Boston In 1895.

At the Montreal convention in 1893 the board of trustees unanimously voted to send the convention of 1895 to San Francisco, provided a reasonable railroad rate should be guaranteed on or before the time for holding the Cleveland convention.

The Western Passenger association having failed to quote a reasonable rate in advance, the committee for 1895 has decided to accept Boston's invitation, and the convention will be held in that city next year.

Australian Methodists Favor Endeavor.

The Wesleyan Methodist church of Australia, whose membership is nearly 500,000, took strong ground favoring Christian Endeavor at its last general conference held at Adelaide, South Australia. They passed a resolution commending the Christian Endeavor movement to the church and particularly to their own young people.

Blameless.

Earnestly toiled a weaver
At a task the master had set.
'Twas a pattern of matchless splendor
Whose likeness he sought to get.

And though with skillful fingers
He threw the shuttles bright,
His work lacked the wondrous beauty
Of the pattern he had in sight.

And, despairing, in his earnest strivings,
To attain the pattern rare,
He wove from his own heart promptings
A fabric for the master fair.

And the master, when he viewed it,
Saw much that marred its grace,
Because 'twas the weaver's ideal
He had wrought in the master's place.

But he said: "Dear heart, thy fabric,
Though imperfect, I do approve.
Though faulty, thou yet art blameless,
Since for me was thy labor of love."

And so, dear fellow Endeavorer,
Take this lesson of hope to your breast—
Each effort to serve your Saviour
By Him will be surely blessed.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular produces, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

PRACTICAL DRESS IS, AFTER ALL, THE BEST GUIDE.

But Few Regard It, and Fancy Seems Rampant in Designing New Gowns and Textures for the Frivolous Sex. Sleeves Approach the Skirt.

Never before in the history of fashion has there been such a variety in the little accessories of dress. Just at present the stores are literally filled with collars, capes, berthas, ruffs and fichus of every imaginable description, and they seem to be there for the sole purpose of filling up the space vacated by the irrepressible shirt waist, but they decorate it with an air of elegance which their predecessor could never assume. Tuck bands of ribbon, lace, chiffon, and spangled net in all colors are swallowed up in large rosettes and outstanding bows, but here they are made up in the latest approved fashion, ready to fasten around the neck.

Collarettes and movable berthas of the same variety of materials are in all shapes and sizes, and as plenty and pretty as fancy can picture. These are made for both high and low necked dresses, and are very convenient to give a dressy appearance to one gown and take away a little of the too dressy look of the other.

Waists seem to be the only article of dress worth mentioning. Skirts are of black, or any dark shade of colored silk, and very modest as to trimming, but there is a variety in waists which cannot be overlooked. The one way to vary your costume is in the possession of as many fancy fabrics as your purse will admit, and the lighter they are in color and texture the more effective and up to date they will be at the theatre. Pale blue, pink, and creamy white chiffon waists are almost as numerous as the women, and light silks, velvets, and creamy lace occupy all the spaces which chiffon does not fill.

One dainty blue chiffon waist has a narrow yoke of creamy lace, both back and front, over the full chiffon, which overhangs the belt a trifle in front, and on either side of which is a band of blue satin ribbon extending from the belt to the yoke, where the bands end in satin rosettes at the side, and the belt is of ribbon. Directly behind this dainty confection is a gray-green crepon bodice with a glowing red velvet collar and bands running out from the neck to form a yoke. Large red rosettes catch up the puffed sleeves. All this is surmounted by a huge gray-green hat trimmed with a succession of windmill bows reaching out in every direction from the crown.

Perforated materials are one of the novelties of the season, and whether they are taking or not remains to be seen later on, when the winter fashions are fairly launched. Crinkled materials of the crepon order are gaining in popularity, and all sorts of corrugated surfaces are coming in to swell the variety. A pretty navy-blue crepon, with wavy lines of black through it, is made with a bolero jacket effect in front, which commences at the shoulder and points to the waist, being quite short under the arms. This is covered with guipure lace. Where the jacket begins, which is on a line with a yoke, is a rosette of black satin ribbon, with ends extending up on to the shoulder.—N. Y. Sun

'FRISCO'S DRESS REFORMERS.

When it Rains Fifty Women Will Dress to Suit the Weather.

Wet weather is somewhat of a rarity in San Francisco and as a consequence it may be some time before the inhabitants of that city shall be treated to a sensation planned by Mme. Le Vanway. This leader of the mode has secured the promises af fifty women of San Francisco to wear a reform costume she has invented whenever the weather is such as to make long skirts in their opinion an impossibility. The details of the new costume as given by the Examiner are, first a cutaway jacket very much like the outing jacket, a waistcoat, a pair of trou-bloomers reaching to the knee, a short, scant skirt, and a pair of rubber leggings. The material is a soft dark wool.

The minor details of the suit calls of course, for a cap of some sort or Alpine hat if preferred, a pair of sandal rubbers if the boots are at all thin; these with collars and cuffs complete the outfit. The jacket is half long and reaches below the hips. It has revers of the same cloth, satin lined, and stiffened cuffs like the wrists of gauntlets. There are two "really truly" pockets in the sides, and the front opens without any sign of fastening over the waistcoat. The waistcoat is thoroughly mannish. There is a satin back and a pair of straps and buckles to gird it in if needed, and from the underarm seams to the front buttons it is made of cloth. There are two rows of buttons, gilt in this particular case, that show the double-breasted effect, and two small pockets for change and a watch. It is cut quite low and has rolling revers of its own. The skirt is made in large plaits, the front being left smooth and gored, and the exact length in inches can be regulated in individual cases and according to taste. The dress that is finished reaches to about even with the calf of the leg and has a deep turn-in hem. Under the skirt is worn the fourth cloth piece of the costume—a pair of very full bloomers, with rubber bands run in at the waist and around the knee. The whole dress is as light as a feather.

THE WINTER COAT.

It is of Various Shapes and Patterns, Colors and Materials.

The winter coat is either very long or very short. The sleeves of gowns are so large and the waists so profusely trimmed that it seemed for a while as though capes would win popular favor, and they will in all probability, for a time, but when the real cold, frosty, days come then the only garment desirable is a coat that buttons up around the figure and does not allow the wind to penetrate in pneumonia-producing draughts.

Many of the tan coats are very pretty. One turned over collar of a deeper shade of tan velvet, and the entire velvet was covered with a lighter shade of tan cloth applique. It had large white buttons, was lined satin, and was as jaunty a garment as one could see in a tour of the shops.

A long, black coat reaches to the knees and is perfectly plain, it's only adornment being two rows of white buttons. These buttons are used on so many of the coats the effect of the white against the dark colors is a bit startling, but it seems the popular fancy, so the dark bone button is entirely discarded.

Cost of Railroad Cars.

An ordinary flat car costs to build about $380; a flat bottom coal car costs $475; a gondola drop bottom coal car, $525; a double bottom hopper coke car, $540; a box car, $600; a stock car, $550; a ventilated fruit car, $700; a refrigerator car, $800; a four wheeled caboose, $550, and an eight wheeled caboose, $700; a fifty foot mail and baggage car, $3,500; a second class passenger coach, $4,800; a first class coach, $5,500, and a first class Pullman car costs $15,000.

ASK THEM Why?

Ask the men who are making imitations of COTTOLENE, the new vegetable shortening, why they give up lard and try to trade on the merits of COTTOLENE? Perhaps you can guess why.

ASK HIM WHY?

Ask the grocer who attempts substitution, why he tries to sell an imitation when people call for that pure, palatable and popular vegetable shortening, COTTOLENE? Perhaps you can guess.

ASK YOURSELF Why?

Why should not YOU use COTTOLENE, instead of lard or any other compound, for all cooking purposes? It has the highest possible endorsement; from Physicians as to healthfulness; from Cooking Experts as to superiority; from housekeepers as to economy. Use COTTOLENE and stick to it.

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or fadded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

Ask for our little booklet "Re-Freshing Thoughts." It tells about cleaning men's clothing.

TRADE OUTLOOK HOPEFUL.

Bradstreet's Report Shows a General Improvement.

New York, Nov. 24.—Bradstreet's trade report says: All the larger eastern cities except Baffalo report general trade quiet or of a hand-to-mouth description, but in most instances the outlook is encouraging. This characterizes Boston and Philadelphia, where drygoods jobbers alone report special activity, Pittsburg and Baltimore.

At Buffalo an increased grain movement incident to the close of navigation has stimulated demand for funds and in other lines.

Only a fair business is reported from Cleveland and moderate gains in a few lines at Cincinnati and Detroit, the general business situation at Louisville being quiet, except the request for finished iron. Chicago reports the volume of trade maintained beyond expectations and an improved inquery for bar iron and steel. The like is true at St. Louis, where the demand for sheet iron and relatively prompt collections are specified. Kansas City, Des Moines and Omaha report a fair increase in the demand for dry goods and groceries, clothing and shoes, but collections are not as prompt as at some other points. Thre is only a moderate volume of business at Milwaukee, but collections are better. At St. Paul there is an increase in demand for holiday goods and seasonable staples, but at Duluth the end of the season of lake navigation has tended rather to check activity. At Minneapolis business is quiet, except for Christmas goods and in manufacturing flour.

There is only a moderate volume of business reported from any southern city, and at none of them is there an increase compared with recent weeks. Charleston merchants are not pushing collections. Jobbers at Nashville and Memphis report the situation unchanged, and similar advices are received from Savannah, except as to groceries, for which the demand has increased. Increase of travel has tended to benefit Jacksonville.

LOAN OFFICERS ARRESTED.

A President and Vice-President Charged with Fraud.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 24.—Seven of the officers and employes of the Fidelity Building, Loan and Investment association also known as the Columbia Building, Loan and Investment fassocation (national) of Washington, with offices in this city, were arrested on a charge of conspiracy to cheat and defraud.

The prisoners are Harrison Dingman of Washington, president; Andrew Wall of Washington, vice-president, and five local employes.

They were all taken to central station, where they were held under $1,000 bail each. Emma Snyder, a colored woman from Allegheney, is the prosecutor. She went to the office yesterday to draw her money and was refused.

UNDER A DEATH TREE.

A Series of Fatalities That Caused James Blauvelt's Suicide.

Olean, N. Y., Nov. 24.—After eating a hearty breakfast, James Blauvelt, a well-to-do farmer living near Sharon Centre, Pa., went out under a tree and shot himself through the heart.

Last year, under the same tree he accidentally killed his three year old son by running over him with a mowing machine. A few years before that he accidentally killed his brother under the identical tree.

These two accidents together with the loss of his wife who died last week, leaving a family of nine children, was more than the old man could stand.

RETAINED HIS SECRET.

Dr. Bart Barclay Expelled from a Society for Secrecy.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 24.—William F. Barclay, M. D., one of the best known medical men in Washington, Pa., has been expelled from the Alleghany Medical society.

The expulsion resulted from the discovery by Dr. Barclay of a solution of gold in arsenic. The secret of manufacturing the solution was obtained after many years of experiment and study.

It was alleged that Dr. Barclay had violated the code of medica ethics.

More Suits Against Carlisle.

Washington, Nov. 24.—Three suits to recover sugar bounty, denied by Secretary Carlisle, have been filed in the United States court of claims by J. A. Murray of New York, attorney on behalf of the Chino Valley Beet Sugar company of New Jersey for $43,121.34; the Norfork Beet Sugar company of New Jersey for $3,093.56, and the Oxnard Beet Sugar company for $11,792.50.

More Earthquakes in Italy.

Rome, Nov. 24.—The earthquakes and rumblings continue in the district round Milazzo. The panic has not abated and the houses remain unoccupied. The scenes in the affected districts are distressing and ghastly. Many of the injured are horribly mutilated. Graves have been upheaved in the Milazzo cemetry. Fifty thousand persons are homeless and destitute.

Mrs. Keefe and Son Under Bail.

Dedham, Mass., Nov. 24.—James F. Keefe and mother, Mrs. Rhoda V. Keefe of Hyde Park, were held by trial Justice Wakefield in $10,000 bail each, charged with assault with intent to murder police officer Andrew D. Rooney and trial justice Henry B. Terry.

Horses and Cars Burned.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 24.—Fire broke out in the barns of the Allegheney Traction company. Forty-nine horses, seven horse cars, and seven electric cars were burned. Three dwellings adjoining the barns were also destroyed. The entire loss is about $175,000.

Four Months for an Agent.

Auburn, N. Y., Nov. 24.—In United States court, Farrar, the Rochester pension agent, who had been convicted of irregularities, was sentenced to Monroe penitentiary for four months.

District Attorney Wellman Out.

New York, Nov. 24.—Francis L. Wellman has handed in his resignation as an assistant district attorney to Col. Fellows. It was he who convicted Carlisle Harris.

Cordage Mills Will Close.

Boston, Nov. 24.—The Pearson Cordage company on Dec. 1, will close one-half of its mill. This will deprive more than 300 hands of employment.

MRS. IDA CASLER.

Her Advice to Over-Ambitious Women.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Mrs. Ida Casler, of 126 Olive Street, Syracuse, N.Y., believes that there is no amount of money large enough to equal a good, sound, healthy constitution.

Here is a history of her case:—

She was so ill with falling of the womb and leucorrhœa that she could not stand. She was attended by several doctors without benefit, and was completely discouraged.

One evening she heard what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other women, and decided to try it, together with Mrs. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and it is well she did, for she says:—

"I am now well and strong. I am not troubled with either trouble, and all owing to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"If more women would use the Compound there would be less suffering in the world. Many women bring on their troubles by over-work. Remember good health will outbid riches every time."

GRANDEST OF MEDICINES.

The Long List of Cures by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy Grows and Broadens Every Day. Miss Jessie McVey Tells Her Wonderful Cure.

MISS JESSIE McVEY.

The horrors and frightful sufferings experienced from nervousness and nervous complaints are too terrible to be expressed in words. Nothing can describe the agony which fills the mind of such persons. They have lost control of their nerves, and with it have gone the strength, power and vigor of the system. Well may their cheeks blanch, and well may they tremble for their lives and reason. Every strain on those weakened nerves; every hour that glides silently by is a step toward insanity' paralysis or the grave. An unheeded opportunity for cure, and then brain exhaustion, nervous prostration or death.

One of the greatest of these sufferers was the well-known Miss Jessie McVey, residing at Irvington, Ind. She found a treasure of priceless value in the only positive cure, the only sure saver of health. Read her own description of her horrible suffering and wonderful cure.

"I had always been rather robust and well," she said, "until the last two or three years, when it so happened that I overtaxed my strength in trying to do too much work. I had a spell of nervous prostration, and was so weak all the time I could scarcely get around.

"I have always been troubled with rheumatism more or less for a long time, which grew worse after my nerves became weak. Of a morning I would feel more tired than when I went to bed, and on going up stairs I would give clear out by the time I reached the top, and my heart would flutter and feel as though it was up it my throat.

"My head also troubled me a great deal. My face would flush up in a moment, and my eyes would burn and hurt, and my head would feel as though it would burst; at the same time my feet and hands would be cold. I was also troubled with catarrh for several years.

"I got medicine from several doctors, but it seemed as though it helped me some at the first, but in a little while I would feel as bad, if not worse than ever. I began to be discouraged, when I saw an advertisement of how Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy helped others who were worse than I was, and I concluded to give it a trial. Before taking half a bottle I began to feel better. I din not feel so tired and nervous. My head felt better, and my appetite improved.

"I have taken three bottles and keep on improving. I think this wonderful medicine cannot be praised highly enough, for it makes the weak strong, and the old feel young again."

Millions of men and women are suffering just as Miss McVey did. They are nervous, tired out and run down. They have lost their snap and energy, and work or pleasure becomes an effort. There is a tetrible and deadly danger lurking behind that nervousness, and many people fail to heed it until too late. They can all be permanently cured by that wonderful medicine Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Why waste time in trying uncertain and untried remedies when here is a physician's prescription a discovery made by Dr. Greene of 35 West 14th St., New York City, the greatest living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. If you take this medicine, you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's direct professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case, freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that this remedy will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

ANOTHER BIG VICTORY

Port Arthur Falls After a Terrific Fight.

Japan Captures China's Great Stronghold After Thirty-six Hours of Hard Fighting—Terrible Losses on Both Sides Reported—Pekin at the Mercy of the Invaders.

Chee Foo, Nov. 24.—Port Arthur has fallen! The backbone of Chinese resistance has given away and the mountain passes that lie between the great naval station and Pekin now shelter the remnants of the emporer's forces.

Word has just reached here that Port Arthur fell after a battle that lasted eighteen hours. The reports of the fighting are very meager, but it is believed that both sides suffered heavily.

China's loss, it is said, exceeds that of Japan, for, undisiplined as the emperor's soldiers were, they fought with the desperation of tigers. The attack on Port Arthur by Japan's second army under General Oyama was so carefully planned that when fire was opened the Japanese troops assailed the city at every point.

The fighting was terrible, and was only ended when the Chinese, unable to struggle any longer, withdrew in retreat to the mountain passes near by, leaving the city at the mercy of their foes.

The fall of Port Arthur clears the way to Pekin for Japan. Whether or not that city will suffer a like fate must depend upon what action China will take within a very few days.

Yokohama, Nov. 24.—The minister of fianance has announced a further war loan of 50,000,000 yen (a gold yen is valued at 99.7cents; silver, 74.5) in fives, making 80,000,000 yen of the 100,000,000 authorized by parliment to be raised for war purposes.

The third army has left Ujina on forty transports. Its destination is not known, but it is rumored that it is intended to operate in the Yang-Tse-Kiang district of China, in which is situated Nankin, one of the most important cities of the empire.

Hiroshima, Nov. 24.—A steamer which has arrived here from Moji reports that no assault had been made upon Port Arthur up to November. 19.

Two interpreters and one war correspondent who were following the second Japanese army have been captured and killed by the Chinese.

London, Nov. 24.— The English newspapers attach great importance to the mission of Detering, the commissioner of imperial customs at Tien-Tsin, who has left China for Japan in order, it is said, to arrange terms of peace.

The Globe commenting on Detering's departure says that it confirms the reported rejection of the mediation of the United States. It says that this was the course to be expected "in spite of the Washington reports that negotiations would be conducted by the American minister at Tokio."

The Daily News, referring to the same subject, says:

"The peace commissioner was not sent a moment too soon. But he can hardly hope to reach Japan before the Japanese forces close upon Port Arthur for the last decisive struggle.

The rumors which have reached here from Washington to the effect that Great Britan is supporting or cooperating with the United States in the attempt to mediate between China and Japan are declared in official circles here to be altogether incorrect.

The United States government is understood to have acted entirely upon its own initiative and with complete independence of the powers. The foreign office is not displeased to see the United States fail after Great Briton's snubbing in a similar attempt.

The present attitude of England is one of inaction. She is awaiting devolopments, especially as advices have been received from Japan which show that she is not likely to listen to any peace overtures at present, and is prepared to carry on a winter campaign.

A dispatch from Tien-Tsin published here this morning says that four attacks have been made upon Port Arthur by Japanese troops, who were repulsed.

Washington, Nov. 24.—The cable advices stating that British officials are pleased with the rebuff sustained by the United States in Japan's rejection of mediation, cause amusement among the officers and diplomats here, who are familiar with the facts.

While the British version that the United States acted alone in its offer, and without the cooperation of Great Britain, is literally true, yet it is also known that the British government, for trade or commercial, reasons heartily desired the success of the movement, as it was feared a continuance of the war might effect British commercial interests in the East disastrously.

Another indication that the United States government has not been snubbed is the suggestion that Japan would receive overtures from China through Minister Dun, and the authorizations sent by Secretary Gresham to the United States ministers to act as intermediaries.

The latest phase of the controversy, the reported departure of China's minister of customs for Japan to arrange terms of peace, further assures officials here that China has embraced the peace policy along the lines openly proposed by the United States and covertly desired by Great Britain.

CLOSED THEIR DEBATE

End of the Union Methodist Meeting at Buffalo.

Addresses Were Delivered by Many Prominent Clergymen on the Good Work Done by the National Evangelization Union All Over the World—Officers Elected.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Despite the rain the session of the National Evangelization union was well attended. An interesting address was delivered by the Rev. W. G. Taylor, of New South Wales, who spoke on "The Forward Movement in Australia", and especially in Sydney. In Sydney, the speaker said, the efforts on the Methodist Evangelists had been eminently successful. The most hopeless cases had been reclaimed and men steeped in debauchery made vigorous workers. The women of Australia have enlisted in evangelical work and are doing nobly. Organizations of deaconesses have been formed everywhere and they are accomplishing much good.

B. E. Bull, Esq., of the "Fred Victor Mission" of Toronto, spoke on the mission work in that city. The Rev. W. F. Sheider, superintendent of the Detroit union, told what he saw of the forward movement in England and gave an encouraging account of the movement in Detroit, and the Rev. Levi Gilbert of Cleveland described the evangelical work in the Forest City and gave his opinion of what Christian work should be.

Rev. E. O. Fisk read a paper on "Mission Work among the Italians in Boston", and Rev. W. H. Beach, of Jersey City, spoke on general religious work and methods of evangelization.

At the later session the committee on resolutions introduced a red rag in the convention in the shape of a resolution favoring the establishment of an official organ of the union and authorizing the executive committee to secure an editor. Dr. Smith of Pittsburg, editor of the Christian Advocate of that city, said the policy of a national organ was one of suppression instead of publication of news as the matter should be published in existing church organs representing a very large subscription list, instead of little papers that had or could get from a few hundred to one thousand subscribers.

"We are organizing things to death" said he. "Pretty soon we will be all organization and no church. I give you my conviction that you'll do far better work if you will let this organizing business alone".

Dr. Smith stood almost alone in this view, however. The motion in favor of the project was carried. The following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, H. Samson, Pittsburg; first vice-president, Dr. J. E. James, Philadelphia; second vice-president, George E. Atwood, Boston; third vice president, J. B. Hoobbs, Chicago; corresponding secretary, Horace Benton, Cleveland; recording secretary, J. R. Clark; treasurer, Rev. D. H. Carroll, Baltimore.

The convention then adjourned.

INSANE AND AT LIBERTY.

Miss Miunie Blodgett Being Searched for by Two Hundred Men.

Amherst, Mass., Nov. 24.—Minnie Blodgett, aged 23 years, a daughter of G. W. Blodgett, a prominent merchant of this place, wandered away from home in a fit of insanity and has not yet been found.

She has had frequent attacks of insanity, but within a few days has shown no symptons of the trouble. As soon as she was missed, a search party started out and was reinforced early in the evening by another croud, making fully 200, including townspeople and students.

No trace of the missing girl was discovered, but it was reported that she was seen near the Agricultural college, three miles from the region searched. A party is scouring the country.

Miss Blodgett has previously attempted suicide, and it is feared that she is now seeking self-destruction.

Coal Magnates Meet.

Philadelphia, Nov. 24.—The Anthracite coal trade was the subject of lengthy conference at the Reading Terminal between the following railway magnates: President George B. Roberts, of the Pennsylvania Railroad company; President Joseph S. Harris, of the Reading Railroad company; President Elisha P. Wilbur, of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company, and President J. Rogers Maxwell, of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. The conference was called for the sole purpose of devising some means of bringing about an amicable settlement of the troubles in the trade.

Knights of Labor Adjourn.

New Orleans, Nov. 24.—The general assembly Knights of Labor has adjourned. The next convention will be held in Washington in November of next year. Previous to final adjournment, Mr. Sovereign, moved that the salary of the general master workmen be reduced from $3,500 to 2,500 per annum. The motion was carried.

RAPIDLY BREAKING DOWN

MRS. S. BATES TELLS THE STORY OF HER SUFFERINGS.

How She Was Cured By Munyon's Little Pellets After Physicians Had Failed.

Mrs. S. Bates, of Cecil, N. J., adds her testimony to that of the thousands who have been saved from a life of suffering by Munyon's Remedies. She said: "I had suffered greatly with indigestion and stomach trouble. Everything I ate distressed me, I was nervous and fretful and rapidly breaking down. Physicians had failed to help me, nor did any of the many remedies I took relieve me until I began using Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. The result was astonishing. After taking but three doses I felt greatly improved, and after taking one 25c. bottle I was entirely cured."

Munyon's Stomach and Dyspepsia Cure cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

BIG DEMAND FOR BONDS

Bankers Struggle for the New Issue.

Indications Point to an Offer of a Hundred Million Dollars—Many Bids Made Below the Three Per Cent. Basis—Boston and Philadelphia in the Crowd.

New York, Nov. 24.—"The subscriptions to the new government loan when the bids are opened at Washington will be a most gratifying surprise to the government and the whole country." This was the statement of a president of a trust company who has been instrumental in promoting subscriptions to the bond issue.

The financial men who are interested in the movement have been very reticent about the preparations for the subscriptions and will continue so until the bids are opened, for business reasons, as it would defeat their own efforts to secure the bonds if any details of amounts or prices were made public.

Some facts were obtained, however, in the afternoon after the close of business, although the veil of mystery is not altogether lifted. It is quite certain that the issue will be largely oversubscribed, and the estimate of the leading bankers places the aggregate subscription at $100,000,000 or over.

It is impossible to arrive at any information as to the subscriptions of private investors, but there are sufficient facts at hand to calculate the subscriptions of the public and private bankers, insurance companies and bond brokers in New York city at from $75,000,000 to $80,000,000.

Two large parties will put in aggregate bids at a uniform price. There is the Stewart party, in which are included the trust companies, and the foreign bankers combined with some large capitalists, whose bids will foot up practically $50,000,000.

A second group of bidders includes the large gold-holding banks, such as the Fourth, Chase, American Exchange and National Park, and a number of smaller banks, which will subscribe for between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000.

The prices at which these two combined bids will be made are on a slightly different basis. The price offered by the Stewart syndicate is about 12-100 per cent. below the three per cent. basis. The bid of the bankers' party is to be on slightly higher terms, so that the bids of the Stewart party will have the preference. Bids from Boston will aggregate $10,000,000 and from Philadelphia $5,000,000. It is not known what Chicago and the western cities will do in the matter of subscriptions.

Not one member of the Stewart party will present greenbacks at the subtreasury to secure gold. Arrangements have been fully perfected and each individual member of this party knows where he can lay his hand upon the gold required.

There is, first, the gold in the New York banks, and in Boston and Philadelphia.

Then there is a plentiful supply of gold in California which can be obtained if desired. There is also a possibility that gold will be drawn from Europe if this syndicate obtains a full quota of its subscriptions.

BOUGHT STOLEN GOODS.

Jeweler Nelson and Two Young Men Arrested for Theft.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 24.—Felix McLaughlin, William Wallace, and John Nelson were arrested by detectives Parker, Swan, and Merrill on North Main street. McLaughlin has, since September 19, been stealing gold scraps and dust from his employers, the Waite-Thresher company, jewelers, and giving them to Wallace, who is also a jeweler, employed in the Kent & Stanley company, who sold them to Nelson at one-half to one-third the market value.

The police say that Nelson has been suspected of being a receiver of stolen goods for the past two years. Wallace was caught in the act of selling thirty pennyweight of scraps.

Paper Mills Destroyed.

East Stroudsburg, Pa., Nov. 24.—The plant of the Keystone Fibre company, a concern for making utensils out of papier mache in Stroudsburg, was destroyed by fire caused by an explosion in the bake-oven. The loss is fully $25,000. The insurance was very small.

Mill Hands Strike.

Lowell, Mass., Nov. 24.—The employes of Faulkner's mills in this city met and discussed the cut down. A committee was appointed to wait upon Messrs. Faulkner and tell them that the cut-down will be resisted. A strike is the probable outcome.

MAKES RED BLOOD

New Life for the Worn-Out Nervous Tissues.

The Body Gains Rapidly in Weight and Strength.

From the Greatest of All Nerve and Brain Restorers.

Paine's Celery Compound Makes People Well.

Watch the Crowded Streets of Any Large City.

By far the finest portrait galleries in the world are the crowded streets of a large city.

"What a serious, tired expression on most every face!" one can't help saying to himself. It is rare that one goes by that does not wear something of that strained, worn look; and how many more pale lips there are than rosy ones. How often the eyes are dull, the flesh flabby, and that tell-tale line from the corner of the lip to the angle of the nose, drawn painfully deep.

Poor health is unmistakable to the most casual observer. When the body is but poorly filled out with flesh and a feeling of languor pervades the system, plainly there is something lacking in the vital, nutritive powers. Impure blood is keeping the tissues poorly fed and starvingly vitalized.

Get the blood pure with Paine's celery compound and languor and debility will leave the body. Restore the nervous energy to the brain and nerve cells and good spirits and vigor will take the place of despondency and moodiness. Backaches, persistent headaches, that general feeling of fatigue, neuralgia, rheumatism and heart weakness that shows itself in freequent palpitation—are all but various symptoms of a nervous organization badly nourished. Paine's celery compound promotes the healthy activity of the organs that make the blood and keep it pure. The weak parts of the body are thus enabled to build themselves up when this magnificent nerve and tissue builder is employed. The complete recovery and repair of the diseased organs in this way goes on rapidly, naturally and the happy results are permanent. The effect of the intelligent use of Paine's celery compound in all wasting and debilitating diseases is to check at once the decline in strength, and to keep the tissues from further degeneration.

MILLIONS FOR PENSIONS

Result of a Hearing Before the House Sub-Committee.

Washington, Nov. 24.—The sub-committee of the house committee on appropriations having in charge the preparation of the bill appropriating money for the payment of pensions due in the year ending June 30, 1896, heard Commissioner Lochren in advocacy of his estimates for that year at the capitol.

As the result of the conference it was announced that the sub-committee would report to the full committee a bill appropriating for pensions $140,000,000, and for other expenses $1,381,000.

The commissioner stated that in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1894, the sum paid out for pensions was $139,804,461, which was less than the amount appropriated by $25,205,713.

Attempted Train Wrecking.

Biddeford, Me., Nov. 24.—An attempt at train wrecking was made by tramps on the Eastern division of the Boston & Maine about one mile east of West Kennebunk early in the morning. The men broke into a car-house and secured tools with which they removed spikes and bolts from the rails. The condition of the track was discovered by section men just before a train was due to pass.

The President's Health.

Washington, Nov. 24.—The usual cabinet meeting did not take place, having been posponed because the president was not well. The wet weather, it was reported, had aggravated his trouble with his foot, which has kept him indoors at Woodley for several days.

Against Bucket Shops.

Boston, Nov. 24.—The governing board of the local stock exchange has adopted a by-law to the effect that any member of the exchange who has anything to do with a "Bucket shop" shall be liable to a fine of $1,000 and to expulsion for the second offense.

Arrested for a Big Theft.

New York, Nov. 24.—George M. Irwin of Pittsburg who is alleged to be wanted for the misappropriation of $261,000, was arrested late in the afternoon at the Grand hotel, Broadway and Thirty-first street, on a warrant issued in Pittsburg.

Death of an Old Employe.

Hollidaysburg, Pa., Nov. 24.—Thos. B. Gilson, the oldest employe in point of service connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad system, has died here aged 81 years. In 1848 he was foreman of the construction work on the road.

Cheese Factories Close.

Green Bay, Wis., Nov. 24.—Five hundred cheese factories in Door, Brown, Kewaunee, Manitowoc and Outagami counties have shut down until next May.

Delegates to the Convention.

Lyons, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Delegates to the senatorial convention at Geneva were elected here. They favor John Raines as Lieut.-Gov.-elect Saxton's successor.

BATTLE OF THE GIANTS

Enthusiasts Flood Springfield Shouting for the Crimson and Blue—Disposal of the Two Teams—Capt. Emmons Will Play—Results Will Be Known Late This Evening.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 24.—The great Harvard-Yale football game has brought thousands to the city from all over the country. The city is thronged with people, and the uproar over the blue and crimson is unprecedented. To the unprejudiced there was no favorite. But Harvard men were sure Harvard would win, and Yale men swore by the blue. The game will not be called until late and it will be evening before the result of the contest is known.

Everything was in readiness early for the game. Both Harvard and Yale teams arrived in the city, each with large followings. Yale money was freely offered at odds of 2 to 1 and 3 to 1, and was as freely taken by wearers of the crimson, so that with both sides satisfied betting ran high.

The Yale team arrived in the city in a special car at about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and went immediately to the International Young Men's Christian Training school, their regular rendezvous here. The Yale contingent and the coachers made the Cooley house their stopping place. The second eleven and a big following came in this morning. The Yale team spent the afternoon quietly, some of them walking out a little, but some staying in their rooms.

Every man was in good condition and the men are confident of winning.

The Harvard team arrived early in the evening, and in all a party of about fifty, and immediately went to the hotel Savoy, which will be their headquarters until after the game. None were allowed on the street last night.

Harvard—Emmons, left end; Hallo-night and will go into the game at the start. Charlie Brewer will also be able to start the game and Harvard hopes for the best. Both teams play in their regular positions and their line-up is as follows:

The total weight of Yale's team is 1891 pounds, and Harvard's is 1917.

The crowd at Hampden park is the largest in the history of the sport here. Every ticket has been sold by the management, though there is some probability that the numerous speculators will be stuck some. The weather has been threatening. The weather prognostications are good, however, and the park is in such good condition that a large amount of rain will not hurt it. The turf is in fine condition.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 24.—With the departure of the Yale football eleven all football excitement ceased here.

Most of the football enthusiasts accompanied the eleven to Springfield, and spent the night there, although most of the Yale students did not leave town until the special trains began running this morning. There was no study on the Yale campus last night, and after 9:30 o'clock today all recitations were ommitted.

SHOCKS OF EARTHQUAKES.

Rumbling and Vibration Reported at Several Places.

New London, Conn., Nov. 24.—Slight shocks of earthquake were reported from towns adjacent to this city. They occurred between 8 and 9 o'clock, reports coming from Groton, Mystic, Lyme and Niantic. In each case the sound was of distant thunder and the vibration pronounced.

No damage is reported as far as known.

Miners Heavily Sentenced.

Ridgway, Pa., Nov. 24.—The miners convicted of arson and conspiracy at the Paine mines in June were sentenced as follows: Leo Wern and Edward Fox, one year each. Meyers, Rosenbeck and Gettner, on one indictment for burning the tipple, seven years each; other indictments held. Krittle and Swintner, five years each on one indictment. Of the miners convicted of riot at the Shawnut mines, seven received light sentences and the others were discharged.

Carnegie's Nail Mill Burned.

Beaver Falls, Pa., Nov. 24.—Carnegie's wire nail works, occupying a whole square in this city, was burned last night. The total loss will reach $100,000. Two hundred men will be thrown out of employment and the fire will likely stop the whole Carnegie intrests in this place.

Losses Drove Him to Suicide.

Chester, Pa., Nov. 24.—Losses of $15,000 in stock speculations have driven to suicide Chas. Depew, of Crum Lynne, a well-known and heretofore prosperous bachelor. He climbed into the hay-loft of the barn at his home and shot himself through the right temple.

The Attorney General Will Act.

Harrisburg, Nov. 24.—It is probable that an investigation of the foreign building and loan associations doing business in this state will be instituted by the attorney general.

The Accident to the Ericcson.

New London, Conn., Nov. 24.—The break of the Ericsson's air pump will keep the boat under repair till Monday or Tuesday.

Will Celebrate Bismarck's Birthday.

Berlin, Nov. 24.—Arrangements have begun to celebrate Bismark's eightieth birthday throughout Germany.

A VICTORY FOR PASKOLA.

It Receives the Official Endorsement of Eminent Experts and a Jury of Representative Citizens.

The suit brought by Ohio's Food Commissioner against a Cincinnati druggist for selling Paskola on the ground that it was nothing but glucose, resulted in a great victory for Paskola and a verdict against the State.

During the course of the trial, Prof. Shaller of the University of Cincinnati, testified that Paskola was not glucose, and even if it was, it would be harmless. He also bore witness to its activity as a digestive agent.

Prof. Wm. Dickore of the Miami College, testified to the same facts. So did Prof. Schmidt, the chemist of the Board of Health, Prof. Wm. Hoffman and others.

A practical test was made in court, showing the digestive action of Paskola on eggs and meats of various kinds, whereas glucose under precisely the same conditions produced no effect whatever.

This test but confirmed the experts statements and proved Paskola to be of great value in indigestion and wasting diseases.

This verdict disposes of the malicious attack that has been made against Paskola by interested rivals, and suits have now been brought against the proprietors of a well-known emulsion of cod liver oil for having given wide circulation to a false formula and other misrepresentations regarding it.

The animus of this attack will be the better understood when it is stated that Paskola is being largely used in the place of cod liver oil.

He followed reluctantly, lured by the wish to see the attractive countenance in the full light, but resolving as he went that he would make an excuse to leave at once.

She went so quickly and he so slowly, that she had entered the dining room by the time George reached the hall. She held the door of the room invitingly open, and spoke again as he stood hat in hand, on the threshold of the house.

"Won't you take off your coat and shake the snow off before you come in? Then, when this storm has passed, you will be able to start on your way again quite dry."

"I am deeply obliged to you for your kindness," said George, who was utterly bewildered by the situation in which he found himself, so that his words came haltingly from his tongue.

Seen in the bright light of the lamp which hung from the hall ceiling, his unconventional hostess was even more beautiful than she had looked outside in the darkness. She was tall and fair, with a figure more suggestive of strength than is usual in young women, almost masculine, indeed, in its unpinched, natural waist and rather square shoulders. A massive young woman, with long white hands and quick, lithe movements, and with a certain frank simplicity of manner which suggested that she did not live the cribbed and narrow life usual with the women of the middle classes. The very straightforward spontaneity of her welcome to this stranger was what one would have expected of a man, rather than of a young woman.

But the freshness, the unexpectedness of this was only another charm in the dazzled eyes of George Llewellyn. He found his heart beating faster, his tongue faltering, as he looked at her shyly, and forced himself to make an excuse. It may be noted that his first vague suspicions had melted suddenly in the glow of her beauty and of her gracious, smiling manner.

"I thank you, I don't know how to thank you enough," he stammered, already wavering in his intention of going on; "but I really ought not to take advantage of your kindness. The fact is I am traveling with some valuable securities—"

A sort of sickness seized George when he got as far as this, and made him suddenly stop. For as soon as he mentioned the securities he saw a flash of light on his hostess' face. As he paused, she took up his speech for him.

"If you have anything of much value about you, that is all the more reason why you should not stumble about blindly in the snow, as you were doing when I first met you."

And she stepped out quickly from the dining-room into the hall, drew him inside the house by an unexpected movement of a strong arm, and closed the front door behind him before he had recovered from the amazement into which the rapidity and decisiveness of the movements had thrown him.

"Really, I must beg you to let me go on now," said he, in a low voice, as he made a strong effort to pull himself together, and to resist the pressure which he knew she was going to put upon him to stay.

"And I must beg you to be more reasonable, and not to reject the good fortune the gods send, just because it happens to be offered by a stranger."

"I am afraid I must seem ungracious—" said George quickly, as he put his hand upon the handle of the door. But she, laughing rather nervously, turned the big key in the lock, and pulling it out in quite a leisurely manner, thrust it into her pocket, and sprang, almost at one bound, back to the dining-room door.

"If you say no to a woman, you know," she said as she once more invited him, by a gesture, to enter, "she finds some way of circumventing you after all."

CHAPTER II.—MAN'S REVENGE.

The young man felt himself torn as if by sharp thorns, with keen feelings, of passionate attraction, of repulsion as keen, and by a sense of imminent danger. He followed the girl into the dining-room, holding his bag with a firm hand, and looked at her with an expression which caused the blood to rush to her face, and her eyes to droop suddenly.

The table was between them, for she was standing by the fireplace at the opposite end of the room, leaning against the mantelpiece in an attitude which showed off the lines of her fine figure to unstudied advantage against the red glow. Her blush, the womanly bend of her head at his look, caused a revulsion of feeling entirely in her favor in the young man. And even as he gazed at her, bending a little forward to get a better view of her face by looking under the hanging oil lamp with its red shade, he saw that her expression of modest shame gave place to one of doubt, of fear. She looked up quickly, and their eyes met.

In a moment he felt satisfied, as an older man would not have been, that the suspicions her strange conduct had aroused were unfounded. He heaved a sigh of relief. He felt so much, however, that he had to put a constraint upon himself which made his manner abrupt, and his voice harsh as he spoke.

"I must go now," he said, turning abruptly. "Open the door, please."

He had turned his back to her, to avoid the strong influence he felt she had upon him. In the silence which followed his words, he heard her rapid and labored breathing. His doubts awoke again. He even glanced sharply round, as if in doubt whether she was not approaching him with some sinister purpose. And he saw that she had indeed come a little nearer, and that her large gray eyes were wide with doubt and fear.

"Why do you wish to detain me?" he asked, so sharply that she was taken aback, and gave a little forced laugh while she prepared an answer.

"Surely that is a singular way of acknowledging hospitality," said she, without looking at him, "to question the motives of it. Out here in the country we are not like the people in towns, who look shyly and coldly upon strangers. On the contrary, we offer them fire when they are cold, and light when they have lost their way. If you're so suspicious, why did you accept my direction as to the road you were to take?"

He paused before answering. It was not easy to tell her the reasons for the change in his attitude, although he could not but suppose that she knew them already. He had seen something of the world, and was not particularly diffident with any class of women.

But there was something about this girl, an air of innate refinement, the accent of a gentlewoman, a suggestion in her look and manner that she was playing a part for which she was not suited, which prevented his putting upon her outrageous conduct the construction he unhesitatingly would have done in the case of another woman.

He was hopelessly puzzled. He noted that the room, comfortable as it was, was shabby and worn as to furniture; that the girl's dress was severe in its inexpensive simplicity; that the glass and silver which had looked so imposing from the outside were exceedingly old fashioned. He noted also that the table was laid for two persons. And finally, he remarked to himself upon the fact that since he entered he had heard no sound indicating the presence in the house of any person besides himself and his mysterious hostess.

Just as he came to this point in his reflections, however, he saw in the lady's eyes a look which showed him that she was listening for some sound outside, rather than waiting for the answer to her question. So he made up his mind rapidly and walked quickly to the window, which was about three feet from the ground.

"You can see nothing from there but the snow falling," said the girl, in a voice which was not without a tremor of anxiety. "We are shut in here by a wall, as you may have seen, as a protection from the gales we feel here so terribly."

"IF YOU FOLLOW ME I'LL FIRE."

Without answering George put up his hand to throw back the catch of the window.

"Oh!" cried she, in a higher key; "you are not obliged to go out that way. If you will take a glass of wine to make amends for your doubts of my hospitality, I will open the door for you immediately."

Without waiting for an answer she left the room, and returned in a very few moments with a decanter of wine, which she placed upon the table. Without heeding the fact that he had opened the window, and was evidently on the point of making his escape by that way, she poured out a glass of wine, and offered it to him with her own hand, coming round the table and holding it close to him.

"You won't refuse, will you?"

George, with one searching look into her face, took the glass, and put his lips to the wine. Then he put the glass, with a firm hand, down on the table.

"You must excuse me," said he, shortly. "This wine is drugged."

She was very near to him as he spoke. The next moment she had snatched the bag from his hand and sprung to the door. In the second which followed the seizure she had got such a good start that she was able to slam the door in his face as he pursued her. By the time he had opened the door she had reached the extreme end of the long, narrow hall which ran through the house from the front to the back, and was pointing a revolver at him as he darted after her.

"If you follow me, I'll fire," she shrieked.

WHISTLER AND THE MILLIONAIRE

Just What Really Occurred Upon a Celebrated Occasion.

Here is a true version of an oft-told story of Whistler, the distortion bearing only a faint racial likeness to the original:

A man from nowhere made a large fortune in London and at once proceeded to indulge a genuine, if somewhat crass, love of art. He sent agents the length and breadth of Europe to purchase the highest-priced pictures to be had; old masters, if possible; if not, copies by first-class artists, if they could be got to do the work. Modern artists were patronized in the original; in fact, he set up a private Luxembourg crossed with a spurious Louvre.

The home he built him was magnificent. No man in London with leanings toward art had such a house. Everybody, or nearly everybody, who was invited went to see it, to remain, to feast, even to gaze upon the millionaire at his easel, brush in hand, the robes of Japan or of Greece flowing about him.

But one crumpled roseleaf had the millionaire. Whistler would not go to his home. Millais, Tadema, Sargent and a hundred lights, only a trifle or so less distinguished, had graced his board, but Whistler could not be got through the front door. When he saw the millionaire coming he whisked around the corner; his notes of invitation, of adulation, he did not condescend to open; he turned a deaf ear to importunities of mutual friends.

The art millionaire was in despair. His wine turned to gall, his palette grinned at him, his sleep was infected with nightmare, which wore the disdainful smirk of Whistler. Even the famous white lock seemed to assume an air of lofty unattainableness.

I short, he was miserable, for until Whistler, the exigeant, the eccentric, the impossible, set the cachet of his approval, the art millionaire's position in the world of art was open to dispute.

One day Whistler abruptly sent him word that he would call upon him the next morning at ten o'clock. What actuated the great man will never be known. The simplest explanation is that it was one of his many freaks.

The art millionaire, fairly palpitating with joy, received Whistler at the entrance of his palatial home, effusive with welcome. Whistler bowed gravely. He uttered never a word. The millionaire offered his arm. Whistler took it impassively and permitted himself to be conducted over the house. He walked through rooms filled with the treasures of Japan, of India, of Turkey; rooms hung with priceless tapestries, inlaid with rare porcelains; rooms representing apartments in ancient Greece, Rome, Pompeii. He stared with fixed eyes and said never a word. A dining-room taken from a feudal castle, a hall arched like Cleopatra's bedrooms, whose silken hangings could have gone through the eye of a needle—never a word.

The host, much perturbed, but willing to make all allowances for the eccentricities of genius, finally flung aside the portieres of a great studio. In it were such couches and stuffs and curios as artists dream of. The easels were solid rosewood. Two-guinea-an-hour models awaited the leisure of the millionaire. Never a word. Whistler permitted his stony stare to roam from one object to another, then swung his host about, led him through the portieres, and made for the entrance. As they descended the grand staircase the millionaire burst forth:

"Great heavens, Mr. Whistler! Ain't you going to say anything?"

Whistler turned abruptly and regarded him for a moment with a solemn stare. Then he brought his hand heavily down on the millionaire's back and exclaimed hoarsely:

"It's amazing! And—there's—no—excuse—for it."—N. Y. Sun.

C. E. THANKSGIVING.

LECTURE ROOM TOO SMALL TO ACCOMMODATE THE PEOPLE.

Congregationalists Give Praise to the Divine Source of Earthly Blessings.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Congregational Church held a special Thanksgiving service last evening. It was at first planned to hold the meeting in the lecture room, but owing to the large attendance it was held in the main body of the church instead. The room was very comfortably filled with the Christian Endeavorers and their friends who heartily enjoyed the meeting, especially the very interesting address of Henry M. Maxson.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh Day Baptist Church was specially invited and a large number of them were present.

After an opening hymn and prayer by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, a double quartette, composed of Miss Eda Beekman, Miss Bayne, Miss Julia Belknap, Miss May Levers, Horace J. Martin, William Jessup, Lyman Allen and Charles Belknap, rendered a selection "Now Thank we all our God".

A reading "For an Autumn Festival" was rendered by Miss Addie Parker Jackson in her usual finished and artistic manner.

After another hymn and reading of a passage of Scripture by Mr. Maxson, there was a solo by Horace J. Martin entiled "A Beautiful Land on High". It was finely rendered and was greatly enjoyed by all.

Following this came the address by Mr. Maxson. His topic was "Thanksgiving", and he commenced by contrasting Thanksgiving Day with the other holidays of the year.

He called it the great home festival when the wandering sons and daughters returned to the old home to meet once more. After speaking of the gradual passing away of the old-time Thanksgiving Day, he gave a brief outline of the history of the day from the time of its institution by the Pilgrims, through the first legal Thanksgiving Day made by proclamation by George Washington in 1789, up to the present time.

"What have we to be thankful for?" he said, and spoke most emphatically of the Christian Endeavor Society. He then told of the different arenas of work for the society, what it had already accomplished, and what it should do in the future. After many words of interest in regard to Christian Endeaver work, he spoke on reasons for thankfulness in the situation of our country today.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich dismissed the meeting with the benediction after a Thanksgiving collection had been taken up.

The instrumental music was furnished by Miss E. A. Whiting on the piano and D. M. Gardner on the ocarina.

Ragan, Thanksgiving Eve.

The Thanksgiving Eve entertainment in Plainfield will be a wonderful trip up the Rhine and through Switzerland, conducted by H. H. Ragan in Music Hall. The price of a reserved seat for this magnificent illustrated lecture will but 50 cents, and for 75 cents a course ticket including the Yosemite and the Yellowstone can now be procured at Leggett's Pharmacy, corner of Park avenue and Front street.

The Detroit Free Press says:

"His subject, 'The Rhine and Switzerland', was exceptional, not only in the subjects offered for illustration, but for the opportunity it gives the lecturer to draw on the legendary lore of 'the snowy summits old in story'. Both of these advantages were taken by Mr. Ragan. The photographic views illuminated by the oxyhydrogen light were far superior to those usually given by the stereopticon. Their photographic properties are lost in their realism, and the scenes on the Rhine, its quaint villages and moss-covered castles, the valleys and mountains of Switzerland, were pictured with rare vividness. Not least in their artistic merits is the fine coloring of the pictures. All this Mr. Ragan embellishes with a running comment of historical narrative, interesting description and fabled anecdote. He is a lecturer of more than usual merit, and his word-painting is quite as interesting as his illustrations."

History of Plainfield.

The November meeting of the Plainfield Branch Alliance will be held in the lecture room of All Souls Church Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 27, at 3. All women interested are cordially invited to attend. The subjects considered will be as follows:

History of Plainfield.
Settlement and founders.
The course of its development.
Distinguished men.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

LITTLE HAROLD IS DEAD

The Flobert Rifle Wound Was Fatal.

THE SHOT FIRED BY A PLAYMATE.

Distressing Accident Illustrating the Danger of Permitting Firearms to Be in the Reach of Children—Two Families in Deepest Grief Over the Occurrence.

The lamentable accidental shooting which was recorded in The Daily Press of Saturday, and in no other paper, terminated fatally yesterday morning.

There have been many conflicting stories afloat concerning the sad affair, but the following is the true statement of the case.

Clarence Rocap, son of Charles E. Rocap, was 11 years old November 16. Harold Greenleaf, only son of George E Greenleaf, a draughtsman of the Pond Machine Tool Company, was just 9 years old. The boys lived side by side, and on Saturday both boys begged their mothers to let them go and play football at MacDonald's in Evona.

The boys went off together and played football for some time. It seems that there are several older boys in the neighborhood who own rifles. Clarence had been with these boys and watched them try to drill lead out of an old rifle, some days previous. This old rifle had, unknown to Clarence and Harold, been sent off to be repaired; but in the barn stood two other rifles.

As the boys stopped playing football, they all wanted a drink save Clarence. He went into the barn. Harold Greenleaf stood near the barn door, and Clarence took up what he supposed to be the old rifle, and playfully raised it in the air and let go the trigger. He had no sooner let it fall than Harold Greenleaf fell.

Clarence Rocap ran to him and said: "What's the matter?"

Harold said: "I'm shot!"

The boys gathered round him, and Clarence pulled open his shirt, and saw blood. He told the boys to get rags quick. He himself held his finger over the bullet hole until the rags came. Then the people in Mr. MacDonald's house carried him into the sitting room. Kind neighbors ran to the factory for Mr. Greenleaf, and the boys ran to the coal yard of Davis & Stevens, whence telephone messages were sent. In about fifteen minutes three physicians were there, Drs. G. W. Endicott, E. W. Hedges and B. Van D. Hedges. Clarence ran home crying, and himself covered with blood.

Mr. and Mrs. Rocap hurried to Mr. MacDonald's. The doctors found that the bullet had entered the breast bone, glanced off below the heart, and then they could not trace it.

Dr. B. Van D. Hedges remained all night with Harold, and at 11 internal bleeding set in. At 8 a. m. Sunday the doctors said it was only a question of a few hours. About 11 death came.

Clarence Rocap had never had a firearm, and never had been allowed to use one. He is nearly prostrated with grief. Mr. and Mrs. Greenleaf have a greater sorrow, for it was their only son; and the bright little curly-headed fellow was a great favorite.

While Clarence is blamed for using the rifle, it is also felt that the men were at fault who permitted a loaded gun to be where so many small boys constantly play.

Both boys were nice children. Clarence was in Miss Humpston's class at school, but Harold had never yet gone to school, being tutored at home.

The County Physician and police investigated the matter thoroughly, yesterday, and exonerated all parties concerned from blame. After consulting with the Prosecutor, the County Physician issued a burial permit.

The boys who witnessed the accident were Bert Brandon, Bert King and Samuel McDonald. The rifle was owned by Wm. Morgan.

Thanksgiving for the Poor.

The Relief Association intends giving the usual Thanksgiving dinner this year to its beneficiaries and the town poor. It is hoped that the many friends of the society will contribute generously, as is their custom, towards the supply, for the number to be helped is always a large one.

Contributors of money, vegetables and poultry may be sent to the Relief rooms, 303 West Second street, Tuesday, Nov. 27, and until noon Wednesday, Nov 28.

If poultry be sent, chickens or turkeys not exceeding in weight 8 lbs are requested.

Conductor Hatfield's Train Stoned.

When the New Jersey Central train due at Perth Amboy at 9:05 a. m. reached there Saturday Conductor A. B. Hatfield of Plainfield reported that his train had been bombarded with stones or shot while passing through the woods just south of Woodbridge Junction. No one was injured, but several windows were smashed. Some of the passengers said when they reached Perth Amboy that the train had been shot at, but others claimed to have seen three boys throw stones.

FIRST PHILHARMONIC.

GRATIFYING REPETITION OF FORMER SEASON'S SUCCESSES.

Miss Lillian Blauvelt Captivates a Critical Audience, and the Instrumentalists Give Rare Example of Perfect Orchestral Harmony.

The New York Philharmonic Club gave a perfect performance in the Casino of the Country Club, Saturday night, and the soloists who assisted were thoroughly successful in pleasing a critical though indulgent audience. H. O. Newman is to be congratulated upon his public spirit in bringing the Philharmonic Club to Plainfield, and again upon the generous response accorded to his request for subscriptions, for the Casino was well filled at the club's first appearance of the season. That the series will be one of the most successful ever inaugurated in this city is now assured.

The work of the club members, Saturday, was on a par with that finished excellence which has made them famous. No matter how intricate the subject, their rendition seems always to be equally dextrous and sympathetic. They always present the selection in the manner which would most please the author, were he present, and that art lends added charm to their own genius.

The programme presented Saturday has been printed in these columns, and it is difficult to single out any part of it as being particularly well played; the whole being so satisfying. The new Pizzicati by Gillet was received with marked favor, likewise a Gavotte by Hofman.

Henri Haagman's 'cello seemed imbued with life under his deft fingers. The Elf Dance by Popper, a wonderfully difficult selection, was presented in all its striking beauty by the player. On encore he played an adagio by Gutterman.

Miss Lillian Blauvelt, as Mrs Smith is still named on the concert stage, won the admiration and one might almost say the affection of everyone present. Her grace of manner added to personal charms made her natural talent seem more pronounced than that of any singer who has appeared in Plainfield for years. Her voice has a flexibility and clearness of tone that is seldom found with one of such sweetness as hers.

Encores were demanded of her after both her selections, and she responded most graciously. Her husband accompanied her, and his playing was so modulated that her clear, firm voice was always well supported. Her encores were Mrs. Beach's "Ecstasy" and Van der Stucken's "Fallih Fallah". Miss Blauvelt studied under Van der Stucken.

Sol Marcoseon proved himself a brilliant young violinist. He was forced to respond to a vigorous recall, and gave Germany's national hymn. This he played in a very wonderful manner, carrying the air and an intricate accompaniment without a break.

The quartette of violins, viola and 'cello was certainly as harmonious as any number on the programme. Many present doubtless wished that Eugene Weiner, the flutist, might have been named for a solo. He is leader and manager of the Club, and has been a familiar figure of the concerts ever since the old days when they were given in the First M. E Church. He is the only remaining one of the originals. It is hoped he will be given solo part in the next concert on Tuesday, Dec. 18, when Miss Clara C. Henley, soprano, and Conrad Behrens, basso, will be the soloists.

SIGHT, SILENCE, SONG.

NOVEL PUBLIC MEETING OF THE W. C. T. U.

Temperance Truths Told by Stereopticon Views—A Large Audience Impressed by the Service.

The "Silence Meeting" held in Music Hall yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. proved to be as interesting as it was novel, and it was enjoyed by an audience that crowded the hall.

The meeting was opened with Congregational singing, led by Horace J. Martin. This was followed with pleasing vocal solos by Miss Kittie Glenn, Miss Etta Krymer and Miss Bessie Blair.

The selections by the trio, Mrs. B. T. Barnes, piano, P. Ludwig Conde, violin, and Firmin Ferrer, 'cello, was delightfully rendered; and added much to the interest of the meeting.

The novel part of the programme was the exhibition by use of stereopticon and large canvas of Scripture selections and quotations from eminent men and leading newspapers in regard to the liquor traffic. Except during the singing not a word was spoken.

The whole affair was decidedly successful in carrying out the purpose of the women, that of spreading temperance truth.

J. Hervey Doane, Walter Freeman and Curt Gottheil made the excellent slides, and manipulated their exhibition.

Plainfield's School of Music.

The musicale recently given by the advanced pupils of the Plainfield School of Music at their rooms in the Babcock Building is an event which should mark an era in the history of Plainfield.

Avowedly musical as the population is, many are yet ignorant of the exceptional advantages offered here at home for thorough and scientific study; but a brief review of events whose direct bearing may have been overlooked will prove that the claim is not without a firm basis.

Nearly two years ago, Walter Arnold Hudson of New York opened a studio of voice culture in Mr. Hulett's rooms on West Front street, and introduced himself to the public through a recital which he gave in the First Baptist Church with the kind assistance of Wm. E. MacClymont. Mr. Hudson came to Plainfield wholly without local influence, relying for success upon the belief that genuine merit, if united with patience and earnestness of purpose, will ultimately win recognition. That recognition has been won, and is perhaps the more secure because it has come slowly.

In the Spring of 1893 Mr. Hudson moved his studio to the Stillman Building, and a year later he conceived the idea of founding a school of music, for which purpose he associated with himself Wm E. MacClymont and P. Ludwig Cande.

Mr. MacClymont's qualities as a musician are so well known in Plainfield that they need no comment, but it is pleasing to note that his merits have attained more than a local recognition, as is proved by his membership with the New York Manuscript Society.

Mr. Conde also has an excellent local reputation of long standing, and his ability as a teacher of violin and 'cello was well illustrated by the work of his puplis in the concert which he gave in the Casino the evening of May 1. His studies in Germany during the past Summer have undoubtedly fitted him to do even better work.

Of Mr. Hudson, as the founder and director of an institution whose need has long been felt, it may be well to speak more fully. A pupil of the elder Lamperti (to whose training is due the fame of the prima donna Albani), Mr. Hudson has reaped every advantage to be gained from a thorough course of study with the great teacher. The superiority of his method is evident from the ease of his tone production, the remarkable distinctness of his enunciation, and the perfect evenness of tone quality throughout the whole compass of his voice, while his artistic interpretations evince a mind of deep musical sympathy. That he has the gift of imparting a practical knowledge of those qualities which make his own singing so admirable, was demonstrated by the work of his puplis, Miss Stevens and Mr. Bond, who, after but little more than a year of study, successfully rendered the soprano and tenor solos in the performance of "The Holy City" given in the First Presbyterian Church July 8.

In these days of charlatanism and pretence, the work of a thorough and conscientious teacher cannot be too highly valued; and Mr. Hudson deserves the gratitude of the musical public for his individual work, as well as for the foundation of a school of music of the highest standard.

Nolan's Light Sentence.

Edward Nolan, who sold Jersey Central metal to Junkman Haulenbeck, was sentenced by Judge McCormick to 30 days in jail. The lightness of his sentence was because he materially aided in Haulenbeck's conviction.

As already stated in these columns, Haulenbeck got one year in State Prison. His wife wept bitterly in court.

CANDIDATES SPEAK.

School Board Nominees State Their Position.

IT IS AS THE PRESS PREDICTED

They Decline to Be Bound by the Resolutions of the Convention Which Nominated Them, and Say It Will Be the Duty of the New Board to Test the School Law.

The following was sent to The Daily Press today for publication:

To the Voters of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN—We note the expression of opinion made by the Republican Convention regarding Senate Bill No 51.

There has been no intention on the part of the Board of Education to act other wise than in accordance with all laws relating to their duty; and whoever may be future members of that Board will no doubt pursue the same course.

It will be the duty of the new Board to ascertain just what their powers are, a duty that cannot be avoided, whoever may be members of it and whatever may be their individual opinions in regard thereto.

Should the voters of Plainfield decide to retain us in the positions we have occupied in the Board we will serve the interests of the city as well as we can. Should we be relieved of duty we will take no exception and express no regrets

Respectfully,
J. B. PROBASCO.
LEANDER LOVELL

Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 24, 1894.

[This reaches the voters of Plainfield after Messrs. Probasco and Lovell have filed their acceptances of the nomination for School Trustees. Before nominating them, the Republicans in convention adopted a platform which is virtually repudiated in this communication. Directly after their nomination Chairman E R. Pope said: "They are certainly bound to that platform. They cannot honorably accept the nomination without agreeing to abide by the resolutions." The announcement of their independence is made at such a late hour that the citizens have now no opportunity of preparing a ticket against them. By law no nominations are possible after tonight.

OLIVER L. TWEEDY.

From The San Angelo Standard, Texas, Nov. 17, 1894

The city was startled Thursday night when the news arrived from Knickerbocker that Oliver L. Tweedy had died there suddenly of heart failure at 6 Thursday evening. Oliver L. Tweedy was one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Tom Green County. He came to this county about fifteen years ago from Plainfield, N. J., and became interested in commercial pursuits at Knickerbocker, where he has lived ever since. Every year of his life added new names to his list of friends, and it is no mere empty praise to say that he was one of the best liked and most respected citizens in the county. His warm heart, genial, kindly ways and open hand will be sadly missed at the little village in the hills and here in town, where his frequent visits were always enjoyed. The funeral services will take place today at the residence of his brother, Joseph Tweedy, on Beauregard avenue, at 4 p. m. The remains will be taken to Danbury, Conn., for interment.

Thanksgiving's Turkey Trip.

The sale of seats for the elaborate production of "A Trip to Turkey" which comes to Music Hall Thanksgiving night has opened at the box office and from all indications they will have an immense house. This company is composed of artists of merit, the production is full of sparkling music, songs, dances, a strong chorus and ballet led by the European sensational dancer, Donna Dean. The costumes are gorgeous in Oriental beauty and the special scenery magnificent in every detail.

He That Ruleth His Tongue—

Lawrence Wallace of Fanwood, who on Wednesday afternoon was committed to jail by Judge McCormick for being noisy in the court room, was set at liberty Friday afternoon.

In discharging him Judge McCormick said that the Court hoped his experience had taught him a lesson; such characters as he, if they see proper to enter a court room, should remember that silence must be observed.

Fraternal Visit.

Several members of the Grand Army of this city will go to Jersey City this evening to attend the reception given by G Van Houten Post to Commander-in-Chief Thomas Lawler of Illinois, and Staff and Department Commander John Shields of Flemington and staff in the Tabernacle, Jersey City.

Four Dead in One Family.

A sad case of affliction to a family near Stony Hill, whose names we are unable to learn, is the death of four children during last week by that dreaded disease, diphtheria.

TROLLEY PROGRESS.

PISCATAWAY ALMOST UNANIMOUS IN ITS FAVOR.

Rev. J. B. Cleaver Appears in Opposition—The Company Has Secured the Right of Way—Another Meeting Soon.

A large attendance made a lively meeting of the Piscataway Township Committee and voters Saturday morning and afternoon. Rev. J. B. Cleaver appeared in opposition to the enterprise, but chiefly for personal reasons. The company has secured nearly all the frontage in the township, and 90 per cent. of the lineal frontage, and 75 per cent. of the assessed valuation in the township.

The meeting was adjourned, to meet again Monday, Dec. 3.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

It was announced by Superintendent Maxson this morning that the arrangement of prizes for the essay of "Tobacco, its Use and Abuse" had been changed. Instead of a general contest open to all the school, there will be a special prize of $3 for the best essay in each class. The date on which the essays are due has been changed from Dec. 10 to the first Thursday after New Year's Day.

It was also announced that the donations for the regular High school Thanksgiving offering would be received tomorrow and exhibited on the platform in Assembly Hall before they are distributed.

The High School boys played basket ball Saturday afternoon. Two games were played between the regular team and the scrubs, both of which the regular team won, first by a score of 25 to 0 and in the next 13 to 0 The goals were made by George P. Smith '98 and Volney F. Green '96.

The last practice before the match games will be held this afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

There was a meeting of the Senior Class immediately after dismissal. John V. Beekman, Jr., was elected vice president.

It was decided that the class should unite in their donation for the High School offering. Valentine Cander was appointed a committee to take charge.

NINETY-FIVE.

The Black Crook.

The attraction to be presented in Music Hall, Saturday, December 1, is the world-famed spectacular romance "The Black Crook." It has been played more times than any play known to American theatre-goers. The scenery of which there are tons, is alone worthy of especial attention, and when the superb dramatic cast, the charming ballets, the dazzling costumes and the sumptuous transformation scenes are considered, not to speak of the numerous European specialties, it is easily the most imposing production that our citizens will have a chance to witness this season. Its long run at the Academy of Music, New York, and its success on tour last season, should lend additional interest to the engagement here.

All Souls Lectures.

A fine course of lectures has been arranged for All Souls Church, to take place as follows:

Dec. 7—"Walt Whitman", by Rev. Merle St. Croix Wright.

Dec. 14—"A Half Dozen English Cathedrals", by Rev. Hobart Clark. Illustrations by Wm. L Gibbs.

Jan. 4—"The War between China and Japan", by Rev. Watari Kitashima, Ph.D.

Jan. 18—"The Labor Problem", by Hon. Roswell G. Horr.

Feb. 1—"George Eliot the Poet", by A. Emerson Palmer.

The lectures are to begin at 8. Course tickets, $1, will be on sale at Hebard's and Leggett's drug stores.

Watchung Park Newcomer.

Messrs. Hand & Runyon have sold one of their choice Watchung Park properties to Frank Hand. The location is Fairview avenue. The price was $6,500. Mr. Hand and family will take possession about the middle of next month.

Plainfielders in It.

Barnett, Cuming and Monte Scott are among those who take part in the bicycle races in Madison Square Garden this week.

Orange and White.

The Music Hall boxes occupied by the Kappa Delta Phi of the High School, at the great Ragan lecture Thanksgiving Eve, will be decorated with the new society colors, orange and white.

Mr. Ira P. Wetmore, a prominent real estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in his family for several years as occasion required, and always with perfect success. He says: "I find it a perfect cure for our baby when troubled with colic or dysentery. I now feel that my outfit is not complete without a bottle of this Remedy at home or on a trip away from home. ABSOLUTELY PURE

BILL MARLIN'S THANKSGIVING.

BY CAPTAIN W. H. SHELTON.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

"IT'S all in a lifetime, Jack," says Bill Marlin, knucklin the brine out of his eyes. "And I ain't complainin o' grub er grog aboard this 'ere raft, but if the old man had been so eminded as to take my advise and leave the cook's cat aboard stidder heavin her over the rail soon's we left port the brig 'u'd a been makin into Boston in another week stidder hevin gone to Davy Jones', and him, with the rest of the crew, clawin seaweed 'longside of her. I wouldn't kur a rope's end fur this 'ere turn in the tide," continued Bill, takin an extra half hitch in his lashin's, "if I hadn't made a date with a shipmet o' mine, Lijah Hawkins by name, hailin from New Bedford, when he's afloat, but now bein ashore in them 'ere parts. When I pass my word, Jack, it's same's if I signed articles, and that's mor'n I've done aboard this crib."

The raft was made of spars and empty pork barrels, with a cutdown jib rigged on a jury mast forward, and our stores and dunnage in a lead colored chest lashed amidships alongside of the water cask, and the whole drippin outfit rolling on the seas, climbin up hill and sousin into the trough and clawin off sideways like a fiddler crab.

Accordin to our reckonin, this was the 13th of November (year '45), and three days before the brig Nancy of Portland, from Liverpool into Boston, with a cargo of tin plate, had been struck by an easter, and the captain had driven her before the winds for 48 hours under next to bare poles until her fore and main sticks went overboard in an extra gale, and her rotten old hull sprang a-leak. When the old man gave up the pumps, expectin her to go down before mornin, we provisioned the two quarter boats regular, and the captain, hevin the compass, and Bill Marlin, bein mate of the Nancy, hevin only the ship's barometer to sail by, the crew was that crazy to go in the captain's boat that they swarmed over the side and swamped her before our eyes, leavin Bill and me leanin on the rail and the old man and all hands goin to the bottom like lead afore we could heave 'em so much as a rope's end.

Me and Bill eased away the other boat, and when she struck the water a cross sea stove her against the brig and crushed her like an eggshell.

"Shipmet," says Bill, "it ain't fittin to go to sea jist yit, and what we've got to do is pump 'er," and pump her we did all that night, watch and watch, the other one lashin the raft. By mornin the water had gained nine inches on us, and the ship had settled that much by the side. Bill's face was long, but he allowed it warn't no use to put off till the raft was shipshape and her stores lashed proper, so we worked and pumped till near noon and swung the whole outfit overboard by the mizzinmast boom and got onto it in our oilskin pajamers and clear of the Nancy in time to see her go down bow on.

When I asked Bill what the nature of his engagement with Hawkins of New Bedford might be, he said it was social and religious and included wearin alongside and heavin aboard a Thanksgivin dinner, and he had the old man's consent beforehand for the cruise ashore.

"I was two year shipmet with Lige abound a Bedford whaler up north in 38 and 9, and then I struck him agin in 42 aboard a West India lime juicer in the coastin trade, and comin into Boston on time we had shore leave together on Thanksgivin day, and bein New England born of honest fisherfolks we kept the day proper, accordin to our lights. The next I seen of o' Lige after we left the lime juicer was when we saw breakin out the Nancy's cargo alongside the Liverpool docks him a-celebratin his last day ashore afore the schooner sailed for New York and long with 'im a Kaboka sailorman what I'd messed with aforetime on a guano ship from Callo to Frisco, and after cruisin around with them two all day, bein sober, I made the date with Lige and seen the two aboard the Lightfoot, which was a three master and a-heavin of her anchor then and there for to put to sea."

BILL SAT UPON THE CHEST.

Bill hevin said them words, a green sea combed over his end of the raft, and when he came up blowin he pulled the glass out of his pocket, and holdin it up he says, eyin it careful: "She's gone up five points, Jack, since we shipped, and I 'low she's moderatin. What quarter's the wind in?"

"How do I know?" says I. "Hain't the old man got the compass?"

"So he has," says Bill, "and he ain't needin of it either, hevin made port. I've been 20 years afore the mast," continued Bill, lookin grieved, "in nigh as many ships, and I've obsarved that when a sailorman ships in a hurry he ginerally carries some article in his dunnigs what he'd better left behind." The glass was right, and before night set in the sea had moderated perceptibly, and although we were awake all night securely lashed to the raft, drenched with salt water and hevin nearly perished with cold, hope revived at the comin of daylight. The runnin seas had quieted to long smooth swells, and then the sun came up over the port bow and put new life into us. We unlashed ourselves from the chest, where we had been sittin back to back for eight hours, and spread the bit of sail and set her course west, as there away New Bedford lay, and Bill swore while there was a biscuit in the locker he'd do his best to keep his date.

"Lige Hawkins is an out and out sea lawyer," said Bill, "and altho' 'tain't no use I'd feel more easy in my mind to know she's headed for Bedford." Then we ate some pilot bread and dates out of the chest and took a swallow of rum and rummaged down to the pipes and 'bacy and took off our oilskin pajamers to let the sun have leeway onto our woolens. Bein refreshed, Bill set on the chest and tended sheet while I lay astern and held her across the swells with a long oar.

"I won't say as I altogether like this," remarked Bill between pulls at his pipe, "but I tell you, Jack, the next ship I sign aboart 'ull be after I 'zamin her sticks. It's my opinion them as was on the Nancy had dry rot into 'em, not to mention the hull."

"I'm glad you're expectin to have the chance to sign again, Bill," I said.

"In course," cried Bill. "I've been shippin aboard one tub after another all my life, and I 'low to keep on doin of it."

After that the weather held fair, with plenty of wind astern, and we worked the raft, watch and watch, and got our regular sleep. On the sixth day of the cruise, which was the 24th of the month, some wreckage hove in sight dead ahead, and when we made it it proved to be the two masts of a schooner held together by the stays, with booms and gaffs and main sheets complete and all the halliards.

WE CAME ALONGSIDE.

"More dry rot," says Bill, "but I reckon we better wear ship and tackle to it." The sea bein calm, we did so, and Bill got off his togs and boarded the sticks, with a line about his middle and a meat knife from the chest in his teeth. It was an all day's job, but with an occasional dram to keep out the cold we got off the sails and floated the masts end for end and lashed one on our starboard side with the boom across the stern and the other to port with her boom across the bows, and with the gaffs turned up and guyed forward and rigged with canvas we had a craft that no sea could make under, although it might sweep us off.

"There," says Bill after we got her under way, with the sun an hour high over the port bow, "she may not be fast, but she's stanch, and we're b'ilin away for Bedford."

Afore sun set we sighted a ship to leeward beatin up against the wind, and when she came alongside she hove to and sent off a boat.

I was feelin mighty chipper at the prospect of seeing the American flag again, but Bill Marlin sat on the chest amidships puffing away at his pipe.

"Lower away the mainsail and ease 'er," roared Bill.

I lowered the sail, and the raft laid to, and by that time the boat swung alongside, eight oars up, man-o'-war style, and the starchiest Yankee mate in the stern that ever sailed out of Boston.

"Come, tumble aboard here, men," says the airy mate, "and be quick about it. There's no room for that chest."

"Where ye bound?" says Bill Marlin, takin out his pipe and spittin to windward.

"What's that to you where we're bound?" growls the mate from Boston.

"Look a-here," says Bill Martin, "I've got a date with a shipmet in New Bedford, and your bow looks to be onto the wrong end o' the ship. I ain't goin back to Liverpool, and you better git your boathook out o' my sta'b'ard sail."

"What time are you due in New Bedford on that timber crab?" says the mate, laughin.

"On Thanksgivin day," says Bill. "Whenever that is."

"Well, that's tomorrow by order of the governor of the commonwealth of Massachusetts," says the mate.

"You might a-missed yer reck'nin," says Bill.

"No," said the mate. "Here's a Boston paper a week old with the proclamation in it," and with that he hove the newspaper onto the raft.

"Well, where be we anyway, shipmet?" says Bill, softenin.

"We're five days out from Boston," says the mate.

"A-beatin and a-clawin up agin a head wind and sea," says Bill, scratchin his head and pullin the glass out of his pocket and holdin it up.

"Are ye comin aboard or ain't ye?" roared the mate, standin up in the stern.

"Stan by, shipmet," says Bill, "and leave me time to settle. Fair and stiddy at that. Thanks kindly, officer," says Bill, standin up himself alongside the chest. "The raft keeps her course for Bedford."

"Anything you're short of?" says the mate.

"I wouldn't refuse a little extra grog and somethin ready cooked," says Bill.

While we were layin to for the donation the moon came up off the stern post, and Bill spelled out the governor's proclamation. The mate did uncommonly well by us, and besides the grog sent us a four pound lump of plumduff. And the quartermaster who brought it had been a shipmet of Bill's somewhere in the China seas, and a finer night with a fairer wind I never saw aboard ship than that was time we got under way.

"I never knew any luck come of changin ships at sea when the other one was goin in the wrong direction," says Bill, "though I wouldn't mind boardin one headed for the 'Merican coast. I know Lige is layin off for me in Bedford, keepin his date, and I 'low to report thar soon's I can get ashore."

Somewhere about two bells Bill turned in behind the chest, and in five minutes he was snorin like a trumpet. The wind freshened, and the rafted bowled along for four hours at a three knot gait, and it must have been past midnight when I gave the helm to him. It seemed like I hadn't more than just got to sleep when Bill woke me up.

"Brace up, Jack," he says, "and lend a hand. There's a wreck o' some sort layin off the sta'bo'rd bow, and I 'low to sheer up and board 'er."

WHEN WE SAT DOWN TO THE SPREAD.

Sure enough, not two miles away was a hull layin rather low in the water, with the mizzenmast standin.

"I've had my eye onto her for an hour," says Bill, "and I'm a lubber if she don't belong to the two sticks we come up with this mornin."

BILL MARLIN'S THANKSGIVING.

a belayin pin in his hand, snortin like a porpoise. "Why don't ye speak a ship afore ye board her?" says he, cussin awful, and then he threw up his hands and dropped the pin.

"My God, forgive me!" he says. "It's Bill Marlin."

"What ef 'tis?" says Bill, gettin on his pins, mighty sore and put out. "What sort of a d——d blue nosed sea lawyer of a-walkin ghost be you anyway to shoot up out of a wreck and nigh skeer the life out o' two honest sailormen offen a raft, and them swamped and starvin? I'm a fo'castle cat stuck in tar ef I didn't think better o' you, Lige Hawkins," and with that they fell a-foul of each other, waltzin all over the deck, and while they was at it the Kanaker sailorman walked his black legs out of the companionway and began to dance around the two.

"Today's the day," says Bill, punchin Lige in the chest and gettin the Boston newspaper out of his oilskins. "There's the governor's proclamation. Read it."

"Well, I'm d——d!" says Lige, leerin at it upside down.

After Bill shook hands with the Kanaker man from the guano ship he introduced me all round and explained to Hawkins how we had left the Nancy and how we had refused to go on board the ship for Liverpool the night before.

By that time the sun was lightin up Hawkins' bald head, and he a-gapin at Bill, with his breeches in his hand, which the nigger had brought to him.

"Now," says Bill, "what be you layin here for, Lige Hawkins, and what's become of the skipper and the crew of the Lightfoot?"

"What am I layin here for?" says Hawkins. "I'm a-waitin for a ship into Boston. The old man and the rest o' the hands went aboard a bark bound into Bristol two weeks ago, and wanted me to go along with them, but I told 'em I'd see 'em d——d first, hevin a date with a shipmet in New Bedford on the 'Merican coast."

"Git into yer togs," says Bill. "We've got a chest full of plumduff and grog aboard the raft."

The Lightfoot was loaded with wool and some light merchandise, and when the crew left her Hawkins said the sea was so rough the skipper expected her to swamp, and it was all they could do to get off the men. There was no lack of provisions and stores on board, and the Kanaker man and I turned in and did the cookin, and Bill nailed the governor's proclamation to the mizzenmast.

"Business is business," says Bill.

"What's the bloomin cargo worth, Lige?"

"Nothin where she lays," says Hawkins, sorreyful. "If we had her into port, she'd be good for $100,000. It's a pity, Bill, so 'tis, but there ain't a yard of canvas onto 'er."

"That 'u'd be $25,000 apiece, allowin four lays into 'er share and share," says Bill.

"Waal," says Hawkins, "what of it?"

"Nothin," says Bill, "only I've brought along two mainsails and yer far'd sticks."

And with that the two went down the fore chains onto the raft.

By dinner time they had got a new set of sails onto the mizzenmast, hoisted the chest on board and laid their plans for riggin light canvas forward and takin the prize into New York, all of which we afterward did.

When we sat down to the spread on deck, besides the plumduff and the grog, we had soup and salt junk and marmalade and coffee, and Bill said, considerin of what we'd gone through and what we had before us, he'd be willin to give a small lay into the cargo for a sea parson to say grace onto the grub.

When we had cleared the board, we brought out the pipes and bacy from the chest, and all hands 'lowed we had plenty to be thankful for.

"I'm a plain sailorman," says Bill Marlin, "and a yo heave ho, but when I makes a date with a shipmet I'm goin for to keep it if so be I can, and the same for Lige Hawkins from New Bedford town, and a yo heave ho, heave ho."

The wind was fallin off, and we beat up slow. When I turned out, she was clean cut against the sky, her mizzenmast swayin across the stars, but by the time we made her it was gettin daylight. The sea was like oil when we came alongside and hitched onto her fore chains and climbed on deck.

"I ain't denyin," says Bill, "that there's comfort in standin on solid oak agin, and she ain't so bad stove, but I reckon we could work her by riggin some o' our spare canvas forrid. Jist you leer inter the galley, Jack," says Bill, "and I'll spy out the cabin."

With that he went rollin aft till he pitched up alongside the stumps of the mainmast.

"More dry rot, Jack, just like I told ye," roared Bill, lookin back.

That minute I near fell over into the chains, for up out of the cabin companion behind Bill was a human head as bald as a grape shot.

"What the h—l," says the head, and Bill was that skared, being powerful superstitious, that he started to run and caught his toe in the main hatch and rolled over on the deck. The bald-headed man came out in his shirt, with THANKSGIVING.

THANKSGIVING day is hailed with equal and uniform delight by the lovers of turkey and the lovers of football. In fact, the honors of this ever pleasant and interesting festival are divided between the rich and toothsome biped and the almost universal pigskin sphere. After the turkey, the plum pudding; after the plum pudding, which soothes and sustains one like the kiss of a summer girl by the moonlit sea, the football.

Some men go from the country to the city to see a game of football, while others go from the city to the country, when there is no game, to shoot birds. But they all eat turkey if this divine bird comes within their pecuniary reach. The Ethiop who is so unfortunate as to have no pecuniary reach worth speaking of must depend upon his natural reach to penetrate the foliage of his neighbor's tree and pluck therefrom the moonlit fowl as a watermelon or a Bartlett pear. Some men will eat corned beef and Irish stew on Thanksgiving day and imagine that they are doing the day and themselves justice. Such men are moral monstrosities that defy analysis. Those who would attempt to fathom them and arrive at an intelligible and satisfactory solution could make more money writing visiting cards with a telegraph office pen. Not more vain would it be to attempt to preserve in musical notation the spirited barcarole of the overripe November pig or to attempt to sound the depths of a country plumber's sophistry with an ordinary plumb line.

The old fan tailed gobbler will no more strut about the farmyard with the dignity and hauteur of a retail floorwalker. No more will he wave his great scarlet wattles like a danger signal preparatory to chasing the small boy, who would make him the unwilling recipient of a bucket of cold water. No more will he sit in a statuesque ball on the old elm and look wistfully over the russet cornfield, whose furrows are picturesquely punctuated with dull gold pumpkins. He has heard the whining winds of autumn rustling in the rosy foliage and his blazing side whiskers for the last time. Yesterday he was full of hope. Today he is full of chestnuts, and his drumsticks play a solo of joy on the souls of the people congregated about the table, especially that of the small boy, whose eyes throb with joy and who is as full of anticipation as the turkey is full of dressing. What a beautiful study is the old gobbler as he lies upon the platter, bronzed to a crisp, with his white meat shining through his tawny envelope that ever and anon breaks with a sound that sends ripples of softest music across the lilied millponds of our souls!

When the turkey is so good, it is no wonder that he usurps that portion of our inner man usually set apart for plum pudding or pumpkin pie. The man who likes plum pudding better than turkey, if such a man exists, should not fail to change matters by putting the last first and the first last. A Shanghai on Thanksgiving day scratches gravel in the background of oblivion. He is more remote and obscure than is a baseball player in the height of the skating season or a furrier in the sweltering dogday.

Thanksgiving day is a day of tender dreams that fill our souls with sweetest music. Usually it is a still, gray day, during which the dark, leafless trees stand sharply etched against a liquid atmosphere in which you can hear the partridge drum and the blue jay squawk a mile away. The smoke curls from the old farmhouse straight into the air, and from its quaint windows the crow can be seen circling wistfully over the old cornfield, with outspread wings, as if fearing to break the silence of the scene. And the old farmer is thankful that his sons have come back to spend this festal day with him at their old home. They are delighted, for once more they scent the roasting gobbler and dream of cracking the wishbone again, just as they did when small boys. And again they will have the dear old nightmare in the attic room that is colder than the barn in winter and hotter than the potato patch in summer. But they are really no happier than those who celebrate the day in a New York flat that is so small that it does not furnish sufficient elbow room to carve a turkey and therefore compels the family to have a fricassee or a canned turkey, neither of which is a dish equal to the requirements of so glorious an occasion.

The only time that Thanksgiving is not a success is when the turkey is so tough that the only way it can be disjointed seems to be by blasting it with dynamite. Such a turkey fills the conscientious housewife with horror and makes her register a vow to ever after subject the turkey to a thorough drubbing with a rolling pin in the same way that she does the average mustang steak. A turkey should be treated in this fashion before the dressing is inserted or not at all. Yet the gobbler is a peerless classic fowl that does more for Thanksgiving day than Thanksgiving day does for him, and we should cherish the sweet associations that surround him from the Greco-Roman with his drumsticks to the tug of war with his chaste enameled wishbone.

R. K. MUNKITTRICK.

BREAKING THE WISHBONE.

When to Lose the Wish and When to Win It.

A charming young widow who wants to break a wishbone with you is one of whom you should beware. She is very tantalizing, chic, clever, and, oh, so awfully sorry you didn't get your wish! The young widow is a mind reader and knows just what your thoughts are while you are holding the bone and looking down into her eyes. If you have to look up into a widow's eyes, there may be some hope for you, but when she looks up and you look down she can read every one of your thoughts. By the way, there is only one, only has been one, only can be one, thought passing through a man's mind when he is breaking a wishbone with a charming young widow—possession! She knows it as plainly as though written indelibly upon your forehead. That is her particular forte. And when you break the bone and find yourself possessed of the short end she will look up into your eyes with a look that will cause your poor back hair to crimp and say, with that pitying tone of voice never so well modulated as by a widow:

"I am so sorry you lost!"

No matter what the after result of a good dinner may bring forth, you cannot help but hie yourself away to some quiet resort obscure from prying and meddling eyes and bury your disappointment in beer, books or blues.

But when you break a wishbone with a sweet young girl it is a very different thing. Sweet young girls' hearts were made to be broken like the wishbone. You secure a deal of paradise while breaking bones with a sweet young girl, whereas you get generally wormwood and gall when you break bones with a fair widow. You throw all your art into the act of breaking a bone with a young girl, but when you break a bone with a fair widow you throw your heart in against her art, and she beats you nine times out of ten.

The best place to break a bone with a fair widow is in the corner of a snug sitting room, with the lights turned low. A man's heart fire glows more vividly upon his cheeks then; also it is more fun for the widow. She quite prefers earnestness of purpose and is ever ready for a tilt of hearts against arts. You might win a prize in the lottery of life if you would break a bone with a fair young girl with your heart as fixed upon the one purpose—possession—as it was with the widow.

"I AM SO SORRY YOU LOST."

Did you ever break a bone with a staid old aunt whose fortune you hoped to possess? If you lose your wish, your fortune is made, for she'll put you down as a real nice nephew without sordid fancies, but if you win she'll pierce you with a look and say:

"I expected you wanted me to hurry up and die."

Always make it a point to lose your wish when breaking a bone with an expectant aunt who has a fortune.

When a colored gentleman breaks the wishbone of a turkey, he always throws the shorter end over his left shoulder. That means that he wishes next year's hen and turkey roosts will not be locked nor guarded by a bulldog.

My wife broke a bone with me last Thanksgiving. She won her wish, but has not got it. I haven't been very witty this season; hence have not written the way to that sealskin sack.—H. S. Keller.

Reflections.

The kind word, costing the giver but little, may make glad a lifetime.

A word may be an illuminated thought and become the most treasured of keepsakes.

Some there are whose kindness is so delicately rendered as to make it beyond description.

That creed that is lived out in freely caring for others and doing kind deeds is not to be doubted.

The heart has a language that records deeds as well as words, according to its own interpretation.

The Joy of It.

Thanksgiving day is almost gone,
And peace reigns overhead,
And mother's joy—her own sweet boy—
Is trundled off to bed.

Yet what are those unearthly sounds
That pierce the midnight air?
And what's that throbbing noise we hear
Come running down the stair?

It is our little household pet,
Who tosses upon high
And wages an unequal fight
With turkey and mince pie.

Philosophical.

Wife (gazing at the baby)—Think, darling, how much we have to be thankful for this Thanksgiving.

WALTER IRVING CLARKE, Managing Editor.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., NOV. 26, 1894

THE WEATHER.

For New Jersey, Tuesday, Increasing Cloudiness, and Possibly Light Rain by Tuesday Afternoon or Night; Warmer Tuesday Afternoon; Northwest Shifting to Southerly Winds.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Allan Lane, formerly of Plainfield, is visiting friends in town.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson F. Fulper this morning.

Mrs. Jacob Thorn, mother of Edward P. Thorn, passed her ninety-third birthday Tuesday.

John D. Holmes of Honesdale, Pa., and his bride (Miss May Cortright) have been visiting Mrs. Holmes's parents of East Sixth street.

The youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. John Wakefield of Park place, who had a relapse Saturday of that terrible malady, diphtheria, is a little better today.

John Morton arrived home yesterday from Scotland. He was a passenger on the Lucania. The voyage was a very stormy one, and part of the time the decks were kept clear.

Edward Nelson, the faithful ticket agent at the North Avenue station, had the rare pleasure of a Sunday off, yesterday, and spent it at the home of his brother William in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Hannah C. Adams, who has been visiting her son Henry E. Adams, 306 Orange street, leaves tomorrow for her home, Indianapolis. She is in the 83d year of her age, and in excellent health.

Wm. Uhrhahn and Edward Jacot took advantage of the beautiful Sunday weather to enjoy a visit to Brooklyn. In the afternoon they escorted two beautiful belles through Prospect Park, and were the envy of all beholders.

Paul Ackerly, for the past year a faithful member of The Daily Press staff, today attached himself to The Elizabeth Herald, as editor of that paper with an interest in the business. The Press wishes him abundant success.

Miss Margaret Mac L. Eager is in town and will superintend the final drill of the National Festivities. Miss Eager has just returned from Portland, Oregon, where she has conducted a brilliant and successful Kirmess, with audiences of 3,000 and 4,000.

The singing yesterday at the sessions of the Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed Church, was more enjoyable than usual by the accompanying notes of the clarionet, in the dextrous hands of Lyman R. Allen. Mr. Allen will be urged by the school to continue playing each Sunday.

J. W. Coddington, Fred Hut and Joseph A. Blatz returned yesterday morning from a hunting trip of one week in Virginia. They visited Chincoteague, Chincoteague and White Oak Swamps, Malvern Hill and other places and met with good luck. They brought back over 150 quail, large numbers of rabbits, etc.

Rev. Franklin G. Warnick, formerly of this city and now of Matawan, publishes in The Mystic Mirror a portrait and biography of Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of Mt Olive Baptist Church. It is an excellent record of brave fighting for an education against heavy obstacles, and of rich success in the self-chosen work of Gospel ministry.

Most distressing affliction has come to the household of William Blimm, who lost his wife under peculiarly sad circumstances this morning. Mrs. Blimm was in her twenty-seventh year, and beloved by a large circle of friends. The funeral takes place from the German Reformed Church on Craig place Wednesday afternoon at 2:30. Mother and infant child will be laid to rest together. Mrs. Blimm was a sister of Charles Seibel, driver for No. 3 Engine Company. Rev. Mr. Hauser will officiate at the funeral.

Joseph E. Smith died at his home, 12 Wilson avenue, yesterday, at the age of 43. He had been ill for a year with a complication of diseases. Decedent leaves a wife, a son and three daughters. He was for many years employed as a coachman by Charles Potter, Jr. His brother, Adam Smith, works there now, and other brothers, Michael and Martin, are employed by Dr. Boone and James Clark respectively. The funeral will be held at the house tomorrow morning at 8:30 and in St. Joseph's Church at 9.

The gift of portraiture makes of its possessor a benefactor of mankind. That it is largely possessed by N. E. King of 483 Lexington avenue, Brooklyn, is proved by his latest Plainfield work, a painting of W. L. Force, late senior proprietor of The Daily Press and Weekly Constitutionalist. The likeness of Mr. Force has been placed on the sanctum wall above the desk which was his; and his old associates, cherishing his memory, find it so like his living presence that it almost seems as though he were again a familiar figure of the daily life from which his kindly nature and valued counsel are sorrowfully missed.

The Socialist-Labor Ticket.

The local leaders of the Socialist-Labor party visited Justice Newcorn's office Saturday evening and made arrangements for the ticket which they will run at the election next month. To make the ticket legal required the affidavits of twenty-three men.

Those nominated and accepting are:
For Mayor—James Bell.
For Councilmen—
First Ward—Otto J. Piehler.
Third Ward—Claus Wallander.
Fourth Ward—Frank Cullen.
School Trustees—Jacob Grieb, Arthur Scott.

It is expected that John James will be put on the ticket for Assessor and those in charge will meet at Justice Newcorn's office this evening, and have Mr. James added to the list.

Forced to Work on Sunday.

Owing to the treacherous nature of the material encountered Saturday on Putnam avenue, Foreman Clark and his gang worked there all day yesterday, and completed the pipe laying to Woodland avenue.

Today they are working on Grant avenue with a good supply of pipe.

The indications are that no further delay will occur from lack of pipe.

—George Lewis of Manning avenue began this morning as a hackman, having purchased a rig from Augustus Urzinger of Jackson avenue.

Simplicity and Charity.

We smile at the childlike simplicity of the kind-hearted man whose charity "believeth all things, hopeth all things," even of those whom the man of the world distrusts. "But," as Dr. Holmes says, "the angels laugh, too, at the good he has done." Dr. Dobbin, an old-fashioned clergyman of Dublin, was noted for his kindness to the poor, and for the simplicity which trusted them as though they could be guilty of no deception. Once a man was begging at the clergyman's carriage window. Having no change about him, he handed the beggar a guinea, saying: "Go, my poor man, get me change of that, and I will give you a shilling." He never saw the beggar's face again. One day his wife, on coming home, found him in the hall with his hands behind his back, as if hiding something. She insisted on knowing what it was, and he timidly brought out from behind his back a roasted leg of mutton. He had quietly taken it from the spit in the kitchen, to give to a poor woman waiting at the door.—Youth's Companion.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best Cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. At L. W. Randolph's Drug Store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. Our price 45c. and 90c.

REMARKABLE CURES
Of Recent Date.
A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.
To the Public:
I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.
I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.
JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.
Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.
To the Sick, Suffering and Afflicted:
For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.
So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.
I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.
PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

Her latest title

IN A COUNTRY PRACTICE.

IS A THANKSGIVING STORY OF ABSORBING INTEREST

All there is of pathos and humor in the lives of the country folk of New England has been delightfully portrayed in her writings. It is difficult to believe that any reader will not at least be interested by a perusal of the story we shall present. Here is a bit of her manuscript:

In a Country Practice

I

Dr Best, the old professor and king of the medical school was talking eagerly to a pleasant-faced slight young student who stood before him. The young man had taken his degree and received his diploma only the day before, he had graduated at the top of the class and as Dr. Best had said to one of his fellow professors as they sat together signing the diplomas, he was the only man in the class who really had a genius for his profession.

Dr Best was a New York physician of wide reputation and had kept his professorship in the medical school of one of the small inland colleges both because it was his own college and because the few weeks in which his lectures counted, gave him almost the only vacation time he could

LIBERTY IN HIS DEATH

Suicide of One of the Leather Bank Thieves.

Aged Frederick Baker, Who With Samuel Seely Secured $343,000, Drowns Himself at His Flushing Home To Escape Arrest—No Trace of the Fugitive Bookkeeper.

New York, Nov. 26.—Superintendent of Police Byrnes and the police of all large cities in the United States are searching for Samuel G. Seely. His defalcation at the Shoe and Leather bank is $343,000, according to last accounts, but may be even more. Most of this money, the police believe, he has with him, despite his counsels protest to the contrary.

Frederick R. Baker, the aged confederate of Seely, has committed suicide. His body was found floating in the bay at Flushing, L. I., where he resides. His family has disappeared, and all efforts to trace any of the missing money through him have failed. Financial circles are greatly excited, as the theft is the largest known in years.

Frank W. Angel, counsel for Seely, was seen at his home in Jersey City.

"The defalcation," said he, "which began about nine years ago, started, according to Seely's statement to me, through an honest mistake in bookkeeping. But the confederate induced Seely to allow other overdrafts, which Seely did in daily epectation that the promise to make good the deficiency would be fulfilled.

"To conceal the overdrafts falsification of the books became necessary. As I understand it, the confederate was able to keep his bank account by making bona fide deposits of say $200 or more at a time, Seely giving him credit for $1,200, and to conceal these false credit entries Seely would from time to time make transfers from other accounts.

"What became of the $343,000, which Seely assured me had been kept by his confederate, is a mystery that may never be satisfactorily solved.

"I believe that the confederate invested the money in real estate through a 'dummy' and so thoroughly covered his tracks that the property may never be found.

"What became of Seely's comparatively insignificant share of the enormous plunder is even more a mystery than what became of the lion's share kept by his confederate. Seely's salary was only $1,800 a ear, and this was not much, if any, more than enough to pay taxes, water rates, insurance, repairs, interest on the mortgages on his house and his living expenses.

"The latter were by no means extravagant, and his wife did not even keep a domestic servant, but did her own housework. Neither Seely nor his wife dressed extravagantly.

"It was a week ago last Friday that Seely came to my office and made his confession to me. Besides advising him to give himself up to the district attorney at once, I urged him to tell all he knew about his confederate's transactions so that the bank might recover some if not all of the stolen money, which would lead to mitigate his offence. I did not advise him to abscond.

"No message of any kind has been received from the absconder. Mrs. Seely, whom I saw, is dangerously and probably fatally ill, wholly on account of her husband's defalcation. She does not know where he is and is unaware of the immense amount for which he is a defaulter, or the practically lifelong imprisonment to which he is liable when captured."

FOILED BY A WOMAN.

Saved a Train from Being Held Up by the Cook Gang.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 26.—A plan to hold up an east-bound train on the Kansas & Arkansas Valley railroad by the Cook gang was discovered and frustrated by the railroad officials.

When the train reached a siding near Fort Gibson it was flagged by a woman who had run five miles to warn it of a hold-up which had been planned. Twenty-five armed men had taken possession of a section house.

The wife of the section boss eluded the watchfulness of the gang, and resolved to save the train. She ran to the next station and gave the alarm. Armed men were placed on board, and the train pulled slowly by the section house where the bandits were concealed, but no attempt to hold up the train was made. The bandits discovered that their plans were known.

Mgr. Satolli at Wilmington.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 26.—Catholics of the diocese of Wilmington had the honor of a visit from Mgr. Satolli, the papal delegate, who came to join in the re-dedication of St. Joseph's church at Duponts Banks, after its enlargement and general improvement. He also participated in the blessing of the three handsome altars recently presented to the churh by J. Smith Brennan, of Wilmington, by the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and by the sodality of the church. The services at the church began with a mass celebrated at the house of sisters by Dr. Papi, Mgr. Satolli's secretary. Then the ceremonies of dedication and the blessing of the altars began. They were participated in by Mgr. Satolli, Bishop Curtis and the Catholic clergy of this city.

The Czar Will Remit Taxes.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 26.—On his wedding day the czar will issue manifestoes remitting arrears of taxes and some sentences and recording other acts of clemency. The streets in the long route of the wedding procession will be lined with troops in full dress, sailors and pages.

FOUND A GREAT VILLAGE.

Another Cliff Dwellers' Settlement Discovered in Arizona.

Prescott, Ariz., Nov. 26.—The most wonderful village of cliff dwellers extant has just been discovered in the Bradshaw mountains.

The village is one of the most inaccessible canons, and has never before been seen by white men. It was stumbled on by accident by two prospectors, White and Williams. From the description they gave there is no doubt that this is the largest village of the kind ever discovered. It is located along the high banks of Willow cannon and the houses are estimated to number 260.

There are three natural terraces in the cannon wall and the dwellings open back from them. Narrow steps in the rocks, now almost worn away seem to indicate that this was the method employed in ascent and descent.

Several of the houses were explored and large quantities of pottery and some instruments were found. In one house a skeleton of a man not over four feet eight inches in height was discovered. The canon at this place is half a mile wide, and shows every evidence of having been cultivated. As far as known no other evidence of cultivation has ever been discovered of this departed race.

A party is now being organized to thoroughly explore the newly found village.

CHEROKEE BILL WOUNDED.

His Thigh Bone Shattered and His Arm Injured.

Claremore, I. T., Nov. 26.—Jake Hill, a cow boy, employed on the Halsell ranch, has reported that while hunting cattle he came across Cherokee Bill and Verdigris Kid at Bird creek. Cherokee Bill was dressing the wound in his thigh and took out of the wound a piece of bone about an inch long. The wound was very much inflamed as a result of a cold, making the flesh around it black and ghastly. He declares he will not have a doctor dress it, for he does not know of anyone he could trust. He also has a wound in his arm and a slight scratch across the breast, both results of the fight at Talala. Verdigris Kid was not wounded.

Cherokee Bill swears he will kill Buck Bruner, the deputy marshal who has been wearing Cherokee Bill's hat as trophy of the fight at Talala.

He wants to rob one more train on the Kansas & Arkansas Valley road, after which he is going to cross the ocean and quit his life of outlawry.

AN HEIRESS IN PRISON.

Mrs. Adelaide Featherstone in a Wisconsin Jail for Larceny.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 26.—Mrs. Adelaide Featherstone, the heiress to a fortune, is an inmate of the house of correction, where she is serving a sentence for larceny.

After languishing in the county jail for four months awaiting trial, she pleaded guilty. It is said she took this action in preference to requesting aid from her wealthy relatives.

It is believed the woman could have escaped conviction if she had demanded a trial, and it is thought that even if she was convicted a fine instead of imprisonment would have been the penalty inflicted.

THE MUFTI OF MOOSH.

He Is Decorated for Slaughtering Christian Armenians.

London, Nov. 26.—A correspondent in Constantinople says:

"It is announced officially that the Turkish subjects in Sassoun are attending to their business and peaceable travelers are not disturbed. This announcement is made boldly, despite the fact that the foreign embassies know the contrary to be true.

"The mufti of Moosh has been decorated although he is one of the officials implicated in the recent excesses. The Armenians are anxious to know whether the powers will make united representations."

Bound and Robbed.

Montclair, N. J., Nov. 26.—Two men entered the waiting room of the Greenwood Lake railroad station at Bloomfield, where acting ticket agent C. W. Jacobus was in charge. While one covered him with a revolver the other emptied the cash drawer, which contained about $400. This done they proceeded to tie the agent hand and foot and hurried away.

Jacobus soon managed to slip free, and at once notified the police, who were given a good description of the robbers. The country is being scoured for them.

Rich Gold Mines Discovered.

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 26.—A veritable bonanza gold mine has been found at the very summit of the Cascade range of mountains near Slate creek. Two young men from Anakortes named Barron and Gerrish are the lucky finders. The boys got $12,000 with plenty of the same rich dirt in sight. Miners have flocked to the new Eldorado.

Dr. Whittemore the Victim.

New York, Nov. 26.—Dr. Francis S. Whittemore of Sandwich, Mass., is now known positively to be the man who met death Saturday night at the Cortlandt street elevated railway station, while trying to rescue his friend, Geo. H. Basley, from death.

Denounced Secretary Carlisle.

Boston, Nov. 26.—The Knights of Labor freight handlers at their meeting denounced the $50,000,000 bond issue and called for $500,000,000 in legal tender to break the alleged gold ring.

Gillery Denies His Death.

New York, Nov. 26.—Elias Gillery, supposed to have been killed by a train and buried in Potter's field, walked into the morgue and denied that he had lost his life.

"Pansy" Butler Disappears.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Nov. 26.—Ex-Congressman Walter Butler, author of the resolution making the pansy the national flower, has mysteriously disappeared.

Hired Men Burned To Death.

Pana, Ill., Nov. 26.—The large barn of P. L. Dodge, a wealthy farmer, was destroyed by fire. Two hired men were burned to death.

Thirty Soldiers Killed.

Rio Grande do Sul, Nov. 26.—Thirty men were killed in a fight here between veteran soldiers and recruits.

GREAT STORMS AT SEA

Incoming Steamers Report Many Terrific Gales.

Numbers of Vessels Overdue at Various Ports and Stories of the Destruction of Numberless Craft Related—Sailors Drowned Off Cape Charles, Va.

Boston, Nov. 26.—Three overdue steamships, the Kansas, Venetian and British Queen, have arrived here all partially wrecked. They report the roughest weather known in years, and their officers say they have never seen so many wrecks, as were passed by the steamers.

All the vessels ran into hurricanes, and lost part of their boats and woodwork. The Kansas also lost one seaman who was washed overboard last Thursday night.

Grave fears are entertained for the fishing fleet, there being nearly a hundred small vessels out, from which nothing has been heard.

Cape Charles, Va., Nov. 26.—The schooner West Hampden has gone ashore on Diamond shoals. She is a complete wreck, having been pounded to pieces by the tremendous seas. Her crew of four men are supposed to be lost.

Baltimore, Nov. 26.—The Neptune line steamship, Gov. Ino, which sailed from Shields, Eng., for Baltimore Nov. 3 is several days overdue and there is considerable anxiety felt for her safety.

Incoming vessels uniformly report severe storms on the passage across. It is thought that the Gov. Ino may have been delayed by an accident to her machinery.

Chatham, Mass., Nov. 26.—A gale with flurries of snow is blowing here. The weather is the fiercest known in years. Fully two hundred schooners have taken refuge in the harbor. A tremendous sea is running outside and it is reported that a large three-masted schooner has gone on the rocks outside the point. Nothing is known of her crew.

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—The American line steamship Indiana from Liverpool for Philadelphia is a week overdue.

The Indiana, though a small steamer in comparison with the more modern liners, is a staunch vessel and in buffeting the seas some of her machinery may have broken and thus compelled her to proceed slowly. The Indiana has 140 passengers aboard, all steerage. The Pennsylvania from Antwerp, is also a few days overdue. The steamship Calvin has arrived and reports passing on Nov. 21, life raft with a bucket attached to it. "Number 2" was painted on the raft. It was the kind used by passenger steamships.

The wreck of the coal laden schooner Teresa Williams is reported. She was bound from Boston to Camden. Her crew was saved.

New York, Nov. 26.—The steamships Paris and Lucania, both arrived here two days overdue, for the first time in their history. The officers of both vessels report tremendous hurricanes. The Paris passed the wreck of a waterlogged bark and a schooner dismantled and deserted.

SHE USED A HATCHET.

Mrs. Warhurst Probably Fatally Injured Ezekiel Lake.

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 26.—Eliza J. Warhurst is locked up in the central station charged with a murderous assault with a hatchet on Ezekiel Lake, residing in a large corporation building at 36 Towers street. Lake was accused of stealing a horse blanket. Then Mrs. Lake used a stick over Lake's head. He got into the corridor leading to his own rooms, when Mrs. Warhurst, who followed him, picked up a lather's hatchet and struck him on the neck with it.

She struck a glancing blow, cutting an ugly wound, but not quite severing the jugular vein. Dr. Westall was summoned and found Lake in a weak condition from the loss of blood. The doctor thinks that Lake will recover if no complications arise. Two very serious assaults have previously occurred in the same building.

JACK THE RIPPER JAILED.

The Atrocious Murderer Alleged To Be In an English Asylum.

New York, Nov. 26.—A special correspondent in London states in positive terms that "Jack the Ripper," the perpetrator of the series of shocking murders in the Whitechapel district, is confined in an English lunatic asylum where he has been locked up for the past three years.

The correspondent states that it was Dr. Forbes Winslow, one of the most celebrated insanity experts in the United Kingdom that revealed the fact.

The revelation is particularly interesting just now, as it sets at naught the theory of some people that the series of murders recently committed in Denver were done by the same hand that horrified London.

Died from Her Burns.

Middletown, Conn., Nov. 26.—Mrs. Martin Crowell of Rocky Hill, while going down stairs with a lighted lamp, fell and broke the lamp and was burned severely about the face and body before she was discovered. She died from her injuries two hours afterwards.

A Murderer Killed in a Church.

Carrollton, Miss., Nov. 26.—Claude Moss, a murderer, was shot and instantly killed in a church here last night by Marshal Chatham, who was trying to arrest him.

Bishop Haman Officiated.

Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 26.—Te cornerstone of St. John's United Evangelical church has been laid by Bishop Haman. The new church will cost $5,000.

Col. T. A. Dyer Dead.

Chester, Pa., Nov. 26.—Col. T. A. Dyer, one of the most prominent capitalists and business men of Delaware county, died here aged 56 years.

Fell Under the Train.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 26.—Thomas Cooney of Pittston, Pa., fell under a train on the Pittsburg railroad here and was ground to pieces.

COULD HARDLY BREATHE.

Catarrh of the Nose, Throat, and Stomach—Life Made Miserable by Headaches, Pain and Cough.

Lida McCandless, No. 1230 South Thirty-fifth street, Philadelphia, in conversation with a reporter, said: "I had a very bad case of catarrh of the nose, throat and stomach, with frequent headaches, pain under the shoulder blades and a horrible cough. I had to keep my mouth constantly open day and night to breathe, and felt as miserable as one possibly could. I was advised to try Munyon's Catarrh Cure. I am happy to say that from the beginning I felt relieved and continued to grow better until now I am entirely well. I am so thankful that this remarkable remedy was ever discovered, and hope others will take advantage of my experience."

Have you Catarrh? Are you willing to investigate a treatment that cures Catarrh by removing the cause? If so ask your druggist for a 25c bottle of Catarrh Tablets. The Catarrh Cure will eradicate the disease from the system, and the Tablets will cleanse and heal the affected parts and restore them to a natural and healthful condition.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

HOW PORT ARTHUR FELL

Japanese Officers Tell of the Great Battle.

Marshal Oyama and Admiral Ito Describe the Capture of Fort After Fort Belonging to the Chinese. Twenty Thousand Prisoners Taken with Cannon and Ammunition.

Tokio, Nov. 26.—Marsal Oyama has sent this report from Port Arthur:

On Nov. 21 the Japanese army attacked the forts near Port Arthur. The right division stormed and captured the fort to the westward of the artillery parade ground at 8:30 in the morning.

It then advanced in the direction of Port Arthur and stormed and captured Fort Robinson. The left division stormed and captured the fort southeast of Hachiviso. On the 22d the two divisions took all the other forts. The enemy fought bravely throughout the attacks.

The number of Japanese killed and wounded exceeds 200. The killed, wounded and prisoners of the enemy can not now be estimated.

A great quantity of ammunition and other materials and many cannon were taken. The enemy numbered more than 20,000.

London, Nov. 26.—A Port Arthur correspondent sends this dispatch:

"Marshal Oyama had approached Port Arthur steadily for two weeks with his arms in two divisions. Progress was slow and difficult, as the roads, where there were any, were poor and the artillery could only be brought forward only after the pioneers had prepared the way.

"The villages were almost empty of supplies. Many of them had been plundered bare by the Chinese.

Skirmishing began on Nov. 17. Every fort had heavy artillery, which was used with effect. The large Krupp guns at Hokinsan apparently were served by skilled artillerymen and were especially destructive.

"On the evening of the 21st the Chinese still held eight or nine redoubts on the coast and had twenty guns in working order. The Japanese bivouacked on the hills. Early in the morning of the 22d they began storming the redoubts.

"They captured Fort Laomu after a sharp short fight. The other positions were captured in quick succession without heavy losses to the Japanese. Eighty guns and an enormous quantity of rice were taken. It was wholly a land fight. The course of events was signalled to the Japanese fleet off the coast."

Admiral Ito, in his report, says:

"Port Arthur was taken on the 22d by the army alone. The united squadrons merely attracted the attention of the enemy's seaward batteries. Since yesterday I have been removing the torpedoes from the mouth of the port, dockyard and arsenal. The ships in the port are handed over to the naval department. The dockyards and arsenal are in perfect working order."

Admiral Ito neglected to specify more closely the ships captured, and he denies the report that there was a naval battle. It is believed that the ships in question are Chinese warships which took refuge at Port Arthur after the battle at the mouth of the Yalu and, although fully repaired, did not venture out again. Unofficial news is to the effect that Admiral Ito did not take part in the attack because the entrance to the port was studded with torpedoes and all the usual landmarks for the guidance of pilots had been removed.

A dispatch boat has left Ping Yang inlet for Port Arthur to convey the Mikado's congratulations to Marshal Oyama.

MANGLED BY WHEELS.

Horrible Death of Three People at Green Springs.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 26.—A terrible accident occurred at Green Springs, Pa., resulting in the death of Isaac Taylor, aged 60 years, his wife, aged 38, and a Miss Kidwell, aged 17 years.

They were crossing the south branch bridge on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad when the New York and Chicago express train, westward, came thundering along at the rate of thirty-five miles an hour and struck them.

They were hurled into the river below, a distance of fifty feet. All were instantly killed. They were badly mangled, the body of the young lady being horribly mutilated. The engineer said he did not see them until he was within two car lengths of them, and then it was utterly impossible to stop the train.

Murdered the Rebel Puck.

Oaxaca, Mexico, Nov. 26.—The government authorities here have received advices from the state of Yucatan of the assassination of Puck, the notorious rebel Indian chief. He was at the head of the powerful Indian tribe of Yucatan that for many years has caused the general government an enormous outlay of money and the loss of several thousand soldiers. Puck was killed by a subordinate chief of his own tribe.

Pennoyers' Son Dead.

Williamstown, Mass., Nov. 26.—Horace Nathaniel Pennoyer, aged 19 years, the only son of Governor Pennoyer of Portland, Ore., died here of typhoid fever. He was a member of the freshman class at Williams college.

More Destructive Earthquakes.

Palermo, Nov. 26.—Severe earthquakes shook large districts of Sicily. The villages of Sciatri, Sampieri, Milea, Acquacalida and San Roberto were destroyed.

Coal Operator Ely Dead.

Bayonne, N. J., Nov. 26.—Ezra B. Ely died in this city. He was 56 years old, and was widely known in New York and Pennsylvania as a coal operator.

Barley and Schooner Lost.

Oswego, Nov. 26.—The schooner Baltic has been wrecked near here and 12,600 bushels of barley lost.

Consecrated a Church.

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 26.—Archbishop Corrigan yesterday consecrated the church of the Sacred Heart.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

Yale and Harvard Men Recovering from Sundry Bruises.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 26.—Harvard men are feeling rather sore over the result of the football game. It is not that usual feeling of soreness that comes after defeat, but something worse.

The men all feel that the Harvard team outplayed the Yale team, and but for "that Yale luck" and Umpire Boviard's decisions, the victory would be where it rightfully belongs.

The players, at least those who live in the vicinity of Boston, have all gone home, but will meet at the quarters in Auburndale. There will be no practice and the practice Friday will not be in secret. Wednesday morning the team leaves for Philadelphia to play the University of Pennsylvania.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 26.—Fred T. Murphy, the Yale football player, who was knocked insensible in the game against Harvard, returned to this city in good condition.

He alighted from a cab about 9 o'clock last night on the college campus and walked to his room as unconcernedly as if his name had not been spoken by more mouths than any other person's in America within the past twenty-four hours. He will suffer no permanent effect whatever from the encounter with Mackie's boot and will play with Yale in the annual game with Princeton at New York next Saturday.

DISCUSSED THE RACE PROBLEM.

Opening Session of the Christian School of the Kingdom.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 26.—The convention or "School of the Kingdom" to be held under the auspices of the American Institute of Christian Sociology and the "National Institutional Church League" opened at Plymouth tabernacle with an address on the race problem by Rev. W. E. C. Wright, D. D., of Cleveland, O. He was followed by Prof. D. Augustus Straker of this city, who delivered a short address on the same subject.

Rev. Dr. Herron of Iowa, president of the American institute, will preside over the deliberations of the convention which will last eightdays.

Among the prominent persons who will participate in the proceedings of the convention are Prof. Edward W. Bemis, Ph.D., L.L. D., of the University of Chicago; Samuel Dickie of Albion college; Rev. Charles A. Dickinson, D. D., of Boston; Rev. J. L. Scudder, D. D., of New Jersey; Prof. J. R. Commons, of Indiana State university and Rev. Thomas C. Hall, D. D., of Chicago.

THOUSANDS WERE LANDED.

Immigrants During the Year Just Ended Came in Floods.

Washington, Nov. 26.—An exhaustive review of the operation of our immigrant laws is presented by the annual report of Herman Stump, United States superintendent of immigration, just made public.

It shows that during the fiscal year, 1894, ended June 30, 288,220 immigrants arrived in this country of whom 285,631 were landed, 2,389 debarred from landing because of being under contract to perform labor made previous to their arrival.

Of the immigrants landed, 96,000 were destined for, New York state, 42,000 for Pennsylvania, 25,000 for Massachusetts and 22,000 for Illinois. The others were scattered throughout the United States, no other state receiving a greater number than 10,000.

Immigrants destined for southern states all told did not exceed 12,000.

WOULD BURN THE TOWN.

Incendiaries Attempt To Destroy Zanesville, Ohio.

Zanesville, O., Nov. 26.—A systematic attempt was made to destroy the city by fire. At first a false alarm called the engines to the eighth ward, and while they were trying to locate the fire, an alarm rang in from the seventh ward, a mile distant, where a large barn was burning.

Five minutes later fire broke out in a vacant house in another part of the city, and then there was another alarm from the ninth ward, also an outlying district.

The department was unable to take care of them all and a house belonging to William Muller was consumed and another one slightly damaged.

Considerable excitement exists as the fires are regarded as an attempt to burn the town for the purpose of plunder and robbery.

A Train Kills a Woman.

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 26.—An unknown woman was struck by a freight train and instantly killed at the Sterling crossing. The body is at the morgue awaiting identification. She was apparently 45 years of age and wore a black cloth dress, a long black velvet cloak and a black hat. Nothing was found on the body that would identify her. Her face was mangled and her features are unrecognizable.

Another Double Tragedy.

Lancaster, Pa., Nov. 26.—A terrible tragedy was discovered in the southern part of the city in a house on Woodward street, occupied by Jacob Mohow and Mrs. Kate Donan. The dead body of Mohow and the unconscious body of the woman were found with bullets in their brains. The supposition is that Mohow shot the woman and then committed suicide.

Honored the Fenians' Memory.

Dublin, Nov. 26.—Large parades in honor of the executed Fenians were held in Cork on Limerick. The mayor presided over a memorial meeting of 6,000 persons.

A Society Leader Poisoned.

Cincinnati, Nov. 26.—Wealthy Mrs. Alexander Krell, leader of the four hundred, swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid by mistake. She died in horrible agony.

Baptized at Freezing Point.

Red Bank, N. J., Nov. 26.—Two persons were baptized in the Shrewsbury river by the colored Baptist association with the mercury at freezing point.

In the Blackstone River.

Woonsocket, R. I., Nov. 26.—The body of Miss Laura M. Bates, who has been missing since Thursday night, was found in the Blackstone river.

Local Weather Forecast.

PAPERS POSTAGE FREE

Postmaster General Bissell Is in Favor of It.

Extension of the Civil Service Rules Advocated in His Annual Report. What the Postal Department Has Cost the Government—Against Government Telegraph Lines.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Postmaster General Bissell has made his annual report. He favors the extension of the civil service law to all postoffices, and a rigid examination of the second-class department. He also favors the admittance free of all bona fide newspapers and magazines.

Going into the details of last year's business, he gives the following figures: The number of miles of post-route run, 1,100,000. Number of stamps manufactured, 8,300,000. Number of envelopes manufactured, 1,800,000. Number of postal cards manufactured, 1,500,000. Pieces mailed, 15,700,000. Letters mailed, 7,400,000. Mail matter distributed and re-distributed by railway postal clerks, 27,500,000 pieces. Number of pieces handled in the dead letter office, 24,000. Daily transactions in money order business, $1,100,000. Daily expenses, $231,100.

The deficiency in postal revenues for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1894, was $9,243,935. The total revenue derived was $75,080,479, and the expenditures $84,324,414.

For the current fiscal year Mr. Bissell estimates that the expenditures will amount to $90,399,485, leaving an estimated deficiency of $5,971,736, and his estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, place expenditures at $91,059,283, and the deficiency at only $4,151,876.

Regarding the abuses of second class privileges he says the volume of second class business grew from 143,000,000 pounds in 1888, to 256,000,000 in 1893, more than doubling in six years. Mr. Bissell says also no one can believe that such an increase is legitimate, and he adds that it is estimated that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1894, out of about 451,000,000 pounds of mail matter of all classes carried, 299,000,000, or nearly two-thirds, went under the second class rates, leaving a net loss to the government on its transportation of $16,973,000.

"This calculation," the postmaster general says, "applies to transportation alone. The separate cost of distribution and delivery I will not attempt to estimate, but any one can see that these items of expenditure would largely swell the loss."

Continuing he remarks that he does not advocate a change of rates now levied upon legitimate newspapers and periodical magazines. His purpose is to urge the withdrawal of low postage rates from the large class of pretended periodicals that are now improperly enjoying them; not only on account of the inherent propriety of that course, but because he is almost hopeless of ever seeing the financial condition of the department properly established until such withdrawal is brought about. The most conspicuous class of these pretended periodicals, he adds, are what are now generally known as serial paper covered books.

During the last six years, the postoffice department has accepted for entry 24,304 new publications purporting to be of the second class, yet according to a prominent newspaper directory, the net increase of newspapers and periodical publications during the same time was 3,747, or 15 per cent. of the number of entries.

If these so-called periodicals were shut out, he concludes, bona fide newspapers could be carried free. He then speaks of extending the civil service law, and takes up the postal telegraph scheme. He differs with Mr. Wanamaker, and says that the idea is wholly impracticable and as Great Britain's annual deficit is $800,000, it wold, in this country, amount to $25,000,000.

HAD THE CHILDREN.

Boarded With a Woman in Detroit, but Holmes Took Them Away.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 26.—The Detroit police were asked to look up Mrs. Lucinda Burns and ascertain whether she had in her possession the two children of Pitezel, whom the insurance swindler, H. H. Holmes, confessed to Philadelphia police that he had left with Mrs. Burns while in this city Oct. 12.

The woman was found in a cheap boarding house on Congress street. At first she refused to discuss the matter, but finally denied that she had the children or knew where they were or had ever seen Holmes.

Later Mrs. Burns withdrew her denials and said she had had charge of the children for several weeks. Three weeks ago, however, Holmes came to the city and took them away, she knows not where, at the same time beating her out of a $2 dollar board bill.

A VICTORY FOR PASKOLA.

It Receives the Official Endorsement of Eminent Experts and a Jury of Representative Citizens.

The suit brought by Ohio's Food Commissioner against a Cincinnati druggist for selling Paskola on the ground that it was nothing but glucose, resulted in a great victory for Paskola and a verdict against the State.

During the course of the trial, Prof. Shaller of the University of Cincinnati, testified that Paskola was not glucose, and even if it was, it would be harmless. He also bore witness to its activity as a digestive agent.

Prof. Wm. Dickore of the Miami College, testified to the same facts. So did Prof. Schmidt, the chemist of the Board of Health, Prof. Wm. Hoffman and others.

A practical test was made in court, showing the digestive action of Paskola on eggs and meats of various kinds, whereas glucose under precisely the same conditions produced no effect whatever.

This test but confirmed the experts statements and proved Paskola to be of great value in indigestion and wasting diseases.

This verdict disposes of the malicious attack that has been made against Paskola by interested rivals, and suits have now been brought against the proprietors of a well-known emulsion of cod liver oil for having given wide circulation to a false formula and other misrepresentations regarding it.

The animus of this attack will be the better understood when it is stated that Paskola is being largely used in the place of cod liver oil.

CHAPTER III.—CONCLUDED.

He attempted to follow, not heeding the warning. Ping! Ping! He heard two shots, and felt himself hit in the right arm. Notwithstanding this, however, he darted after her. But he was too late. She disappeared through the door at the end of the hall, and he heard the key turn on the other side.

He threw himself with all his force against the door, but with no result. Then, finding that he was wasting his time, he ran back to the dining-room, and leapt out of the window into the snow-covered flower border underneath. The snow was falling as fast as ever, and he sank in it inches deep as he looked for a way out.

But he found that he was caught in a trap indeed, for the wall, which was too high to climb, inclosed the house, with its stables and garden, the whole way round. He made for the wooden door in the wall by which he had first entered the premises, and as he did so, he trod upon something hard, which was lying in the path. Looking down, he saw, to his surprise, a bag, so thinly covered with snow that it had evidently only lain there a few seconds.

STOOPED DOWN AND PICKED IT UP.

With a momentary absurd hope that it might be the bag which had just been stolen from him, Llewellyn stooped down, picked it up, and was about to examine it in the light from the dining-room window, when there suddenly broke upon his ear the sounds of human voices within the house.

And first of all he heard the voice of the girl who had robbed him. She was sobbing, and crying in a voice full of distress:

"Oh! papa, papa, I had to shoot him, and I'm so afraid I hurt him! I couldn't help liking him all the time, and oh! it was dreadful, dreadful! And now I've got his bag I want you to find him, and do all you can for him, if he is really hurt!"

George Llewellyn did not wait to hear more; he put his hand on the window-sill, and vaulted into the room.

The relief he felt on discovering that he had now a man to deal with was so great that, disregarding the fact that he was wounded, and that the blood was trickling down through his sleeve, he raised his revolver and turned to the newcomer.

The young girl screamed and threw her arms round her father's neck.

But before another word was spoken, George Llewellyn's arm had dropped to his side, and he stood staring in bewilderment, first at the old man, and then at his daughter.

For if he had doubted the possibility that the beautiful, smiling girl could be an accomplice of thieves, how could he harbor a suspicion about the stout elderly gentleman, with the gold spectacles and the stamp of British respectability on every homely feature?

"Why, who are you? What—w-w-what—"

The word died away upon his lips, as the elderly gentleman, starting and staring at him in his turn, suddenly exclaimed:

"Little Georgie! Henry Llewellyn's son, by all that's marvelous! Why, why, what's this? George Llewellyn, little George turned thief! Why, what does it mean?"

George had by this time grown accustomed to the sudden change from the darkness outside to the light of the room, and he staggered in amazement against the table.

"Doctor—Dr. Lowe!" he exclaimed hoarsely. "Was it—was it your daughter that took my bag and—and shot me?"

There was a moment's pause, during which the girl, with a cry, and a look of horror, sank down into a chair, with a deadly white face.

The doctor took off his glasses and wiped them.

"There has been some mistake, some desperate blunder!" said he, decidedly. "What were you doing in this part of the world?"

"Coming to see you," replied Llewellyn, promptly. "I was to have crossed to Calais to-night, with some securities which I was taking for our firm to Paris. Finding that the boat couldn't cross, I thought I would find you out and ask you to give me a night's shelter. I lost my way, and—"

He was interrupted at this point by a moan of distress from the young girl, who burst into tears and hid her face in her hands.

The doctor, who was by this time examining Llewellyn's arm, to see the extent of the harm done, smiled rather grimly into the young fellow's face.

"My strong-minded daughter has brought herself into a nice mess this time," said he.

The girl herself sprang up at these words and ran to the door.

"Is he—have I—is he—badly hurt?" she jerked out between her sobs.

"Well, he won't die of it," answered the doctor, with a twinkle in his eye.

George was so much excited and relieved by the discovery he had just made that he answered in a tone which showed him to be in the best of spirits:

"It's nothing at all; it's a mere scratch, Miss Lowe. Please don't make yourself unhappy."

The girl turned slowly round, revealing a most woe-begone and grief-stricken countenance. She looked anxiously at her father, and seeing by the expression of his face that she had really not done much harm, she began to dry her tears, although she still carefully avoided meeting Llewellyn's eyes.

"My dear," said Dr. Lowe, "go into the surgery and get me the box where I keep my bandages. I can finish this business here, for it won't take me a minute, and it's cold in there."

As soon as his daughter had left the room, the old doctor burst into a fit of laughter.

"I shall break her heart if she hears me laughing," said he, wiping his eyes. "Just now when I came in, by the back way, as I usually do at night, I found her waiting for me, waving a black bag in triumph over my head, and telling me she had caught a thief. And she was so proud, poor child, of having inveigled you in here, and detained you so long. She said she was in an agony of fear, lest I should be late, and you would get away, bag and all."

"But," asked George, when the doctor had finished another roar of laughter, "what made her take me for a thief? Surely a man may carry a bag without any dishonest intention?"

"She's an operator at the telegraph office, and she was at the instrument when a message came through to say that two thieves with stolen securities were coming down."

George stared for a moment in silence at the doctor, and then began to laugh. It was annoying to have gone through all the revulsions of feeling of the past hour for nothing, as it were.

"But what made her decide that I must be the thief?" asked he.

"Well, she met a policeman on her way home, who told her that the thieves had been seen to come in this direction."

Then George put a practical question which betrayed the interest he felt in his fair captor:

"And do you let that young girl walk home by herself late at night over this wild country?"

The doctor shrugged his shoulders.

"She's as self-willed as ever she can be. In fact, she's getting too much for me," said Dr. Lowe, with a sigh.

"I meet her in the town when I can and bring her home. But the gypsy won't wait for me, and she carries a revolver, as you have reason to know. Here she comes again. For goodness' sake say something to her so that she may not see me laughing!"

Fortunately for everybody in the rather strained state of affairs, a violent ringing and knocking at the front door startled them all, and diverted attention from the awkward occurrence.

Miss Lowe ran to the outer door, for the one servant had long since gone to bed; and when she reentered the dining-room it was with a policeman.

THE DOCTOR TOOK OFF HIS GLASSES AND WIPED THEM.

"I beg pardon, doctor; but I've got a job for you here outside. We've caught the thief; he had got about a mile beyond here, when he found us close behind, and he jumped over a wall to get away from us, and broke his leg, not knowin' there was a drop on the far side. He must have thrown away the bag he carried with the swag, for he left the town with one, but had none when we picked him up."

"Is this it, by any chance?" asked George, producing the bag he had found in the garden outside.

An examination of the contents proved that this was indeed the case; and the thief, when he was confronted with it, confessed that he had thrown it into the garden of the doctor's house as he ran past, thinking that the high wall would mark the spot sufficiently for him to return and recover it if he should evade his pursuers.

When asked what had become of the woman who had accompanied him down in the train, he explained that he and she had parted on finding themselves pursued and that she had made for the village of St. Placid's.

George Llewellyn remained at the doctor's house that night; and, although [illegible] daughter, and [illegible] he had a very pleasant chat with his host, who explained that they had left his old house in the village for the one which they now inhabited.

And the shyness between the young people wore off before George went away on the following day, for this little bit of dialogue passed between them:

"It was very stupid of me not to recognize you."

"Recognize me! How absurd! Why, when you came here last, fifteen years ago, you were only ten and I was five!"

"Do you think you will recognize me next time I come?"

"What, in another fifteen years?"

"No, in less than that."

"Perhaps I may."

And George Llewellyn came again so soon, and comes so often, that the doctor feels sure it will end in his taking Lily away with him.

DIED FOR LOVE.

A Ghost Story that a Gentlewoman Told.

There is genuine pathos in this recital which I heard from the lips of a dear, silver-haired gentlewoman.

"I remember the trouble it made when my Aunt Patty died," she said, "I was a tiny girl then, but not too young to take notice of everything. My aunt was a beautiful young woman, just turned 20. She had been, so they said, 'crossed in love.' Her father, my grandfather, was the soul of strict integrity. Some one brought him in a tale that his daughter's lover had been dishonest, so she was bidden at once to give him up. She obeyed, though it broke her heart. She died three months from the day of their parting, and one week before what was to have been her wedding day. They buried her at the foot of the garden where grandma, sitting at her window had sight of the grave.

"She sat there more than ever after Aunt Patty died. One afternoon, about 4 o'clock, we saw her start up crying out to her husband, 'Patty is coming back! I must meet the child.'

"She ran out to the garden gate, went inside, and for an hour we saw her walk up and down, her lips moving sometimes as though in speech with some one beside her, sometimes shaking her head as though dissenting to something she heard. All summer this went on—if she told grandfather anything he kept it to himself, though he was very grave and quiet. He grew graver still, when, in October, it was proved to him that Aunt Patty's lover had been falsely, even maliciously accused. But grandma's face lit up. She laid her hand on his head, and said, with streaming eyes, 'Thank God! The child can now rest in her little bed.'

"She was right. Poor Aunt Patty never came again. I have always fancied her urging her mother to proclaim her lover's innocence. Grandmother had Scotch blood, which, perhaps, made it possible for her to see what was hidden from the rest. Anyway, to the day of her death, she maintained that throughout those three months upon each afternoon at 4 o'clock, she had seen her dead daughter rise from her grave, float up the garden walk, and beckon the mother out to her. No, nobody ever said grandmother was touched in her mind. On the contrary, she was noted for her clear head and good judgment. Whether she really saw or heard anything I cannot say, but I am as certain that she thought she did as that I am talking to you at this moment.

WHAT DOLLAR BILLS WEIGH.

A Guessing Contest in Which Several Gained Knowledge.

Several customers were chatting in a Lafayette avenue grocery store one evening recently when the grocer pointed to a half barrel of small beans and asked how many of them it would require to make a bushel.

Various estimates were offered. One man recklessly put the number down at 50,000, which occasioned a laugh from all the others who had guessed a much lesser quantity, ranging all the way from 5,000 to 20,000.

"Well, gentlemen," remarked the grocer, "you are all wrong. There are approximately 119,000 beans in a bushel."

No one was inclined to believe him until he showed them that it took sixty beans, selected at random, to weigh half an ounce. The rest of the calculation was simple.

"Now, then," said one of the party, "since we are engaged in guessing contests, how many dollar bills would it take to weigh as much as a silver dollar?"

One said one hundred, another said seventy-five, while the grocer, who knew all about beans, put the figures at three hundred.

"All wrong," remarked the man. "It takes just twenty-two." This was proven to be the case by experiment.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. The Century in 1895

Taking advantage of the great interest in the life of the Emperor, Mr. Sloane will publish during 1895

A NEW LIFE OF

NAPOLEON,

Magnificently Illustrated.

The Century is famous for its great historical serials, and none in its history has a greater one been prepared than this new Life of Napoleon," written by Prof. William M. Sloane, of Princeton, who has spent many years in preparing for this work. In it the biography of "the man of destiny" has appeared in clear English, free from rancor and attentive to the laws of historical criticism. The Century has secured the great all-around complete and interesting life of one of the most marvelous men. No matter how much you already know of Napoleon you will want to read this—here is the concentration of all the lives and memoirs. The illustrations will be magnificent—the wealth of The Century's art department will be lavished upon them. Two members of the staff have just returned from Paris where they have been securing all that is best of Napoleonic material. New portraits will be printed, great historical paintings reproduced, and Castaigne and other modern artists have drawn some of the great scenes of Napoleon's life for this history.

In addition to this there will be

A New Novel by

Marion Crawford.

The title is "Casa Braccio," and it is a romance of Italy, full of human passion and exciting episode.

A New Novel by

will be published during the year. It is called "An Errant Wooing," and is a tale of wandering (and love) among new scenes of travel in Northern Africa and Southern Spain.

OTHER FEATURES

will be several familiar papers on "Washington in Lincoln's Time," by Noah Brooks, who was on terms of unusual intimacy with the War President; "The Cathedrals of France," by Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, with illustrations by Joseph Pennell. Many more serials will be announced later.

Rudyard Kipling

contributes his First American Story to the December number of The Century.

The Price of The Century is $4.00 a year. "No home is complete without it." Begin subscriptions with November number. Whatever other magazines you may take, you must have The Century. All agents and dealers take subscriptions, or remittances may be made directly to

THE CENTURY CO.,

Union Square, New York.

Send for our beautifully illustrated pamphlet, "The Century Co and Its Works" and mention where you saw this.

St. Nicholas,

For Young Folks.

In 1895.

EDITED BY MARY MAPES DODGE.

The greatest year in the history of this magazine, now without a rival in its field, is the one just closing. Plans for the coming year assure even greater success than in the past.

Rudyard Kipling

wrote his famous "JUNGLE STORIES" for St Nicholas, and it is a welcome announcement that these will be continued in 1895.

NAPOLEON

FOR YOUNG READERS.

While The Century will have for its leading feature the new life of the French Emperor by Prof. Sloane, one of the most popular of St. Nicholas writers takes the same character for his inspiration.

A Boy of the First Empire,

BY ELBRIDGE S. BROOKS,

is the story of a little lad from the streets of Paris (but of good family), who renders a service to Napoleon, and becomes one of his pages and finally an aide. He is with him at the most critical times of his life,—at the departure for Elba, in the glories of the life at Fontainebleau, and finally at Waterloo. The story glows with pageantry, and is a truthful and accurate account, based upon the best authorities and verified by the latest information, of the life of "the man of destiny." It is really a delightful story-history of Napoleon.

WEST POINT

will receive attention, Lieutenant Putnam writing of cadet life at the military academy, while Ensign Ellicott, of the flag-ship "Chicago," will describe the experiences of our hardy seamen on the modern ships of war.

Inspiring Tales

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Theodore Roosevelt will write a series to be called "Hero-Tales from American History," recounting famous deeds of heroism about which young people ought to know. Prof. Brander Matthews will include in his entertaining papers on "The Great American Authors" accounts of the lives of Bryant, Emerson, Longfellow, Hawthorne, Whittier, Poe and Lowell. Stories of famous heroes in history and mythology—Bucephalus, Napoleon's and Sheridan's etc.—will be told by James Baldwin, author of "Stories from the Northern Myths." City Fire Departments will be treated, and there will be two or three papers on The Boys' Brigade. The serial stories are many. One called "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp," recounts the marvelous adventures of a modern boy who became the accidental purchaser of Aladdin's lamp and summoned the jinn while cleaning it. A delightful story of college girls, "The Three Freshmen," will appeal to every girl; and "Teddy and Carroll," James Otis's serial of newsboy life, will be read by every boy. A serial story by Frances Courtenay Baylor is one of the features.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD N. J., TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1894. TWO CENTS A COPY. $5 A YEAR.

THE NEW HOME OF THE PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. Building, an excellent picture of which is given above, is about 150 feet long by 61 broad, and is placed on the lot so as to be on the building line of the proposed extension of Peace street. The building has been designed in what is commonly called "American" Romanesque, a style much used for public buildings throughout the country, being well adapted for the purpose as it requires very little detail and admits of large bodies of plain wall surface and simple outline of form, and is a style which appeals to the masses more than the classic.

The front part of the building on the first floor is to be used for two stores, and for the vestibule and stairs to the association rooms, which are situated on the second floor.

Back of the stores is an assembly room capable of seating about 450 (including the gallery). In the rear of the assembly hall is situated the gymnasium, which is to be provided with two bowling alleys, shower and plunge baths, locker-room, etc. The floor of the gymnasium is 35 4x64 6

Over the stores are situated the working rooms of the association, including the reception hall, reading rooms, library, lecture hall, and the secretary's offices. On the third floor are three class rooms, two boys rooms, game room, committee room, and the apartments for the janitor.

The exterior of the building is of washed brick, with Maynard red sandstone trimmings. The roof is of slate. The interior is finished in a very simple manner, oak being used for the reading room and reception hall, and Georgia pine for the balance of the building, which cost about $40,000. The lot cost $10,000, and the furnishing and equipment will require about $5,000.

In this building the young men of the town will have just what they long have desired. The gymnasium will be most complete, and the association will in every way be equipped for the best work in the line of physical, mental and moral training. As The Press has said before, the building will be a credit to the association, an honor to the town, and a glory to its architect, A. L. C. Marsh, whom all Plainfielders are proud to know as their fellow-townsman.

High praise is given to Contractors Pearson & Gayle for their thorough and handsome wood work, and to Marsh, Ayers & Co. for the decorations.

PLAINFIELD WOMEN.

They Lead in the Fight for Woman Suffrage.

ONLY TWO STARS IN THEIR FLAG.

Mrs. D. P. Hall and Mrs. S. R. Krom Elected to Office, and Make Reports—The One Male Member, Aaron M. Powell of Plainfield, Wants the Word Male Stricken from the Constitution.

Women's influence in the recent political campaign, and the prospect of securing for women the right of suffrage, were the subjects of discussion at the meeting of the New Jersey Women's Suffrage Association in the Young Men's Christian Association Hall, Newark, Saturday afternoon. The session began with the annual report of the president, Mrs. David P. Hall, of Plainfield, who reviewed the year's work of the organization and told of the triumph of the sisterhood in the West. She told her hearers that petitions bearing 500 000 names had been sent to the Constitutional convention of New York asking for the right to vote. These petitions, she said, were ignored, although there was only a very small faction in opposition to the request. Mrs. Hall declared that the women of New York had accomplished the downfall of Tammany, and she warned Tammanyites everywhere to beware. She alluded to the success of the women voters in Colorado and the defeat of Breckinridge in Kentucky, largely through the efforts of women. She also referred to the recent decisions of the Supreme Court denying to women the right to vote at school or any other elections in New Jersey, and the barring out of Miss Mary Philbrook, who had studied law and wished to be admitted to the bar. She said, in conclusion, however, that the outlook for woman suffrage was good, and advised the sex to prepare for the duty of citizenship.

The annual election resulted in these selections: President, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Plainfield, re-elected; vice-president, Mrs. Margaret Campfield; treasurer, Mrs. S. R. Krom, Plainfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mary D Hussey, East Orange, re-elected; recording secretary, Mrs. Emma L. Blackwell; auditor, Aaron M. Powell of Plainfield, the only man who is a member of the organization.

Reports were submitted by the outgoing officers, showing the progress made during the year. Mrs. Charlotte M. Emslin, the retiring treasurer, gave the receipts for the year as $138 15, with a balance of $25 25 on hand after paying all expenses. Mrs. Ella B. Carter, chairman of the Press Committee, told of the aid that the local newspapers had given the movement, but took exception to cartoons in one paper, which pictured the "coming woman" smoking cigars. Reports from the county organizations of the State were read.

The most extensive report was that of Mrs. S. R. Krom of Plainfield, for the Committee on School Suffrage. She said that 126 women had voted in Bergen County, and 400 in Burlington, where seven women were elected trustees. Three women succeeded at the polls in Merchantville.

In Union County forty women voted this year. Mrs. Krom thought that two-thirds of the women of the State had exercised their supposed right to participate in school elections, and she said that thirty-four of them were serving as members of school boards.

Addresses were made by Mrs. Irving Angell and Mrs. Whitehead, of Westfield, who said that it was safe to assume that nine-tenths of the members of the W. C. T. U. were woman suffragists.

A committee was appointed to collect information relating to marriage and divorce laws, school laws and the law with reference to mothers and their children for the American Woman Suffragist Association.

The flag of the Women's Suffrage Association, bearing two stars on a blue field, was displayed and it was explained that the stars represented Colorado and Wyoming, the only States where women have the right to vote. At the close of the meeting Auditor Powell made an address, in which he declared in favor of a constitutional amendment striking the word "male" from the clause of the Constitution governing the franchise.

—The Daily Press will not be published Thanksgiving Day.

—No meeting will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms Thursday afternoon.

G. A. R. RECEPTION.

Winfield Scott Post Represented at the Great Gathering in Jersey City.

The Tabernacle, Jersey City, presented a scene last evening that will never be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to be present. G. VanHouten Post, No. 3, G. A. R., was the host and the 600 representatives of the Grand Army from every part of the State were her guests, in giving reception to Commander-in-Chief Thomas G. Lawlor of Illinois and staff and Department Commander John Shields of Flemington and staff.

The auditorium was artistically decorated with a large number of handsome flags.

On the arrival of the chiefs and their staffs every heart was thrilled as Mrs. H. S. Blauvelt, organist, played that Grand Army favorite "Hail to the Chief".

Past Department Commander Frank O Cole, of Post 3, then made an address of welcome in which he said that the Department of New Jersey was always ready to do her duty. Continuing, he said that Post 3 felt highly honored on this occasion, knowing that the Commander-in-Chief was only able to hold one meeting on the trip and they were given the grand opportunity. Mrs. C. Cole of Jersey City won the heart of every veteran when she sang sweetly "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean", and round after round of applause greeted her.

Commander-in-Chief Thomas G. Lawlor was then introduced and made one of the best addresses ever listened to. He said the Grand Army had reached the high-water mark and was now decreasing in numbers rapidly. He had often heard many pleasant things about the Department of New Jersey and thought it was not necessary for any member to apologize, for he felt as though he stood before a body of intelligent men, who were American citizens—the highest type of manhood. He was given the heartiest applause when he concluded his remarks. Speeches were then made by Colonel Nevius, Colonel Jones, Chaplain Hill, and Captain Jack Crawford, the Scout, all members of the staff. The latter recited an original poem, "Why I wear the G. A. R. Badge" in a very touching manner, he also sang a song of much merit.

Mrs. Cole then sang "Marching Through Georgia", everyone joining in the chorus.

After the reception an adjournment was made to the rooms of Post No. 3, where the latter served their guests in a royal manner, with refreshments and in a social way. All were well pleased with the playing of the Post No. 3, Fife and Drum Corps.

Past Commanders W. C. Smith, M. C. Dobbins; and Joseph Bogert of Post No. 73, and W. C. Dobbins, attended from this city.

Ragan Tomorrow Night.

The way to spend Thanksgiving Eve is to join in the Music Hall trip tomorrow night to the Rhine and Switzerland. Of Mr. Ragan the Cincinnati Times-Star says:

"The theatre was crowded in every part, alike in top gallery as in parquet and proscenium box. Mr. Ragan is a traveler who goes up and down the earth and gathers the good things with the eye of a master, perpetuates them with his camera and then tells of these lands in the most entertaining way, emphasizing all with his pictures. He pictured the trip up the Rhine as the writer had never seen it pictured. The enthusiasm and appreciation of the audience were unbounded. Such men as Ragan are public benefactors. They are teachers. These lectures are not merely a string of words upon which to hang the products of the camera, but Mr. Ragan aims to tell a story of travel that possesses literary worth, and his pictures are merely for charming emphasis—and he succeeds. He runs no mere panorama. A sigh of regret went up from the enraptured audience when he said he would have to say 'Good night'. One could travel forever, it seemed, under such a guide."

Course tickets (75 cents apiece, or 50 cents for students) are on sale at Leggett's. For a single lecture the admission is 50 cents.

Thanksgiving Morning Service.

The Young People's Society of the First Methodist Church will hold a prayer and praise service in Vincent Chapel at 10 Thanksgiving morning, to which they invite the young people generally.

Football Thanksgiving Day.

The Leal School football nine will play the Stevens Institute team on the Crescent Oval Thanksgiving Day at 2:30 p. m. The admission will be 25 cents.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it, is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. PASTER BALLOTS.

They Will Play a Part in the Coming Election.

F. E. MARSH SAYS THEY'RE LEGAL.

Assessor Hubbard's Friends Who Want Him Continued in Office Seek to Use Stickers Effectively—School Board Candidates Will Perhaps Be Similarly Cut.

The time has passed when a citizens ticket could legally be filed for the municipal election, and the only tickets in the field are Republican and Socialist-Labor.

Much feeling was expressed among Republicans who objected to the substitution of J. F. MacDonald for J. A. Hubbard for assessor, but none of them would take the initiative in framing a citizens ticket.

There is still a large element, however, including some of the leading men of the party, who feel that a mistake has been made. They argue that Mr. Hubbard is the best assessor Plainfield could have; that his personality and influence have kept Plainfield's county assessment far below what the rest of the county clamors for; and that his valuations are uniformly satisfactory.

When it became known that there was to be no citizens ticket inquiry was made to see if Mr. Hubbard's supporters could not vote for him by means of pasters. The City Republican Executive Committee last night met and decided that paster ballots could be used; Ex Councilman F. E. Marsh gave legal opinion to that effect.

Pasters are therefore to be liberally used by Mr. Hubbard's friends; and if other candidates can be agreed on pasters will similarly be floated for school trustees as a rebuke to nominees Probasco and Lovell for their repudiation of the Republican Convention Platform on which they were nominated.

Want the Game Laws Revised.

The New Brunswick Gun Club has taken the initiative in an effort to secure such a revision and enactment of the game laws of the State as will prevent pot-hunters and fishermen from catching fish or game by illegal methods or out of season. At a recent meeting of the club it was decided to hold a convention of all the gun and fishing clubs of the State to attend to the matter. The convention will be held in New Brunswick, and all the expenses, except for transportation of delegates, will be borne by the local club. The date has not been fixed, but it will be some time in December or early in January.

Johnston Drive Hotel.

Charles White of Elizabeth, one of the proprietors of the Elm House of that city, was in town yesterday. Mr. White is looking for a good location whereon to erect a first-class family hotel. Mr. White says that if business that he now is engaged in can be disposed of without a loss, he will erect a hotel on Johnston Drive that will be an honor to the State. Mr. White has been very fortunate in business ventures.

Deer Hunting.

The season for killing deer in this State opened yesterday and hundreds of sportsmen are now engaged in the sport near Mays Landing. Two deer were killed before 9 a. m. by a party of Philadelphia sportsmen near Doughty's tavern in the pine belt.

Thanksgiving Fruits.

Special services will be held at the Church of the Holy Cross Thanksgiving Day. The chancel will be decorated with the fruits of the field, and the music will be appropriate to the occasion. The service will commence at 11 a. m. as usual.

Splendid Health Showing.

Ex-Mayor George W. Rockfellow, President of the Board of Health, asks The Press to tell its readers that only one case of contagious disease exists today in the city of Plainfield.

—The C. Y. M. L. will give a reception in their hall Thursday night. All their friends are invited to join in the festivities.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

OUTWITTED.

Farmer Kendrick had brought in an armful of snow-covered logs from the woodpile at the north end of the house, throwing them down on the stone hearth with a noise like a small earthquake, when Carrie Brown started up.

"Five o'clock! Oh, I had no idea it was so late. I must be going home."

"Allow me to accompany you, Miss Brown."

"You'll let me see you home, Carrie?"

Captain Logan and Fred Jones both spoke at once, but Carrie shook her head.

"I prefer to walk home alone," she said, gayly.

"About the sleighing party to-morrow night?" asked Fred, anxiously.

"I—I have promised Capt. Logan," said the village beauty, a rosy tint suffusing her cheek.

"But, Carrie, I thought it was settled between you and me two weeks ago!" exclaimed Fred with a frown.

"Was it? I am sure I had forgotten it."

She was very pretty, this bright-eyed New England damsel. Fred Jones had loved her even since they were children together, and Capt. Logan, who had come down to spend the Christmas holidays with his cousins, the Kendricks, had become so fond of those bright blue eyes and golden hair that he had prolonged his visit into January.

"'Pon my word, she's a regular beauty," said the captain, staring through the tiny window panes at the retreating figure of Miss Brown.

"A beauty," went on the captain, "and it's a thousand pities she should be wasted on any of the country bumpkins who vegetate among these wildernesses. Sam you young villain, are those boots of mine blacked yet?"

"No, they ain't," said Sam, crossly.

"Well, what's the reason?"

"'Cause I ain't had time."

"See that you find time then, quickly, too," said the captain. And Sam glowered after him as he went gaily up the stairs.

"Just wish I had the firin' of him out," said the boy, gloomily. "It's 'Sam, do this,' and 'Sam, do that,' and 'Sam, where's the warm water?' and 'Sam, what in the deuce do you mean by letting my fire go out?' and not a cent has he guv me yet—no, nor so much as a pleasant word. I wonder if he means to stay here always?"

"You and I are about equal in our love for him, Sam," said Fred Jones, laughing.

"I heered him talkin' with Miss Carrie about goin' sleigh ridin' to-morrow night," said Sam, shrewdly. "I'd jes' like to put 'Kicking Tom' in the shafts; I would if it weren't for Miss Carrie. He don't know nothin' about horses, that there militia cap'n don't." And Sam chuckled.

"I say, Mr. Jones, why don't you get beforehand with him? Miss Carrie don't really care for him; she's only dazzled-like."

The night came—a perfect night for sleighing expeditions and rustic love-making, the roads hard and well packed and a glorious moon shining down whitely, as if a rain of silver were deluging the whole world.

"Couldn't be better weather," said the captain. "Sam, where are the sleigh-bells?"

"Dunno," said Sam.

"I guess they're out in the barn chamber," the farmer said. "You better go with him, captain, if you expect to find 'em—our Sam's dreadful thick-headed when he chooses to be."

"Come along, my fine fellow," said the captain, collaring Sam and marching him off in the direction of the old red barn. "We don't need any lantern in this moonlight that is one comfort."

"Where are the stairs?" demanded the captain, as they entered the barn.

"Ain't none," said Sam. "It's a ladder."

"Up with you, then," said Logan, but Sam shrunk back.

"I wouldn't, not for $50," said Sam. "Old John Kendrick hanged himself from the middle beam fourteen years ago, and folks say he stands up there with a rope around his neck every moonlight night."

"Stuff and nonsense!" cried the captain in accents of contempt. "You cowardly lout, stay where you are, then, and I'll go myself."

He sprang lightly up the rounds of the ladder, and disappeared through the trap door.

"Where is it?" he called.

"The ghost? Right under the middle beam by the windy was the place where——"

"Blockhead! I meant the string of bells."

"Look for 'em yourself," said Sam sulkily. "I don't know where they be, and what's more, I don't care."

"I'll settle with you, my fine fellow, when I come down," said the captain, threateningly, as he groped about in the dim light.

"Don't hurry yourself, cap'n," rejoined Sam, in a jeering tone.

As the captain plunged into a dark corner, there was a jingle, and the string of bells, suspended from a nail hit him directly on the neck, so like the grasp of cold fingers that he could but start.

"Oh," said the captain, nervously. "Here they are. Catch 'em, Sam! Hallo! Where's the trap door?"

And it took the worthy captain fully sixty seconds more to realize that the trap door was closed and fastened on the lower side. He rushed to the window and threw it up only to see Sam speeding up the hill.

"Hal-lo-o-a!" yelled Capt. Logan. "Come back, you scoundrel!"

Sam turned around and executed that peculiar gyrations of the fingers in connection with the nasal organ which is supposed to express the extremity of scorn.

"You'll find the ladder on the barn floor, cap'n," hooted the young rebel, "an don't be afraid of the ghost; it's very harmlesss if you let it alone."

"But, Sam—Sam, come back! I'm to be at Mrs. Brown's at 7:30!"

"Don't worry!" bawled Sam, "Miss Carrie won't wait long before Mr. Fred 'll be on hand."

Captain Logan danced up and down the floor in an ecstacy of rage, as Sam disappeared over the crest of the hill. He knew very well if he possessed the lung power of a Stentor he could make no one hear.

"What is to be done?" he asked himself. An echo, if echo has any common sense, would have answered:

"Just nothing at all!"

Sam had outwitted him. And pretty Carrie and Fred Jones, with his red cutter and a great chestnut horse! The captain was wild at the thought; surely jealousy vanquished.

"I won't wait another moment for him," said Carrie Brown, coloring up, with tears in her blue eyes. "Go on, girls, I shall spend the evening at home."

"There's plenty of room for you in our sleigh, Carrie," coaxed her brother. "Bessie Andrews will be glad to have you along."

"No, she won't either, pouted Carrie. "As if I would spoil all her fun! No; if I can't have an escort of my own, I'll stay at home and I will never speak to Capt. Logan again."

Charlie Brown was on the point of arguing the matter with his sister when the door opened and in walked Fred Jones.

"Not gone yet, Carrie?" Where is the captain?"

"I don't know," said Carrie tartly, "and I don't care. Am I Captain Logan's keeper?"

"Will you go with me?"

"Yes, I will"' said Carrie, her eyes lighting and shy smiles dimpling her face.

"Of course," said Fred; I can't expect to make myself as agreeable as the city captain, but——"

"The captain, the captain!" cried Carrie a little irritably. I'm sick of the sound of his name. I never want to see him again. What a nice new cutter this is, and how easy the wolf robes are!"

"Carrie," whispered Fred, as he touched up the horse and felt her nestling close to him, "is it for alwayt?"

"Yes, always," she answered.

* * * * * *

"Jerusalem!" said Farmer Kendrick. It was past ten o'clock at night, and the old gentleman had come out as usual before retiring to rest, to see that the dumb members of his family were all straight and comfortable. "I do believe that's old John Kendrick's ghost come to life again, poundin' like all possessed on the barn chamber floor!"

"It's m-me! It's m-me;" bawled the captain. "Unfasten the trap door and let me out."

Slowly the farmrr lifted the ladder to its place. With rheumatic awkwardness he climbed the creaking rounds and undid the hook from its hasp.

"How in all creation came you here?" he demanded. "Why I thought you were out a-sleigh-riding with the galls."

"It was all the doing of that villian, Sam!" gasped the infuriated captain, his teeth chattering with mingled rage and cold. "I won't stand this sort of thing. I'll leave this place to-morrow."

"As you please," said the farmer, to whom the prospect of losing his guest was not unpleasant. "I'm dreadful sorry this should have happened, though I'll talk seriously to Sam."

"So will I," gnashed the captain. "I'll break every bone in his body."

But Sam had taken particular care to go over to his grandmother's six miles across the snow fields, to spend the night, and the only person the captain saw was old Mrs. Kendrick sitting by the kitchen fire.

"You've lost your chance, captain," she said good humoredly. "Dorcas Smith has just gone by on her way home from the sleighing party, and she says Fred Jones brought Carrie home in his new cutter, and they're engaged."

The captain left the next day, and Mrs. Jones has never seen him since. And when the affair came off Sam got a piece of wedding cake big enough to give him dyspepsia for a week.—Boston News.

Costly Interference.

A man got on a Michigan Central train just as a woman was getting off. The result was a collision and bad blood on both sides.

"Look where you are going!" snapped the woman, "you ought to go out with a guardian."

"Oh, you think you are smart," retorted the man, and then the train pulled out, leaving the man on the steps of his car glaring after the woman, who was hurrying off in the distance.

"Looks mighty suspicious," he said to himself.

He went into the day car, and found only one seat not fully occupied, and that had an infant asleep in it.

The man looked at the sleeping child, and then gazed around the car with the look of one who was searching for some one he did not find. Then he darted to the door, seized a brakeman, and dragged him into the car and to the seat occupied by the sleeping infant.

"Where is the mother of that child?" he demanded in a suppressed voice.

"I'm sure I don't know," said the brakeman. "She doesn't seem to be here."

"I know," pursued the new passenger, "she got off the train when I came on. She has deserted her child—that's what she has done."

"Looks like it," said the brakeman. "I'll call the conductor," and he did.

The conductor knew just what to do. He had seen such cases before, and he left the baby at the first station they stopped at, with orders to forward it to Detroit to the police, with a description of the absconding mother.

Then the man who wanted a seat got one, and gloated over the fact that he had outwitted a termagant of a woman.

After a while a woman who had slept long and soundly in a seat at the further end of the car, arose and looked about her as if listening for something. Then she walked to the seat occupied by the new passenger.

"Where's my baby?"

There was a deathless silence, then a voice that grew ten feet higher with every word it uttered, repeated the query: "What have you done with my baby?"

It took the conductor, the brakeman, and the rest of the passengers to hold the woman while the man tried to explain the facts in the case, and after he had settled the item of telegraphing, cost of transportation for the baby, damages to the mother's feelings, and other expenses, he was permitted to go on his way unmolested. And he never again will try to get even with a woman.—Detroit Free Press.

A Rich Man's Rest.

Apropos the opening of the Field Memorial in the Chicago Art Museum, which Tiffany fitted up at a cost of $20,000 to contain $500,000 worth of pictures, a New York man recalled the personality of the late Henry Field. The year before his death he was travelling in Europe.

"I have spent my whole life making money," he said, "and now I am going to rest and enjoy it. I am going where I please, and buy what I please, and rest."

He had waited a little too long for his holiday. He is resting. His widow has married Mr. Thomas Nelson Page, the author. And the pictures Mr. Field enjoyed buying are to be given to Chicago.

TWO WIFE HUNTERS.

THEY CAME FROM LAKE GEORGE AND FOUND MANY CANDIDATES.

Hoboken Was Selected as a Hunting Ground by the Brayton Brothers Because New York Women Looked too High Toned for Them.

The number of men who come to New York wife hunting seems to be increasing. Only a few days ago a man came from the South and after a few days he found a partner and went back happy. There is a fairly constant demand for eligible immigrant girls, and the Commissioner of Immigration has frequent opportunities for match making—which he does not embrace.

One of the late stories of wife hunting is the following from the New York Herald:

"I'll be durned if every girl in Hoboken doesn't want to marry me!" exclaimed George S. Brayton, of Lake George, yesterday.

There is nothing about Mr. Brayton likely to produce the impression that any woman would marry him at all, unless compelled to do so by an act of the Legislature, but nevertheless it was true that he was in great demand for awhile. He and his brother, Ira H. Brayton, who came to the vicinity of New York on a still hunt for wives, fled precipitately home, fearing that the pressure for their hands and hearts would make them become polygamists if they didn't escape.

Both the Braytons are well enough off. One owns a four acre farm and the other runs an alleged hotel. They wear cowskin boots and walk about with their hands in their pockets and with their chins in the air.

"Me and brother could have our pick of anything in the feminine line up to Lake George," said Ira, "but we're a bit particular. Of the two of us, I'm the best looking, but brother has the most money. We thought his money and my appearance made things about even and that we started fair.

"We did go over to New York when we arrived, to hunt for wives there, but all the women looked kinder rich for our blood. They had the appearance of knowing more than we do. Now, I think a wife ought to know less than her husband."

"Expect to have much trouble in finding one of that sort?" some one asked.

"Well, I must confess we haven't settled on anything yet. As I was saying, we thought the Hoboken girls would be more to our taste. We weren't in New York long, but we gathered that it was a quicker sort of place than this. George has made arrangements with a minister to marry us both for one price if we find the girls."

Before the Braytons left their matrimonial headquarters at No. 82 Hudson street Hoboken was besieged with young women who wanted to see what they were like. The women hung about the doors in groups, nudging each other and giggling for awhile, until one would give another a push and say:

"You go first, Mamie. You're the eldest."

"I ain't no such thing," Mamie would respond indignantly. "You go first. You're the ugliest and are going to have the most trouble in getting a husband."

Then the lank figure and lantern jaws of one of the Brayton boys would stick itself out of the basement door and the face would grin.

"Well, young ladies," Brayton would say, "what can we do for you?"

"You left word up at the station that any girl who wanted a husband was to come up here."

"Yes, and at the post-office, too, and at the City Hall and at Police Headquarters. Come in, girls, and argue it out."

Most of the girls refused to go in, but one or two could be generally induced to enter. The Braytons would give them seats, and then all hands would sit and gaze blankly at the wall.

After some minutes George would jerk his thumb over in the direction of his brother, and say, with a snicker:

"Which do you like best, me or him? If you've got any preference, speak right out, because it's no use speaking my piece to you when you prefer Ira."

Then one of the girls would blurt out: "Have we got to marry you with that face on, or are you going to get it changed?"

Every one would giggle. But one girl, with more sense of propriety, would exclaim:

"For shame, Annie, when the man is asking you to be his wife."

"Hold up, ladies," interrupted one of the Braytons, with fears of breach of promise suits. "We haven't made any definite offer yet."

"Why I'd think you'd be glad to marry any one who'd have you," put in the irrepressible Annie.

"See here, ladies, this ain't no joke contest. Come to order, please."

Then the conversation would go on like that, each side beating about the bush. The Braytons would rattle off a description of their accomplishments and demand the age, weight and domestic accomplishments of the candidates.

"It isn't beauty we're after," said Ira. "It's goodness. It's much better to be good than to be pretty."

"But I know which I'd rather be," said a Hoboken girl.

The boarding house at which the brothers lived changed hands on Friday. They had paid a week's board in advance. When they decided to leave they demanded a proportion of their money back, but the new landlady didn't see it in that light. Then they asked the new landlady whether she was on the eligible list, and she said she wasn't.

Before escaping from Hoboken the Braytons said that all applications for their hearts must in future be made by mail, candidates inclosing a two-cent stamp to pay for the postage on their refusal.

But She Did Worry.

The lawyer who had been married for only a year, sent word to his wife that he had been suddenly called to Milwaukee, says the Chicago Record.

"I will be back to-morrow," he wrote. "Don't worry. My stenographer goes with me."

But she did worry. When he reached home next evening her eyes were red from weeping, and as soon as she saw him she broke down again.

"Oh, how could you?" she sobbed.

"What's the matter?" he demanded.

"Your stenographer—" she began, and again she sobbed.

"What's the matter with him?"

"Him! Was it a man?"

"Why, yes; I fired that girl a month ago."

"Oh, dearest! I never believed it for a moment, anyway."

THEY LIKE EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

The Voting of Women in Denver Favorably Commented On.

The advocates of woman suffrage need desire no better basis from which to deduce arguments for their cause than the recent election. That women won the victory for Colorado no just man will deny. That hundreds of men usually too indifferent or indolent to exert themselves in a political campaign were shamed into interest and action by the unflagging energy of women is unquestionable.

The women of this State proved that they could safely be trusted with the ballot. They proved, too, their independence of thought and action, their freedom from the parrot-like qualities that the opponents of women suffrage claimed would characterize their political work. They were not mere echoes of the opinions of masculine relatives and friends. As voters they demonstrated many other qualities with which they are not always credited by men who begrudge them the ballot. They proved their ability to organize, to rise above small piques and personal grievances and work together for the best interests of their State. As a whole, their votes were cast from conscientious conviction, the issue between good government and anarchistic misrule being distinctly made.

Assuredly the old stock argument that womanhood must be contaminated or even degraded by personal contact with the ballot box is exploded by the late election. Never in Colorado's history was there a more bitter political contest. Never was there more reason to expect brawling and riot. But Denver records show no more quiet and orderly election than the one just past. The majority of Americans stand on too high a level of enlightenment and civilization to offer insult or even annoyance to women who are quietly performing what they believe to be a duty, even though the path to that duty leads directly to the polls.

Women attending theatres on "first night" are more incommoded by jostling and crowding than they were at the pools Election Day, and women at a "bargain sale" assuredly suffer more annoyance from close contact with undesirable and impatient neighbors than at any time while casting votes. Election Day surely afforded a much needed object lesson to opponents of equal suffrage. "Degradation from voting," "insult at the polls," "loss of womanly delicacy and refinement" have been the arms to a windmill at which the Don Quixote of conservatism has been tilting until they have become as real as the reptilian demons of a man with D. T. Both delusions disappear with the first gleam of returning common sense.—Denver Republican.

BEAUTY CONTESTS OF VIENNA.

Three Occasions When Choice is Made by Popular Vote.

There are three contests among the pretty girls of Vienna, for the prize of beauty every year, says the San Francisco Argonaut.

The first, held on the summit of Mount Kahlenberg, takes place on St. Anne's Day, and is attended by all the notables of the city, including foreign Ambassadors. Every visitor, on paying a coin equivalent to about 10 cents, receives a ticket which entitles him to record one vote for the lady whom he deems the most beautiful. It used to be open to the fair ones to canvass for themselves, and many of the most enterprising would boldly address a perfect stranger, and, with a winning smile inquire whether he did not consider her worth a vote; whereupon he would gallantly offer his ticket.

This year, however, that practice has been stopped, and the utmost that a pretty candidate is allowed to do is to appoint a male canvasser to ask you what o'clock it is or at what time the votes will be counted. And the curiosity among them for information of that kind is most amazing. But it is natural enough, for a beauty prize is as good as a dowry, and throws open the gates of matrimony to the crowned ones.

People from far and near throng to these contests. Several first-class military bands are performing all the afternoon on the mountain. Toys, gingerbread, indigestible eatables, flags and lanterns are offered for sale; all the ingredients of a regular fair—a Dutch kermesse—are scattered over the place in abundance; the whole ending in a brilliant display of fireworks at night.

At about ten o'clock all those ladies who have received the votes of their admirers enter the brilliantly lighted hall where the members of the committee are seated, adorned with many colored scarfs and badges. The girl approaches the table, gives her name and the number of votes she has received—in proof of which she delivers up the coupons—and takes a numbered ticket from the committee. An hour later the results are read out.

"Miss A., having obtained 534 votes, is entitled to the first prize—100 crowns ($20); Miss B., with 320 votes has the second prize—a silver watch; Miss C., with 174 votes, receiving the third prize—a silver medal. After this announcement the three successful graces come forward, stand on an elevated platform and show themselves to the public from whom they receive a rogal ovation.

Supper, beer drinking, singing and harmless mirth brings the friendly contest to a close toward the early hours of the morning.

An Inland Oyster Bed.

"One of the greatest natural curiosities in the world is a Texas oyster bed," said E. C. Senter. "This bed extends across the entire State from south to north, and has lain long enough to become stratified. The shells are soft when first taken out, but harden upon exposure to the atmosphere. At Henrietta, in the Panhandle, a number of beautiful buildings have been constructed of this material. At Weatherford and San Antonio shell roads have been made. The oysters embraced several species long since extinct, and, while geologists agree that Texas must at one time have been at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico, they are at a loss to account for the presence of this oyster bank, there being none found east or west of the strata."

Bessie and Harry sat under a tree,
And they were as happy as happy could be.
A cute little worm lay up on a limb,
But Bessie and Harry knew nothing of him.
A gentle breeze came, alack and alas!
A wonderful change in the scene came to pass;
The worm tumbled down, a shriek split the air,
And the worm found a lodgement in sweet Bessie's hair.
"What ails you?" cried Harry. "I'm sure you look sick,"
"Oh, hurry," said Bessie; "be quick, oh, be quick."
"I'll go for a doctor," said Harry; "be firm."
"No, no!" shouted Bessie, "please go for the worm."

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

Ask for our little booklet "Re-Freshing Thoughts." It tells about cleaning men's clothing.

THE DAILY PRESS.

A. L. FORCE, Publisher and Proprietor.
WALTER IRVING CLARKE, Managing Editor.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., NOV. 27, 1894

CITY EDITION, 4 O'CLOCK.

THE SPOKESMAN OF THE PEOPLE

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. Eli Odam will celebrate the tenth anniversary of their marriage tomorrow evening.

Rev. Robert Lowry has written and published a new Christmas service entitled "The Promised Redeemer".

George Taggart represents The United Press at the big bicycle tournament in Madison Square Garden this week.

Mrs Arthur A. Linzer of Savannah, accompanied by her three children, has been visiting relatives in the borough.

A. D. Thompson and William Kelly returned Sunday night from a visit to their lumber interests in Carrabelle, Florida.

William H. McCann of Netherwood avenue has rented a residence in Cranford, to which he expects to remove this week.

Cards are out for a tea to be given by Mrs. Samuel W. Clark and Miss Minnie J French at 118 West Fifth street, Saturday, Dec. 8, from 4 to 6.

Edward Staats of Chatham has begun the erection of a double house on Jackson avenue, Netherwood, which he will occupy as soon as it is completed.

A pretty bit of child verse, "Lullaby", by May Hayden Taylor of North Plainfield, is reprinted from Good Housekeeping in the December Current Literature.

Among those who contributed to the success of the Holy Cross Brotherhood no one is more worthy of a large meed of praise than Mrs. Charles M. Taggart, who was as usual indefatigable in her labors day and night in its behalf.

A number of young people met at the residence of Dr. T. H. Tomlinson last night to spend a social evening together. The hours quickly slipped away amid the delights of exciting games and other amusements, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were: Miss Grace Erwin, Miss Ida Apgar, Miss Mineola Tomlinson, Arthur W. Vail, E. Frank Vail, Sydney R. Titsworth, Carl D. Pfender, Rolland Tomlinson, Edward M. Tomlinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sebring of 40 Craig place, whose dear little daughter Edna lies so dangerously ill with membraneous croup, place every confidence in the efficient care of Dr. D. C. Adams, who has been doing all that medical skill can in relieving her for the past few days from the intense suffering brought on by this dreadful disease. The family are indeed grateful to him for his untiring efforts in her behalf. There is still a ray of hope that she may be left to them and again brighten their home.

It was with saddened hearts that the many friends of the late Harold Greenleaf gathered last evening at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Greenleaf, West Front street, where funeral services were conducted by Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes His remarks were full of consolation for the bereaved, who have the sympathy of the entire community in their distressing affliction. The thought of the preacher was that God's plans and ways were always for the best, and though we often could not understand them it was nevertheless our duty to be resigned to the will of our Heavenly Father. Those present were given an opportunity to look on the silent form of the loved one who had made home so happy. Today the body was taken to Westville, Conn., for burial.

Tonight the Fair.

Of course you are going to the Festival of Nations, which will open this evening at 5 Admission 25 cents; season tickets, good for eight admissions, $1. Hot supper will be served in the restaurant at 5 for 50 cents. Hot cakes at any time for 10 cents. National festivities in the large hall at 8, admission 25 cents, chairs 5 cents. Thomas Schaffer will give an exhibition in fancy club swinging after the festivities. Basket ball will be played in the gymnasium at 9 p. m. Admission 10 cents. The boys want you to see their Art Gallery on the third floor. Admission 10 cents. The Book of the Fair will tell you all about it.

Socialist Changes.

The Socialist ticket has been changed as follows:

Treasurer—Arthur Scott.

School Trustees—Jacob Grieb and Ed Wolf.

—J W. VanSickle of 122 North avenue says he will not permit any poor stock to enter his store. He offers strictly fresh and fine goods for Thanksgiving. His chickens and turkeys are superior.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y. says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best Cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. At L. W. Randolph's Drug Store. Regular size 50c. and $1 00. Our price 45c. and 90c.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

There will be no school on next Thursday and Friday, when the public schools will receive their usual Thanksgiving Day vacation

The Thanksgiving Day exercises of the High School will be held tomorrow morning.

There was a meeting of the Senior class at recess in which it was decided to purchase a ton of coal for the Thanksgiving offering.

The donations from the school were displayed on the platform in Assembly Hall this morning and will be left there until Wednesday, when they will be distributed by the Relief Association.

There were recitations by Miss Grace Berg '95, and Miss Elizabeth Cahoone '96, in Assembly Hall this morning.

Ralph Campbell '93, a student in the University of New York, spent the morning with his High School friends.

A mock trial occurred in the Civil Government Class yesterday. The lawyers were Arthur B. Crane '97 and Perry Voscellor '98..

Final practice of the High School basket ball teams was held yesterday, the first team early in the afternoon, and the second team later. The game this evening will be between the first regular team of the High School and the High School scrubs; it will be a very exciting contest as both teams wish to begin the week with a victory. The line-up of the teams will be as follows:

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Hummer & Mulford of 220 Park avenue offer a superb lot of Jersey chickens and poultry.

—Private or class lessons may be taken at the Plainfield Riding Academy, where horses are for hire by the day or week.

—$25 reward is offered for the recovery of a black horse, sidebar buggy and harness stolen from the stable of A. S. Brower last night.

—A thief broke into the room of H. A. Streuli's coachman last night and stole two suits of clothes, two extra pair of trousers and two overcoats.

—To Plainfield from abroad Frank Linke has brought rare selection of brandies, wines, cordials, and liqueurs of all sorts. The supply is especially suited to holiday table use.

—Harris Bros. of the Clinton Avenue feed mill were fined $5 apiece this morning for causing disorder in refusing to pay fare from Dunellen to Plainfield on the 2:14 a. m. train. They had tickets from Trenton to Dunellen. The train did not stop there, and the conductor demanded fare. They appealed from the fine.

WHIST CLUBS IN NEW JERSEY.

Several New Ones Being Formed to Join the League.

The New Jersey Whist League has already made its influence felt, and several new whist clubs have recently sprung up in different localities. As the league has had two meetings in its tournament series, no new clubs can be admitted until the present contest is finished, which will not be until Spring, but next season it is more than likely that the six clubs now composing the league will be considerably increased. One of the most progressive of the newly-organized clubs is the Orange Whist Club, and one has just been formed at Long Branch. They have both applied for membership in the league, but at present can not be admitted.

The Montclair Club is the leader in the tournament at present. It has won both the games played, all the other clubs having been defeated once or twice. At the meeting last week the Montclairs beat the Elizabeth players by 20 points, the score standing 751 to 731. The Montclair team, which contains some strong players, consists of Messrs. Piper and Fennessy, Reid and Mulford, and Kloman and Van Vleet. The Elizabeth men are McConnell and Thomas, Darrach and Kellogg, and W. Toler and H. Toler. At this last meeting the Park Club of Plainfield beat the New Jersey Athletic Club by 50 points, the total score being 805 to 755 and the Newark Club beat the Fanwood Club by 22 points, the score being 778 to 750.

The teams of these clubs are as follows: Plainfield—Townsend and McCutchen, Drayton and Leonard, and Rogers and Howell; New Jersey Athletic Club—Leonard and Grant, J. Newman and Dumel, and Fuller and Hatfield; Newark Club—McKenzie and Lewis, Obig and Eagles, and Reynolds and Smith; Fanwood—Kieb and Bates, F. Quereau and McCarthy, and Briggs and J. W. Quereau. The next tournament play will be next week.

—The City Market Meat Company opposite The Press office offers poultry at low prices.

—At the regular carpenters meeting to be held tonight all members are requested to be present as business of important will be transacted.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

SHREWD M'PHERSON.

How He Learned the Exact Condition of the New Jersey Democracy Before the Campaign Opened.

[Thos. F. Lane in The Summit Record.]

Probably the only Jerseyman of either political party who was not in the least surprised over the magnitude of the Democratic defeat in New Jersey, was Senator McPherson, whose refusal to become a candidate for re-election had such a depressing influence on Democratic enthusiasm in the recent campaign. Senator McPherson has been rather sharply criticised in many quarters by Democratic leaders because of his refusal to become a candidate for re-election and lead the party in the contest that ended so disastrously on November 6. In a conversation with the writer of this, on Sunday last, the Senior Senator gave some of the reasons that impelled him to remain inactive in the recent contest.

The main and moving reason was the precarious condition of his health, but aside from that Senator McPherson said that during the months of the late Summer he had sent trusted representatives into every Democratic centre in New Jersey to ascertain the exact condition of party sentiment among the masses of the voters. He made no effort to learn the views of the political workers, but sent messengers among the people in private life, and gave instructions to these political scouts to report to him the exact conditions as he discovered them. In one phase of this investigation, Senator McPherson furnished the clearest possible illustration of the thoroughness with which all of his preliminary work is performed, and incidentally gave a clue to the methods that have given him such marked success as a political organizer, and such effectiveness as the directing head of many a forlorn hope.

He secured the services of one man, who went ostensibly on busines into every centre of workingmen in Hudson, Essex, Union and Middlesex counties, with instructions to find his way among the workingmen during meal times and to gradually draw the conversation around to political subjects, and then to report the sentiment thus expressed. The reports brought to the Senator from these channels, he said, showed an almost unanimous and generally outspoken feeling against the Democratic party, and he then conkluded that if the party was not to receive the support of its own regular forces, there was no possible hope for its obtaining recruits from the Republicans ranks; and he then saw that any effort to put the party on good fighting basis this year would prove fruitless. He said he did not care at this time to discuss the causes that brought the Democratic party in New Jersey to its present helpless condition, or to attempt to indicate the policy that would restore it to prosperity. Senator McPherson thinks that he will not take a very active part in the approaching session of Congress, but may follow the advice of his physician and go to Colorado for a few months.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS FINED.

Three Arrested for Gunning on Sunday and Each Pays $20.

Three Seventh-Day Baptists living in Stoe Creek Township, near Bridgeton, were arrested a few days ago for gunning on Sunday. They were Joseph Fogg, Edward Thomas and Richard Rainer, and it was expected that when their cases came up before Justice Woodruff they would resist and make an interesting test of the law. The men were charged with having gunned on Sunday, Nov. 11, the day the season for rabbits, quail, etc., opened. As they observed the seventh day of the week as Sunday, and as a special provision of the law permits them to gun on their own premises on the first day of the week, the gunners declared that they were innocent of any violation of the statute.

At the hearing it was shown that the offenders had gunned off their own property, and Justice Woodruff imposed a fine of $20 each upon the trio. Rather than take the matter up to a higher court the men paid the fines.

First of the Fair Tonight.

The Festival of Nations opens this evening with every promise of unqualified success, and it is to be expected that the opening night will prove a very popular one. For many weeks past there has been scarcely a home in Plainfield where the fair has not been a subject of much consideration, and all those who have taken so kindly an interest in its growth will now have a chance to see it for themselves, a full-fledged delightful reality.

Popular Ballets.

Americans have been patronizing ballet dancing for nearly three-quarters of a century, and today it has a stronger hold on the public than ever. It is estimated by conservative people who are in a position to know, that fully three thousand ballet girls are now employed in this country, and nine out of ten are Europeans. Forty-two of them are with that superb legendary spectacle, "The Black Crook", which appears in Music Hall Saturday, Dec. 1.

And Still Another.

The Netherwood people are preparing a petition for a new school in their district.

—The Stillwell-Rudolph Ideals of this city gave a highly creditable performance in High Bridge Saturday evening for the benefit of the Improved Order of Red Men of that place.

THE EX-MAYOR'S TRIBUTE.

L. V. F. Randolph Versifies Reminiscences of His Good Old Church.

A leading part in the anniversary and grand rally of the First Baptist Peddie Memorial Church, Newark, Sunday, Nov. 18, was memorably filled by ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph of this city, who gave "a word of response" to Chairman Garner's "word of welcome". Mr. Randolph, who by the way has been 21 years a member of the First Baptist Church of Plainfield, was 21 years a member of the old First Church of Newark. Among those who spoke during the "season of reminiscence" were two men whose locks are tinged with gray, Dr. Seymour and Prof Andrews, who were once pupils in Mr. Randolph's Sunday-school class, and of whom Mr. Randolph speaks affectionately as "my boys". The following poem, written for the occasion by Mr. Randolph, was read at the close of his speech:

LOOKING BACKWARD: FORTY YEARS—OR LESS.

We live in the new day, but dream of the old.
Oblivion's cloud-curtain backward is rolled,
And the faces we loved, and the forms we well knew,
Come gladding the morning, all fresh as the dew.
In spirit—whilst Memory all wondering stands—
We hear their sweet voices: we touch their dear hands.

The precious old days when, in fair or foul weather,
To the Old House we walked, and took counsel together!
I mind me of Andrews, and Gardner and Dunn—
Of Turner and Boylan and—guiding them—one
Whose trumpet-like voice never sounded recall,
But forward, aye forward, ye brave comrades, all!—
Of leaders strong-willed, but with hearts like a boy—
Of Morgan L. Smith, D. M. Wilson, of Joy—
Of Godby and Baylis, who always stood fast,—
Of Peddie, great-hearted, and true to the last.

In the street called Academy, modestly stood
A weather-browned structure, built only of wood.
But many a heart, on a drear, winter night,
Was warmed there within, and rejoiced in its light.
Thence, in time, moved this people, well prospered and grown,
To a spacious and turreted temple of stone.

To that temple, devout hosts of worshipers came;
There Henry Clay Fish preached—of undying fame—
And the school of that church was a nursery blest
Of all that was purest and noblest and best.
And now, on an avenue Broader, you stand,
In a lovelier temple—a temple most grand—
In a militant church, with its legions well trained,
Well captained and officered: victories gained
Are earnest of victories waiting you still.
Then steady! and forward! and strive with a will!

Be manly of purpose, ye beautiful youth!
And let men be as children for faith and for truth!

We dream of the old, but we live in the new.
To the Past we have said our regretful adieu.
But the present now claims us—our effort and prayer;
And the brow of the future is surely most fair.
God's blessing is with you, my comrades of old,
He knows now as ever the sheep of His fold;
He leads them, He shields them from danger, from harm;
The weak ones He bears on His Fatherly arm.
His Promise is sure, and unmeasured His Grace,
They who serve Him and seek Him will yet see His Face.

Little Irene Is With Them.

"A Trip to Turkey" is a farcical operetta, the first and third acts being purely farcical, while the second is a burlesque or operetta, making it a novelty, for which reason it will be all the more satisfactory to those who appreciate genuine humor and wit, besides excellent music.

The names of the company speak for themselves, Misses Kate Gilbert, Florence Ellis, Duddie Douglas, Jeanette Arlon, Donnie Dean, little Irene Franklin, Richard O'Gorman, Maurice Hageman, Harold Hartzell, Frank G. Mack, and G. F. Lynn.

Several unique and refined specialties are introduced, besides the ballet led by Donna Dean in the second act.

A large chorus of exceptionally pretty girls will assist materially in the production.

"A Trip to Turkey" plays Thanksgiving night, Nov. 29, in Music Hall.

A Live Postmaster.

Three parcel or package boxes have been granted to Postmaster Hetfield after much effort on his part.

One will be placed at the Grant Avenue station, one at North Avenue station, and one at Netherwood station. He has also been granted an additional letter box, which he will place at Grant Avenue station.

—The green velours curtain that adorns the stage of the large hall in the new Y. M. C. A. Building is a permanant furnishing. The materials were purchased at Edsall's "Commercial Palace" and the upholstery is the work of M J. Winn, with Edsall, in Babcock Building.

Mrs. Mary A. Tupper has been released, at Wilton, Me., from the custody of extreme Female Weakness, which kept her a prisoner in bed unable to walk. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made the change. She advises all sick women to take this valuable medicine, and be thankful for their lives, as she is for hers. It costs only a dollar at any druggists, and the result is worth millions.

VOLUNTEERED

A responsible citizen writes us: "Also send another bottle of REYNOLDS'S DISINFECTANT; we are quite sure it is more efficacious than ——'s." The air of the sick room is perceptibly better since using it. (Signed) respectfully yours, X. Y. Z. A volunteer testimonial like that is very gratifying, and we have many such. REYNOLDS'S DISINFECTANT stops decay and kills bad odors without making worse odors; is equal to any and cheapest of all: QUART BOTTLES 25c. Invented and made only at REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, Park and North aves.

"Trust Those Who Have Tried."

Catarrh caused hoarseness and difficulty in breaking. I also to a great extent lost hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm dropping of mucous has ceased, voice and hearing have greatly improved. J. W. Davidson, att'y-at-law, Monmouth, Ill

I used Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh and have received great benefit. I believe it a safe and certain cure, very pleasant to take. William Frazer, Rochester, N. Y.

Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

Kicked Lantern, Burnt Barn.

A large new barn belonging to John Wendell of South Sterling, was destroyed by fire about 6 this morning.

Mr. Wendell arose early and went out to the barn with a lantern to do his morning work. He walked in a stall behind a colt; the latter was somewhat nervous, and kicked the lantern out of his hand. A large amount of hay was near and caught fire.

All Mr. Wendell was able to save was three horses. His crops, wagons, harness and farming implements were all destroyed. The barn had just been built. About four years ago a barn belonging to Mr. Wendell was struck by lightning and destroyed.

Harper's Weekly
In 1895

Harper's Weekly is a pictorial history of the times. It presents every important event promptly, accurately, and exhaustively in illustration and descriptive text of the highest order.

The manner in which, during 1894, it has treated the Chicago Railway strikes and the Chino-Japanese war, and the amount of light it was able to throw on Korea the instant attention was directed to that little-known country, are examples of its almost boundless resources Julian Ralph, the distinguished writer and correspondent, has been sent to the seat of war, and there joined by C. D. Weldon, the well-known American artist, now for many years resident in Japan, who has been engaged to co-operate with Mr. Ralph in sending to Harper's Weekly exclusive information and illustration.

During 1895 every vital question will be discussed with vigor and without prejudice in the editorial columns, and also in special articles by the highest authorities in each department. Portraits of the men and women who are making history, and powerful and caustic political cartoons, will continue to be characteristic features. This Busy World, with its keen and kindly comment on the lesser doings of the day, will remain a regular department.

Fiction. There will be two powerful serials, both handsomely illustrated—The Red Cockade, a stirring romance of olden days by Stanley J. Weyman, and a novel of New York, entitled The Son of His Father, by Brander Matthews—several novelettes, and many short stories by popular witers.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PROSPECTUS.

The Volumes of the Weekly begin with the first Number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order.

Cloth Cases for each volume, suitable for binding, will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of $1.00 each. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

RESTLESS NIGHTS.

Lack of Sleep a Fearful Danger.

It Kills Your Strength and Vitality.

It Paralyzes Your Energy and Ambition.

You Must Get Your Nerves Strong and Steady.

Use the Great Nerve Invigorator, Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Nights without sleep from sleeplessness, and days full of weariness and weariness! Headache and heartache, weak stomach and exhausted nerves. This is the short but terrible story of thousands of people.

You are tired, weak, nervous and discouraged; trembling on the least excitement, and always worrying over something. Perhaps you fear insanity. And this is always the dreaded danger in such cases. Nervousness, headaches, worry and overwork lead straight to nervous exhaustion and prostration, and the most frightful consequences follow these conditions.

You are in a whirlwind of destruction. Beware of the terrible results and do not delay For there is hope, hope for you, reader, you who have suffered so much, who have neglected or failed to cure the first symptoms, such as loss of appetite, gas in the stomach, torpid liver, constipation, nervousness, etc. You can be cured just as well as the thousands of others who have been restored to health and happiness by that greatest of all medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

That it will surely cure is conclusively proven by what it did for Mrs. Fannie Smith of 10 Belmont st., Worcester, Mass., who says.

"Four years ago I was completely run down I could not sleep, had no appetite, and had terrible headaches which were accompanied by nausea that would sicken me for some time. My nervous system was completely worn out. Sometimes for several days I could not obtain a moment's sleep, and my physicians then gave me powerful drugs to produce sleep. The effect, however, was worse than the benefit derived.

"I spent much money on physicians and medicines, but got no better. I was willing to sacrifice wealth if I could only be cured. I was discouraged after so many failures One day I heard of the wonderful cures from Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy among persons suffering as I did, and who had, after many failures, recovered their lost health from its use

"I decided to give it a thorough trial, and I did so, much to my gratification. The benefit derived was something wonderful. I now enjoy long refreshing sleep every night, my nervous system has been restored to a healthy state, my appetite is good, and I have no longer those fearful headaches. I am entirely cure by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"I cannot say enough in favor of this truly great medicine, and I hope that all sufferers who read of my cure will profit by my experience to obtain their much desired health."

You must take such a remedy, readea, for if you neglect yourself longer, it may be too late.

Here is a remedy that people know will cure. Take it, and it will cure you. It is purely vegetable and harmless. It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr Greene is a guarantee that his remedies will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

WON BY STEWART GOLD

Carlisle Awards the Bonds To His Syndicate.

New York Trust Companies and National Banks Secure the Whole Issue at $117.077 Per $100—Details of the Transaction Show a Gain for the Government.

Washington, Nov. 27.—The Trust Company syndicate has secured the $50,000,000 bond issue. Secretary Carlisle has announced to Mr. Stewart, head of the combination, that their bid of $117.077 per hundred dollars is the most satisfactory to the United States government, and that they must take the whole issue at that figure, or none at all. Interest dates from Nov. 1.

The proceeds of the bonds under this bid will be $49,517.62 greater than they would be if the other highest bids were accepted. A very important advantage to the government in accepting this bid is the fact that all the gold will be furnished outside and none drawn from the treasury.

It is also more convenient and less expensive to the department to deal with one party rather than with many.

The Stewart syndicate in their bid direct that $40,000,000 of the bonds are to be delivered in New York, $3,000,000 in Boston, $3,000,000 in Philadelphia, $2,000,000 in Chicago and $2,000,000 in San Francisco.

The bonds will be ready for delivery as soon as the syndicate pay their first installment and indicate the amount and denomination of registered and coupon bonds they desire. This may take week or longer, as the syndicate itself does not as yet know how their associates may want the bonds "broken."

New York, Nov. 27.—The final disposition of the bonds, and the peculiar astuteness of the average Wall street banker is disclosed by the following statement, authorized by Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, a prominent member of the syndicate:

"The syndicate which has secured the issue of government bonds will place them on sale. Persons wishing to obtain them can procure a limited amount—the first $5,000,000 anyway—at 119."

By this it will be seen that the syndicate is to make a profit of $2 on every $100 of the whole issue. The United States Trust company syndicate, the organization of which was the work of John A. Stewart, the President of the company, is composed of the United States and Union Trust companies, the First National bank, Drexel, Morgan & Co., and Harvey, Fisk & Sons, representing a large number of other banks, trust companies, private bankers and financial institutions.

At the sub-treasury it was said that the government will get $50,000,000 in gold, at least, which amount will bring the gold surplus up to about $108,000,000

The money from the bidders has already begun to come in at the sub-treasury. The bonds will not be distributed from the sub-treasury but will be sent out direct from Washington. The successful bidders will bring their gold or gold certificates to the sub-treasury and the latter issues certificates of deposit and give the latter to the depositors. These certificates will be sent on to the department in Washington, which, on their receipt, will send on the bonds. The bonds are all ready, but none will arrive in this city before to-morrow.

Later the representatives of the syndicate paid into the sub-treasury $8,000,000 in gold on account. From other parties $4,000,000 was received. More will be paid in this afternoon, and judging from present appearances, the government will receive much more of the yellow metal than it has any use for.

Eight Thousand Are Loyal.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 27.—The presiding elders of the East Pennsylvania conference reported to the board of bishops of the Evangelical Association at their session that about 8,000 members of that conference are loyal to the church, and of the 125 churches which heretofore adhered to the Philadelphia convention all but twenty-seven have yielded to the supreme court's decision and are receiving the regular officials of the Evangelical Association. The special session of the bishops is being held to consider property matters.

Will Send a Challenge.

Glasgow, Nov. 27.—The story about the differences between Dunraven and Watson is denied here. The New York Yacht club's reply is favorably received in yatching circles. A formal challenge will now be sent. The building of the yacht will be proceeded with at once.

Will Go to the Courts.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 27.—It is learned here that the contest for president judge in the forty-fourth district will be settled in the courts. Sitser, democrat, will endeavor to take the position on the bench which apparently belongs to E. M. Dunham, republican, by 29 majority.

Misery for One Family.

MURDERED A CONDUCTOR.

Unusual Crime of a Railroad Official and His Arrest.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 27.—The news of the arrest at Fort Smith of Division Superintendent McKee, of this city, on the charge of murdering Conductor Brown in the Indian Territory has created a profound sensation.

Mr. McKee, in company with General Superintendent Peck, of the Missouri Pacific system, went to Fort Smith to assist in the capture of the murderer, and when it was learned that Mr. McKee had himself been arrested on the charge, the people were dumbfounded.

Pullman Conductor B. H. Yeager, who arrived from Coffeyville, brought news to the effect that Brown was murdered by a whisky man. Two whisky peddlers, who were fleeing from officers, were on the train when it arrived at McKay. The men fearing that deputy marshals were on board started through the sleeper to escape from the rear end.

The man in advance ran into Conductor Brown, who was mistaken for a marshal. The murderer shot him in the head. By the flash of the pistol the murderer saw he had killed the wrong man, and without releasing him, dragged the body out of the car and laid it beside the track.

WHEN CONGRESS MEETS.

Little Interest in the Next Session Yet Visible at Washington.

Washington, Nov. 27.—There is hardly the usual interest in the approaching meeting of congress which is generally manifested about the capitol a week gefore the beginning of sessions.

There are probably not more than a dozen senators and forty members of the house of representatives in Washington to-day. Nothing like a discussion of policies by the leaders of either political party has been possible.

Among the opinions which are heard most frequently among the representatives here, especially among southern democrats, is that there will be a revival of the effort to repeal the 10 per cent. state bank tax law, and it is evident that strong pressure will be brought to bear in that cause.

The sentiment among the conservative silver men is against taking up taht question, because of the futility of such a course in view of President Cleveland's opposition to free coinage.

It is taken for granted that the administration will propose a financial scheme on the lines of the Baltimore plan.

EDITORS IN SESSION.

Meeting of the Republican State Organization.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 27.—The advisory board of the New York State Republican Editors' Association met in Powers' Hotel and arranged for the annual convention to be held in New York the third Thursday in January. Preceding this meeting the New York State Press Association convened to arrange a suitable commemoration of the semi-centennial of Stephen H. Parker, as editor of the Geneva Gazette.

At the second meeting a resolution congratulating Mr. Parker was passed. Another resolution requesting the legislature to amend the libel law so that a newspaper may have the same standing in court as an individual, was also adopted. Congress was called upon to investigate the complaints of unfair competition in printing on the part of the government. Mr. Morton was congratulated upon his sweeping victory.

HORSES MIX UP DIAMONDS.

A Runaway Team Crashes into a Jewelry Store.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 27.—A team of horses ran away here and crashed through the front window of Herman Idonas' pawn shop, scattering $5,000 worth of diamonds that were on display in the window over the sidewalk and into the street.

The precious stones became mixed with the broken glass, and the large crowd that quickly gathered made it difficult to find them.

It is thought that at least $2,000 worth of the gems have been stolen by people who picked them up from the sidewalk.

Against Life Tenure.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 27.—The life tenure of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church is being openly attacked by the clergymen of that denomination here. At a meeting a large majority of them declared that under the present system the bishops became tyrannical. A few defended the bishops and the debate grew very warm. Rev. I. F. King declared that some of the arguments against the bishops "was rotten as sin."

To Extradite G. M. Irwin.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 27.—Application has been made to Gov. Pattison for extradition papers on Gov. Flower to bring G. M. Irwin, manager of the notorious discretionary pool, back here for trial.

WAR CLOUDS ARE GONE

Japan Will Hear China's Plea for Peace.

Minister Dun Accepted as Mediator and the Alleged Snub to the United States Disappears in English Fog—Probable End of the Strife—Closing of Wei-Hai-Wei.

London, Nov. 27.—The Japanese Chinese war is practically over. From advices received here it is evident that Japan is satisfied with the capture of Port Arthur.. It is also certain that the United States has not been snubbed, as generally supposed here, in the offer to mediate. Correspondents at Yokohama and Tokio both say that Japan has consented to receive China's proposals of peace, through the American Minister Dun. It is also said that upon the request of the latter gentleman no attack will be made upon Pekin or Mukden, until it is certain that all peaceful measures have failed. Japan will probably agree to this, but will keep Marshal Oyama and Admiral Ito in readiness to renew operations at any moment.

Berlin, Nov. 27.—It is officially announced here that Japan recognized that the United States Minister at Tokio, Mr. Dun, is a suitable channel through which China can open up negotiations for peace. The powers will not take any part in the negotiations They will simply remain spectators.

It is considered that China is in a position to pay the Japanese demands if the war ceases now, Japan to hold Port Arthur until her demands are satisfied.

The destination of the third Japanese expedition, which is now afloat, is supposed to be Wei-Hai-Wei.

Yokohama, Nov. 27.—It is reported that a large number of Chinese fled from Port Arthur on the night of the 21st, the Japanese opening the way of escape.

Another report is that during the hottest of the fight part of the Chinese troops fled to the warships waiting to receive them. Thereupon the Japanese are said to have cannonaded the ships and sunk two.

Washington, Nov. 27.—Advices received by the Japanese minister indicate that Japan has planned another great battle at Wei-Hai-Wei. Marshal Oyama, while holding Port Arthur has hurried one wing of his army forward to China's last stronghold, and that place is now said to be surrounded.

Should Minister Dun's efforts to mediate fail to bring about a peaceful termination of the war within a few days another great battle will certainly be fought.

VENO FOUGHT A LION.

Exciting Scene During a Performance at Wilkesbarre.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 27.—Harrington's museum was the scene of a very exciting occurrence. Among the attractions is a trained lion in charge of a Nubian, Veno.

When the Nubian went into the cage the lion suddenly sprang upon him Before he could escape the enraged beast struck him down with his paw fastening his teeth in the man's arm He yelled with pain and fright. The large audience became panic-stricken, and made a mad rush for the door.

Meantime attendants, arming themselves with whatever came to hand, surrounded the cage and endeavored to beat the lion away from his victim. The taste of blood had wrought him up to a state of fury.

When Veno was liberated he presented a horrible sight. His body was torn and mangled, his right arm was torn off, his hand was bitten clear through, and the flesh was torn from his face. He will not recover.

This lion has killed three men during the last season while in the southern states.

PIANO MOVING A SPECIAL

LIFE WAS A BURDEN.

A Pain-Racked Sufferer Tells an Interesting Story—How He Was Tortured for Years and Finally Cured by Munyon's Remedy.

Charles Wark, of 14 N. Twenty-fourth St., Philadelphia, has been a constant sufferer from rheumatism for years. He was cured by the use of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. This is his story:

"I was afflicted with rheumatism in the right shoulder and suffered the most excruciating agony. Sharp shooting pains darted through it so intense I could not sleep night. Even the weight of the bedclothes was more than I could bear; neither could I lie on the right side or my back. Life became a perfect burden to me. I could not raise my hand to my head, and when I attempted to put on my coat or any article of dress, the torture was enough to drive me wild. Many remedies were suggested and tried, but none did me the slightest good, and I began to despair of ever being able to obtain relief. Some time ago, however, I procured a bottle of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. It afforded me relief after the first few doses, and by the time the little 25 cent bottle was gone I was entirely free from pain. I have had no return of my old enemy, and I feel satisfied I am permanently cured. It seems so wonderful I can hardly realize it, and can only show my appreciation of the merits of the Cure by recommending it to other sufferers."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggist, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

ALIX THE CZAR'S BRIDE

Superb Wedding Ceremony in Russia's Capital.

With Imperial Splendor the Young Couple Were Married Before Kings, Princes and Dukes in the Marble Winter Palace at St. Petersburg—Scenes and Details.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 27.—To the thunder of great cannon, the strains of a thousand bands and surrounded by a glitter of precious jewels, cloth of gold, gorgeous uniforms, worn by all the princes of Europe, and hundreds of superbly gowned noblewomen, Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt became the bride of the Romanoff Czar, Nicholas II. The ceremony was performed by the Metropolitan of St. Petersburg, and all the dignitaries of the Greek Church, in the famous white marble palace.

From the Anitchkoff palace, Nicholas and his suite, the Prince of Wales, the grand duke Sergius, the King of Denmark and King George of Greece, arrived at the winter palace at ten o'clock. Two hundred guns from the fortress of St. Peter and Paul across the river Neva, boomed their welcome.

A whole army corps of troops under Duke Serge filled the streets, and military bands all over the city took up the national anthem, the music swelling until it floated in a great volume over the whole.

An hour later Princess Alix, attended by the Princess of Wales, the Czarina, the Princess Henry of Prussia, the Duchess of Wurtemburg, the Grand Duchess Xenia and a suite of two hundred noblewomen entered the palace. A magnificent procession then formed, in which every court of Europe was represented, and filed slowly through the palace to the cathedral.

When the procession reached the cathedral, at the extreme end of the Alexander Platz, it was met at the entrance by the Metropolitan of St. Petersburg, the Holy Synod and the court clergy bearing crosses, holy water and the sacred books.

The Metropolitan conducted the Czar to a position upon a dais which had been placed in the centre of the chancel behind the rail.

As the Emperor took his place at the right of the dais the Czarina led the Princess Alix to him and placed her at his left hand. The Czarina then took her place in the chancel at the right of the dais, and the marriage service in use in the orthodox church was begun.

The ceremony was of the most impressive character and lasted nearly two hours. After the Psalm the Metropolitan said a few words of instruction and turned to the Czar and said: "Hast thou, Nicholas, a good and unconstrained will and a firm determination to take unto thyself this woman, Alix, whom here thou seest before thee?"

To this the Czar answered: "I have, reverend father."

The Metropolitan then asked: "Thou hast not vowed thyself to another bride?"

The Czar answered: "I have not vowed myself, reverend father."

The same questions were asked of Princess Alix with similar answers. After prayer the Metropolitan took two crowns, placing the first one on the head of the Czar, saying:

"The servant of God, Nicholas, is crowned for the handmaid of God, Alix, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."

Placing the crown upon the head of the bride, he said:

"The handmaid of God, Alix, is crowned for the servant of God, Nicholas, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."

The prelate then blessed the couple three times. After anthems and prayers the common cup was brought and blessed. The cup was filled and handed first to the Czar, and then to the Princess, each taking a sip of wine.

The Metropolitan then took the couple by the hand, the groomsman and bridesmaids walking behind and holding the crowns over their heads, and led them three times around the dais, the choir meanwhile singing a troparion. The prelate then took the crown from the Czar, saying:

"Be thou magnified, O bridegroom, as Abraham, and blessed as Isaac, and increased as Jacob, walking in peace and performing in righteousness the commandments of God." Taking the crown from Princess Alix, he said: "And thou, O bride, be thou magnified as Sara, and rejoiced as Rebecca, and increased as Rachel, being glad in thy husband; and keeping the paths of the law, for God is well pleased." The Czar then kissed the bride and the guests came forward to congratulate the couple. At the conclusion of the congratulations the dismissal was pronounced and the bride and bridegroom and the wedding guests returned to the Winter palace.

As the procession entered Field Marshal hall there were cries of "Long live Emperor Nicholas."

Howgate's Trial Begun.

Washington, Nov. 27.—The trial of the famous embezzler, Capt. Howgate, has begun. C. W. Doring, the guard from whom Howgate escaped in 1882, and W. G. Bone, of the treasury, appeared against him.

Marksmen Want a Receiver.

Jersey City, Nov. 27.—Application was made by John Haskman, of Hoboken, in the Chancery Court for the appointment of a receiver for the United Schuetzen Association.

More Charges Against Fellows.

New York, Nov. 27.—The German Reform union has also preferred charges to Gov. Flower of malfeasance in office against District Attorney Fellows.

Diphtheria Epidemic in Detroit.

Detroit, Nov. 27.—Every public school in the city has been closed. An epidemic of diphtheria prevails among children.

Surrendered the Anarchists.

Berne, Nov. 27.—Switzerland has surrendered to Italy the anarchists, Lezzioli and Partinotti.

BUTCHERED LIKE ANIMALS.

The Atrocious Murder of the Good Children Confessed by Hart.

Toledo, O., Nov. 27.—The confession of Charles Hart in which he convicts himself of the murder of the Good children at Paulding has been made public here and in its horrifying details emphasizes the awful brutality of the dual crime.

In some respects the confession differs from the first statement made by Hart. Then he implicated Merritt, the colored preacher, whom he charged with assaulting the girl, and now he asserts that only he (Hart) had committed the crime, save that Clarence Pringle burned at Hart's request the clothes worn by the murderer at the time of the killing, and which were soiled with the blood of the two children.

Hart says in his confession:

"I was home on the woodpile when Ashby and Elsie came down the road and went over the bridge and played back in the woods. I don't know what made me do it, but I follwed them, and when they got back far enough I caught them and tied them.

"They hollered and I tied twine around their throats and choked them so that they could not holler. Then I tied the boy's hands behind him to a limb—I did not intend to kill them—and then I took the girl. She was choked and had fallen down. I don't know whether she was dead or not. I knew if they got away they would tell, so I hit the boy with a club and then I hit the girl with a club.

"I carried them to the log heap ran to the house, got the razor and cut their throats, so they'd be sure not to come to life. Then I cut them open so they would burn quick and set the heap afire."

Hart is in Bryan jail, and without doubt has crossed the boundary line of Paulding for the last time. A special grand jury will meet on Saturday of this week and Hart will be indicted. Immediately after he will be arraigned at Defiance or elsewhere than Paulding, and he will of sourse plead guilty.

MINERS LEFT THEIR UNION.

Plum Creek Men Accept Work at Sixty-two Cents a Ton.

Pittsburg, Nov. 27.—The acceptance of a new contract by miners of the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal company at Plum Creek and Sandy Creek for sixty-two cents per ton shuts out the possibility of their taking part in the effort to make the wages of the Pittsburg district uniform.

This practically forces the miners all over the district to accept a lower rate of wages. The operators who are paying the scale rate will not wait longer on the local miners, but will demand a meeting of the board of arbitration.

Some of the mines are shut down and by the time the board meets fully two-thirds of them will be idle. The Plum Creek and Sandy Creek men withdrew from the Mine Workers' union.

PITEZEL IS ALIVE.

Holmes' Attorney Can Produce Him When Necessary.

Philadelphia, Nov. 27.—Lawyer W. H. Shoemaker, the attorney for Holmes, has stated that he would on behalf of his client make a statement shortly covering every detail of the conspiracy case and which will contain some startling revelations. Lawyer Shoemaker further said:

"I want it to be understood that Pitezel is a living being, and that we are at the present moment fully aware of his location and his acts.

"I don't care what the police and coroner are doing towards proving that the body found in the Callowhill street house was that of Pitezel. They are all at sea and they are perfectly aware that they are.

OYSTER BEDS ARE FREE.

Those at Roton Point, Judge Downs Declares, Are Public.

South Norwalk, Conn., Nov. 27.—Judge Downs, of the Stamford City court, has decided that the people have a right to the free use of the natural oyster grounds off Roton Point, which for generations have been used by the oystermen of this vicinity.

The case on trial was that of Oliver Cook, who claimed the grounds, against a little vessel named the "Rambler," owned by Henry P. Morgan. The case was carried to the high courts.

Senator Squire Sued.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Floyd C. Shepard has begun suit here before Judge Williams against Senator Squire of Washington for an accounting of property worth $1,500,000 in Seattle, which was owned in partnership by Philo Remington, William King of Minneapolis, Philo Osgood and John N. Goodwin. Remington had the management of the property and Senator Squire, his son-in-law and executor, has had charge of it since his death.

Charges Against Judge Ricks.

Cleveland, Nov. 27.—A sub-committee of the house committee on judiciary, has begun here an investigation into the charges made by the Central Labor Union against United States District Judge Ricks. He is charged with failing to account for fees in patent cases taken in by him when clerk of the court.

Commander Lawlor Dined.

Jersey City, Nov. 27.—Gillian Van Houten Post No. 3 of this city tendered a reception to Commander-in-Chief Thomas G. Lawlor and Department Commander of New Jersey John Shields. After the reception a dinner was given to Generals Lawlor and Shields and others at Taylor's hotel.

Rifled Mail Pouches.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 27.—A couple of United States mail pouches, rifled of their contents, were found lying in a swamp near Natick village. These pouches were lost from the train a couple of weeks ago.

Senator Butler Will Contest.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 27.—Senator Butler has brought suit to have the registration law declared illegal. This is his first step toward contesting Tillman's election to the United States senate.

Death of a Centenarian.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Mrs. Mary L. Mott is dead at New Hackensack, Dutchess county. In January she would have been 105 years old.

ONE MORE BANK ROBBED

Clerk Morgan Steals Thirty Thousand Dollars.

The Bank of the Republic Victimized, But Wealthy Relatives Have Refunded the Amount Stolen—Swindler Baker Obtained Large Policies Before Killing Himself.

New York, Nov. 27.—The case of another bank being robbed by a dishonest clerk has been made known. The victim is the Bank of the Republic, at No. 2 Wall street, which the report stated, had lost some $30,000. The thief is D. E. Morgan, a clerk, whose home is in Brooklyn.

He drove fast horses, spent money lavishly and lived in a style far above his position. His peculations were carried on during the summer months.

When the shortage was discovered his parents came to his assistance and made good the loss, and the young man was discharged from the bank. Vice-President E. H. Pullen, of the Bank of the Republic, acknowledged that the bank had been victimized by one of its employees.

Morgan was the discount and coupon clerk, and had been in the employ of the bank only about a year. An old employee had been displaced to make room for him under the policy of getting younger men for the bank. He is about thirty-five years old.

This makes the third bank defalcation within little more than a week. None of the three robbers have been punished. One of them, Seely, of the Shoe and Leather bank, is missing; another, John R. Tait, who stole from the Chemical bank, has gone scott free, and the third, E. D. Morgan, is also free.

By far the most important development in the disclosures relating to the looting of the Shoe and Leather bank was the fact that Frederick Baker had as recently ago as Oct. 4 taken out two $10,000 life insurance policies with the Equitable Life Insurance Co. The policies were what are known as incontestable policies. An additional premium of $100 each was paid upon them to make them incontestable. In case of suicide a policy of this kind is not vitiated. Ordinary policies are cancelled if their holders commit suicide within the first year after they are issued. These two policies Baker made payable to his wife. Another policy for $2,500 that was issued to Baker about fifteen years ago was assigned to his wife on Nov. 13 last.

These acts are considered to point clearly to premeditated suicide. At the Equitable Insurance company the officers were very reticent about what action they would take in regard to the two $10,000 policies issued last month. They were of the opinion, however, that they would be paid.

They declined to say whether the claims would be contested and were not sure whether Baker had committed suicide or not, although they freely admitted that there was every indication that he had taken his own life.

The Mutual Life Insurance company also insured Baker on two policies some years ago. At the office of the company they said the policies did not exceed $10,000, but they refused to make known the exact amount. It came out that Baker had endeavored to get an incontestable policy for $10,000 from the Connecticut Indemnity Life Insurance company with the suicide clause waived. The company refused to grant the policy. It is said that Baker was also insured in several other companies.

Shoe and Leather bank officials now state that Seely and Baker stole $354,000, instead of $343,000. An assessment of 20 per cent. has been levied upon stockholders. Comptroller Eckels at Washington has been notified. No trace has yet been found of the fugitive bookkeeper.

Gen. Merritt, one of the attorneys interested in the case, says Seely was an inveterate gambler and lost large sums. Augustus Kagel and others claim that Baker as trustee for several estates has stolen several hundred thousand dollars, besides that taken from the bank.

Many Wrecks Reported.

St. Johns, N. F., Nov. 27.—The British steamer Louisburg, from Montreal, has arrived here. Her officers report having encountered terrific weather in the gulf of St. Lawrence, her deckload having been washed overboard. The following vessels were lost at Bonavista during the great gale: Schooners Fortune, Emerline and North Star with general cargoes of provisions. Schooner Shamrock, with 700 quintals of fish. Three other vessels names not given. All crews were saved.

Fatally Shot by Lee Gon Yuem.

Philadelphia, Nov. 27.—The first quarrel with a tragic ending that has ever occurred in this city between Chinamen took place in the grocery store of Lee Hung Quong at 926 Race street, where the proprietor was shot in the head and mortally wounded by Lee Gon Yeum, the proprietor of a laundry.

Sullivan Buys a Farm.

Greenfield, Mass., Nov. 27.—John L. Sullivan, the ex-champion pugilist, has bargained for a farm in Montague, and it is expected that he will take possession of it as soon as his present theatrical season is ended.

A VICTORY FOR PASKOLA.

It Receives the Official Endorsement of Eminent Experts and a Jury of Representative Citizens.

The suit brought by Ohio's Food Commissioner against a Cincinnati druggist for selling Paskola on the ground that it was nothing but glucose, resulted in a great victory for Paskola and a verdict against the State.

During the course of the trial, Prof. Shaller of the University of Cincinnati, testified that Paskola was not glucose, and even if it was, it would be harmless. He also bore witness to its activity as a digestive agent.

Prof. Wm. Dickore of the Miami College, testified to the same facts. So did Prof. Schmidt, the chemist of the Board of Health, Prof. Wm. Hoffman and others.

A practical test was made in court, showing the digestive action of Paskola on eggs and meats of various kinds, whereas glucose under precisely the same conditions produced no effect whatever.

This test but confirmed the experts statements and proved Paskola to be of great value in indigestion and wasting diseases.

This verdict disposes of the malicious attack that has been made against Paskola by interested rivals, and suits have now been brought against the proprietors of a well-known emulsion of cod liver oil for having given wide circulation to a false formula and other misrepresentations regarding it.

The animus of this attack will be the better understood when it is that Paskola is being largely used in the place of cod liver oil.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

I.

Dr. Best, the old professor and king of the medical school, was talking eagerly to a pleasant-faced, slight young student who stood before him. The young man had taken his degree and received his diploma only the day before. He had graduated at the top of his class, and, as Dr. Best had said to one of his fellow professors, as they sat together signing the diplomas, he was the only man in the class who really had a genius for his profession.

Dr. Best was a New York physician of wide reputation who had kept his professorship in the medical school of one of the small inland colleges, both because it was his own college and because the few weeks which his lectures covered gave him almost the only vacation that he could manage to get through the long hard-worked years.

"I'm not so sure that I won't take you into partnership, my boy," he said, after ordinary means of persuasion had seemed to fail. "That is, if you will take a few months first in the —— hospital where I'll get you a grand chance. You ought not to bury yourself in a country practice with your gifts. I'll push you along as fast as I can if you'll come to New York."

The younger man threw back his fine head with a sudden eager gesture—a strange wistful look shone in his eyes. He knew well enough all that the doctor's generous offer and fatherly affectionateness meant; fame and money and all delightful social advantages were put easily within his reach. He was reverent of the world of art and of letters, and of a man's best knowledge and close acquaintance with affairs. But he could not shut his eyes to that other vision of a familiar upland country, the dark hills, the narrow rocky roads, the gray and red farmhouses of Alton. He remembered, too, his father, the old doctor of all that region, physician of souls and bodies, whom everybody had missed, he himself most of all.

"You're very kind, Dr. Best," said John Ashurst, with a bright color in his cheeks. "I know how much your kindness would mean—but you see they need a doctor up at Alton."

"There are plenty of doctors," said the old gentleman, gruffly. "The people up there can get a doctor—there's Duncan or Grafton or Smith who promise fairly well, and don't know where in the world to settle. You ought to have a larger place. Come, make a push and take what belongs to you."

"I feel as if I were needed up at Alton, sir," said the young doctor, with the anxiety slowly leaving his face, and a happy light coming into his eyes again, though he reached his hand for the back of a chair close by and took hard hold of it. Duty was so shining clear that the moment of temptation was quickly over, but he suddenly remembered that he was turning his back upon the most beloved companionship that he had ever known, except his father's. The doctors about Alton, whom he should sometimes meet, were old-fashioned men, not of the best sort; some of whom were likely to be jealous of him. There would be no more talk for him now with Dr. Best or with other friends who saw their profession from anything like a wide point of view, to whom he could speak in his own language. He was facing a good deal of loneliness; he could not hope to go to New York very often; he was in debt already for his education. Dr. Best was an old man, too; they might never meet again.

The old doctor rose gruffly—the moment had grown too painful for them both. "Well, well!" he said, impatiently. "You must do as you think best; mother living and depending upon you; wouldn't feel at home anywhere else; sacred inheritance from your father to take up his work; I know, I know, but if he were here he'd feel just as I do. No, no, I sha'n't forget you. I'm too busy to write much, I never promise; but you write to me if you like, and keep up with the periodicals; poor as they are, they're better than nothing, and you must follow the new notions. Some day, if I can get off, I may run up among the hills in the summer. God bless you, my boy!" said the old gentleman, handing him a book, but not even offering to shake hands, and turning again, grumbling to himself, to fumble among some papers. John Ashurst escaped as quickly as he could—he felt a little light-headed and broken, as if it would be easy to shed tears. When he reached his boarding place he sat down drearily, and thought for a long time, deeply and anxiously. And at last he looked at the great book. It was the very best French surgical work of the day, one that Dr. Best had just imported; he could not have bought it himself with a month's hard work.

II.

A good many years afterward, one winter day, John Ashurst, grown older, and gray and weather-beaten with his long drives over the windy hills, came into a railroad car from one of the small stations within twenty miles of Alton. He carried a heavy wrap over his arm, a Scotch plaid which Dr. Best, dead now these many years, had sent him once after a summer abroad. They had both been too busy to see each other often; once or twice they had met, and once or twice they had done things for each other, but they had never failed to be truly intimate. It had proved as the elder man had foreseen, that John Ashurst had taught him and other doctors more than anybody could teach in return. And he had done marvelous things in surgery and medicine of which the world never heard, but, for all that, the best physicians knew him by name and reputation.

He wore the same boyish, simple look of his student days, and he had a doctor's lovely habit of taking care of other people, so that when he sat down, stiff and tired from a long drive over frozen ground, he noticed that his next neighbor, a cross, grumpy-looking old fellow, whose seat he asked to share in the crowded car, looked old and pinched, and seriously ill besides. His quick eye saw signals of danger from a most obscure disease, and he gave a little sigh as he settled himself and tucked his warm wrap round his companion's knees and drew a corner of it over his own.

"It's too cold here, sir," he said, in an offhand way. "I haven't got far to go myself. I'm ashamed that there are no stoves in the cars yet. I spoke to the conductor this morning about them."

The elderly traveler turned a grateful, surprised face. "You're very kind, sir," he said. "I've been fairly suffering. I haven't been well, and it was a great risk to take this journey!"

John Ashurst considered a little. "I see you are not well, sir," he said at last. "I'm a stranger to you, but I'm a doctor, and I think I could give you some ease now, and perhaps head off what's likely to trouble you a good deal if it goes on."

The stranger took a straightforward look at this unexpected Good Samaritan. He saw a man who looked rich in kindliness and wisdom, and poor in everything besides, but there was a look of distinction about him, there was something that whispered to him to have confidence. "Go on, sir," he said, "if you think you have time. I should be very much obliged to you."

"There isn't much time, but I'll write you a prescription. Tell me if—" and he asked a question or two with sympathy and directness. By the time they parted they were already friends. The traveler was a man of few words and great sincerity. He said that he was in business in Cuba, and had much against his will been obliged to come to the States at this season. His health had suddenly begun to fail him in such a way that he was much concerned. He insisted, in a blunt, old-fashioned way, upon paying the doctor his fee, but the doctor laughed and said the advice was his own proposal—it was nothing, and at that moment he rose and said good-by, hastily. "Keep the wrap,"

"KEEP THE WRAP," HE SAID.

he said. "You can send it back by express to Dr. John Ashurst, Alton. Be careful about chills. That is part of the prescription."

The traveler watched him as he left the car and got into a shaky-looking open buggy with which a young woman was waiting to drive him away. As the cars moved on he twisted about to watch the buggy as far as he could down the frozen road under a gray, bleak sky. It was a poor-looking, hilly piece of country. The traveler took a note book and gold pencil out of his pocket, and wrote down carefully the name of Dr. John Ashurst, of Alton; then he tucked the Scotch plaid well about him and smoothed it over his knees affectionately. "That's a scholar and a gentleman," he thought, with an unusual glow in his heart. "He treated me like a brother. I wonder how he comes to be hidden away in this corner. Well, the world isn't as bad as I thought; it was good sense, everything he said. That fellow I saw yesterday made a trade of it, and this one put me on the right road, if there is any right road. I know my condition better than he thought—but he didn't lie once, and he explained just what chance I had, and how to go to work to take it. That's the doctor for me," and the traveler drummed on the dusty windowsill with a pleasant sense of taking a new lease of life.

Dr. John Ashurst was driving away with one of his daughters, and explaining to her under what circumstances he had left his wrap in the train. "Poor, cross old man," he said. "I should not wonder if I patched him up for some years to come. He was just where that first-rate prescription will hit him right between the eyes; he'll be surprised to find how much better he feels even within a day or two."

"I hope he'll remember to send the plaid back," said the doctor's young daughter, smiling a little. She was too well used to her father's doing such kindnesses on every hand, to take special note of this. Only the thought sometimes flitted through her mind that people hardly ever took the trouble to do him a kindness in return, and when the plaid arrived neatly folded and addressed, but without a word of acknowledgment, she put it in its place on the study sofa and loved her father all the more, because this stranger seemed to love him less.

A Sympathetic Waiter.

Some of the simpler and quieter summer hotels in the Adirondack region are not the least comfortable though their furnishings are primitive and the local waiters have not metropolitan ways. At one of these quiet houses a husband and wife, who were stopping for a few days on their way north, attracted by their pleasant manner the liking of the waiter detailed at the table. Madam, like a true American, called for a little more of some particularly nice pie, whereupon her husband rebuked her jocosely in his care for her health. "No, no, Milly," he said, "you have had quite enough pie for your good." "Never you mind him, Milly," said Elnathan, the waiter, leaning over her chair, a perfect mass of sympathy. "You kin hev all ther pie ther is; here's a hull one."—N. Y. Tribune.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Harper's Bazar
In 1895.

Elegant and exclusive designs for Out-door and In-door Toilettes, drawn from Worth models by Sandoz and Chapuis, are an important feature. These appear every week, accompanied by minute descriptions and details. Our Paris letter by Katharine de Forest, is a weekly transcript of the latest style and caprices in the mode. Under the head of New York Fashions, plain directions and full particulars are given as to shapes, fabrics, trimmings, and accessories of the costume of well-dressed women. Children's Clothing receives practical attention. A fortnightly Pattern-sheet Supplement enables readers to cut and make their own gowns. The woman who takes Harper's Bazar is prepared for every occasion in life, ceremonious, or informal, where beautiful dress is requisite.

An American Serial, Doctor Warrick's Daughter, by Rebecca Harding Davis, a strong novel of American life, partly laid in Penusylvania and partly in the far South, will occupy the last half of the year.

My Lady Nobody, an intensely exciting novel, by Maarten Maartens, author of "God's Fool," "The Greater Glory," etc., will begin the year.

Essays and Social Chats. To this department Spectator will contribute her charming papers on "What We are Doing" in New York society.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1894. TWO CENTS A COPY. $5 A YEAR.

OPENING OF THE FAIR.

Plainfield Delighted With the Festival of Nations.

FIRST NIGHT RECEIPTS $1,000.

All the Town Crowds to the New Y. M. C. A. Building and Lingers Enraptured Over Its Many Excellencies and Its Holiday Adornments—The National Drills a Triumph of Beauty and Art.

When Raffles Haw, the wonderful man created by Conan Doyle, wished to mystify and delight a friend, he took him into his great stone house and by an electric chair whisked him from England to the Orient, and through all the natural splendors of every clime. This bewildering panorama was not accomplished by magic flight through spaces—instead, Raffles Haw had set up within his own walls a perfect representation of the nations' paradises.

To one who had reveled in the glories pictured in Doyle's book, the mystification and delight became last night a living reality, for by going into the great new house of the Young Men's Christian Association one found the glories of the nations there assembled and animate with local coloring.

It was the opening of the great Y. M. C. A. Fair, the Midway, the Festival of Nations—call it what you will. All the town went to see, and all the town agreed that it was a great success. The treasury at the close of the first night gave $1,000 worth of substantial evidence of the people's approval.

Despite the roughness of the work not yet quite finished, the building outside gave proof of its elegance. The handsome and substantial walls gave a sense of security; the blaze through the artistic glass of the delicately-stained windows spread a spirit of welcome and cheer.

It was Plainfield outside—every place within. America stood near the door, with hospitable greeting to this bazar of all the tribes.

No other country could produce this corner grocery store, rough built, loaded with bargains from welting-cord to codfish, run by shrewd Yankees in homely homespun who make you part with your wampum in the most sociable and affable way. Their sunbonneted and linen-dustered attendants stuck not to counter trade, but went abroad among the other nations, drumming custom and spreading jollity.

Invisible the ocean—yet cross, and here is Spain. We have seen it often thus—in pictures, and in our dreams; some, in our travels. The awning canvas of red and yellow stripes wards off the scorch of the sun. The air intoxicates with the perfume of the drowsy flowers twined in the lattice-work. The eyes that gleam through the lattice intoxicate the more—for these Castilian maids have witching arts. One lingers to drink in the beauty of it all, and lingering he buys. The fan, the sofa-pillow, the soap and the sachet, tempt the purse, and contribute to cleanliness and repose. Close by is an orange tree, yielding her fruit at every scissors' snip, and every orange holds a jewel.

A French chateau! The castellated walls are gray with moss and green with ivy. The turret holds a not unwilling prisoner, for his captors are the charming girls of Alsace and Normandy, and they are feeding him on sweets. Here dainty bonbons are ours—for a price, which we pay most cheerfully.

Victorious Japan, back from her invasion and slaughter, has decked herself with flowers. Straw is her thatch, the familiar matting her garment. Her own bloom takes added color and freshness in the profusion of ferns, chrysanthemums and roses, and she yields her blossoms to deck every coat and corsage.

We take a fancy to Sweden, and find it a place of many fancies. Legion is the variety of wares at this booth of the gaily-garbed peasants. We dally over our purchase, and get a book to read, and a shade to throw the lamplight on the page, and a photograph of our pastor, and a frame to put it in—and some paper to write Swedish love letters in the future.

The little ones—how their hearts rejoice at the kindly spirit of St. Nicholas over here in Germany. The reindeer have brought Kris Kringle's pack, and here it is unloaded. The trinkets and toys please the girls and the boys, and the funny old woman who sells unknown treasures from her capacious pocket affords fun for all.

To the land of blue skies, blue waters, gondolas. We are in Venice. It is more beautiful than we dreamed. Italy shows her fairest face, and the purse gladly yields its tribute for worsteds, embroideries and needlework.

The Gypsies in camp. How fascinating the red glow of the lanterns, the gaudiness of the blankets, the tawny beauty of the haughty queen and her proud subjects. Ensconsed on a couch of furs, the fortune-teller traces the lines of destiny, while the pot swinging from its tripod bubbles out a wild Hungarian song. No sorcery is here, but the witchery of woman's ways.

But we break away from the poetry and romance of all this dreamland, and seek the supper room. Here our great national bird is offered up as a sacrifice, and here last night Master carver J. M. Bettman cut up seven of him, in cold and luscious slices. That was only a part of the supper. Besides, there were oysters, and salads, and New England baked beans, Jersey hams, and lots o' fixin's. All this for 50 cents. Or you could get hot pancakes with maple syrup for 5, or ice-cream and cake for 15, or welsh rabbit for 25.

The Welsh rarebit was the best in the world—a most tempting dish prepared by Mrs. J. E. Corlies, Mrs. Harry Adams, Mrs. James T. Scott, Mrs. Charles Hogan and Mrs. E. J. Waring in the Russian tea room.

That tea room was a sumptuous apartment with a huge open fireplace defying the rigore of outside Winter. Its furnishings were a combination of strength and grace, its hangings were adorned with the double eagle of the coat of arms, its colorings restful, its hospitality superb.

While many have thus been touring among the assembled nations, many others have been crowding into the snug little white palace known as Association Hall. Its ivory beauty will not, it is hoped, be marred by attempts at color or gold decorating. The Hall is the scene of the National Festivities, a series of drills which have been arrayed by the composer, Miss Margaret MacL. Eager.

The Festivities were as brilliant a social achievement as Plainfield has ever accomplished. The grace and beauty of the town were dressed in picturesque costumes of brilliant hues, gay with plumes, ribbons, velvet, lace, and spangles. Their kaleidoscopic evolutions were a marvel of motion, a perpetual delight. The Venetian girls and gondoliers were like a vivified romance, and Miss F. A. Underwood sang the gondola song with rare sweetness.

Sweden's troop of gay young people gave a merry romp to catchy music. Miss Randolph, a dainty blithesome vision in gray and white, made a most winsome bride, and Bridegroom William Runyon's geniality was infectious. His original song was an appropriate epilogue to such lively merriment. It ran:

Dear friends, I will sing you a beautiful song
Of the way that we wed o'er the ocean;
We jump and we dance, we kick and we prance,
For that is the popular notion.
The bride with her crown looks away "out of sight",
But the bridegroom—well, gracious! he feels like a fright.

The bridemaids look lovely—I know you will say
That you never saw any so pretty;
But please look again, and gaze on those men,
I think it's a horrible pity
That Murray and Cooley and Hallock and West
Should be so outlandishly foolishly dressed.

Now ladies and gents, we have finished our spiel,
We'll say au revoir and we'll leave you;
But pay us a visit on Thanksgiving night,
We all will be here to receive you.
Now the bride she requests that when dances are done,
You go to the Fair, and you blow in your "mon".

The Hungarian rush was an outburst of fiery vigor. The gypsies sped over the platform in perplexing curves, twining their lines with marvelous speed and intricacy, like the folds of an enormous serpent. Their tambourines hissed like snakes, and then the hissing passed away into beautiful music, and Mrs. Saunders sang. Her Bolero song was a welcome addition to her list of remarkable achievements. It were impossible to strengthen her favor in the popular heart, for that was established even before her famous performance of Esmeralda. But she displayed her genius along new lines, and gave a splendid and finished portrayal of a hazardous part. A big bouquet of roses was passed to her in tribute, and every pair of hands testified the warm congratulation of every heart.

So great and glorious were the Festivities in every particular that the reserved seats for Thursday night's performance were immediately sold, and it was decided to give a second performance that night.

The music for the festivities was by W. E. MacClymont, James S. Petrie and Fermine Ferrer.

Those in charge of the refreshment department last night were Mrs. H. M. Maxson, Mrs. M. J. Petrie, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, Mrs. Carman Parse, Mrs. V. Utzinger, Mrs. J. Bettman, Mrs. L. C. Batson, Mrs. I. N. Van Sickle, Mrs. Krausse, and Mrs. Barnes. Miss Jennie L. Demarest was cashier. The alert and graceful waitresses were the Misses Ernestine Smith, Bessie Titsworth, Sue Lewis, Lu Lewis, Ida Randolph, Bessie Blair, Edith Rand, Jennie Abbott, Miss Blish, Lettie Remson, Clara Force, Elsie Suffren, Lulu Jenkins, Nellie Winckler, Bessie Pound, Lillian Force, Emma Gillam, Jennie Quick, Etta Krymer, Josie Fritz, Nettie Kreitling, Minnie Mechutte, Lizzie Sherwin and Sadie Blimm.

TALKING LOCAL HISTORY.

PLAINFIELD WOMEN DISCUSS THEIR TOWN.

Julian Scott Regarded in the Light of an Eminent Citizen.

The Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and other Christian Women in All Souls Church yesterday afternoon were pleasantly entertained in listening to several very interesting papers of a historical nature concerning Plainfield and its environments.

In the absence of President Mrs. David P. Hall, Mrs. S. R. Krom presided. The first paper was compiled and written by O. B. Leonard, "A Historical Sketch of the First Settlement and Early Founding of Plainfield and Vicinity". The paper treated in thorough manner all historical points of interest and reminded those present that Plainfield had a history of which none should feel ashamed.

Miss Kate Martine prepared a short sketch of the distinguished men of Plainfield, among whom were mentioned Rear Admiral Irvin and a son of Admiral Farragut, who were at one time residents of this city.

Another paper prepared by O B. Leonard, "A Sketch of the Educational Interests", was read by Miss Edith R Leonard. It was intensely interesting, and brought out the details in a way that was highly instructive. It told that in 1843 the first free public school in the State was started, after repeated attempts, and how it grew till through the efforts of its leaders a law was passed granting support from the State to the township committees. From that time until the present the schools have gradually grown in efficiency, and now they are not excelled.

At the close of the reading of the paper, Mrs. Ryder spoke of John Leal's School, and thought that the work of this able teacher should be included in the history already presented. She then told of his ability as evidenced in his students; how one of them, Harry Opdyke, who is a graduate of his school, entered Yale College with high honors. One day after a Latin recitation the professor called him back to the class room and asked him who his instructor had been previous to entering college. He said John Leal, whereupon the professor said "I congratulate you."

Mrs. M. H. Eaton read a specially prepared paper on "Eminent Men of Plainfield," one of whom she said was Julian Scott, who was born in Vermont, February 14, 1846. He is a direct descendant of James Scott of England. When a young man he enlisted as a drummer boy in the late war, and was present at all the battles of the Peninsula campaign. In 1862 he was with Smith's Division at Lee's Mills when so much difficulty was experienced in crossing the stream on account of the shots of the enemy. Many received fatal wounds. The young drummer boy, as he was known, showed his bravery by recuing at least nine of the unfortunates. In recognition of this a medal was presented him by Congress. While in a hospital his military sketches attracted considerable attention; later he went to New York and became a student of Emanuel Seulze when he soon showed great improvement. In 1870 he was elected a member of the National Academy of Design, and in 1873 a member of the Geographical Society, both of New York. The Government appointed Mr. Scott a special agent in 1889, to visit the Indian tribes and give them illustrated reports, which he did in a very commendable manner. He also secured many valuable relics at the time.

One of his choicest paintings is that which adorns the walls of the State House in Montpelier, Vermont, entitled "Cedar Creek".

A general discussion of the papers followed after which the meeting adjourned.

ON WITH THE DANCE.

Call a Spade a Spade, and be as Frank as Happy.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—

What a scene of enchantment it was, is, and will be until the last curtain is rung down on the empty stage on Saturday night.

How beautiful and willowy our maidens and how handsome and graceful our young men, in——the——drills at the Y. M. C. A. fair.

"Drills!" Save the mark! Perhaps on the lips if not in the mind of our truly good and always amiable brother, W. Murray, the "stage" becomes a simple platform and the "curtain" a plain portiere!

All honor to our Y. M. C. A. It does a good work. We are proud of it, especially since it has entered its new home, which is a credit alike to the town and Architect Marsh, but when, in order to mollify a few "high, exalted virtuous dames", (of both sexes!) "tied up in godly laces," it commits the euphemism of calling a merry, exuberant dance a "drill", it outrages all the dictionaries in the land, puts the truth to shame and makes Satan smile!

Why not call it a dance? And why not dance? Did not David dance before the Lord? And why should not we dance to furnish the sinews of the war against evil?

"On with the dance", then! "Let joy", innocent joy, "be unconfined"! I have been there every night and will continue to go to the end. Look for me. You will find me in the front row, for I am,

AN OLD-MAN-NOT-AFRAID-OF-THE-DANCE

THE PEOPLE OR THE BOARD?

Which Shall Rule, Is the Question of Today.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—

What a perfect farce it was on the part of the leaders of our Republican party to assert as they did that a few resolutions passed at a city convention should be binding on trustees of the School Board, yet to be elected, and how cheaply they must feel to find these same gentlemen throw back an open defiance! And what a mess in which it leaves the whole situation!

It must be said to their credit, however, that their determination to defy the law as it now stands, and public opinion, is open and manly.

There is nothing hidden or concealed.

I see but two ways out of the difficulty. One is that every voter in the city should scratch their names from the ticket and thus defeat the election of anyone, when a new election would have to be ordered, and giving time to prepare another ticket. Even a largely reduced vote would be a rebuke to them.

The only other remedy is—Injunctions, which will hold them in check until a proper and constitutional law can be passed in January, and this gross abuse of power be withdrawn from them entirely. The fight is fairly on, and either our city or the School Trustees must rule.

M.

Y. M. C. A. Acknowledgmets.

(From The Book of the Fair.)

The officers of the Young Men's Christian Association and the Festival of Nations bow right and left, as they make acknowledgments of thanks for all the kindness received, making this entertainment possible. A glance backward suggest the kindness of the Casino officers and the managers of the Park Club and Bicycle Club, who, weeks ago, gave the use of their halls for the arrangement of the National Festivities. The courtesy of the city newspapers is also recognized in this retrospective glance. Their columns have been open to frequent notices, and they have not even refused the plea for daily space. The comfortable atmosphere of this large building reminds us of the generosity of Boice & Runyon, who have donated coal to supply the furnaces from the middle of November until after the fair. The shapely booths suggest the kindness of Thorpe & Ivins, who have donated all the lumber used. Much of the work done represents the gift of time, skill and labor from carpenters, painters and others, whose services we gratefully acknowledge. The sight of the orange tree, laden with golden fruit, brings to memory the fact that five hundred oranges were the gift of J. Wesley Johnson, jeweler, of New York, and resident of Plainfield. The clatter of many dishes in the Restaurant Department recalls the fact that the use of all the china has been given by Gavett & Son. Decorations and contents of booths are reminders of indebtedness to Plainfield merchants, who have made liberal discounts and donations. Sweet strains of music compel our thanks to William E. MacClymont, musical director, and his associates. As we go to press, there come to our ears at this date (a week before the fair) rumors of generous donations from business houses in town and out of it. We can only thank all who have given, and all who have in their hearts to give. As we turn the leaves of the "Book of the Fair" we thank all the advertisers whose announcements appear in its columns, and we bespeak for them the liberal patronage of its readers. In an enterprise like this there are many workers, who, like silent partners, contribute greatly to its success, but whose names perhaps appear on no committee, and of whom there is of necessity no official recognition. To all such, and all who have served in any way the interests of this Fair, we give hearty thanks.

—In the Church of Our Saviour Rev. S. P. Simpson will conduct Tankegiving Day services as follows: Holy Communion, 7:20 a. m., second celebration of Holy Communion with sermon, 10:30. Stages will leave North Avenue station at 10 a. m.

G. A. R. INSPECTION.

COMRADES FROM ABROAD TAKEN INTO CAMP.

It Is a Night of Mirth, Melody and Feasting for the Veteran Soldiers.

Winfield Scott Post No. 73, G. A. R., were given their annual inspection last evening by Comrade Suydam of Kearney-Janeway Post, No. 15, of New Brunswick, who was accompanied by large delegations from that Post.

Comrades Randolph and Mague of Major Andereon Post 109 of this city, and John J. Willis of Farragut Post, New York, were also present.

About 10 the business of the evening was concluded and the Women's Relief Corps who were in waiting in the anteroom were escorted to the Post room by Comrade I. L. McVoy, where they served the comrades with coffee, sandwiches and cake.

After the inner man had been supplied, the natural wit and good humor of the veterans began to flow and the result was all had a royal time.

Commander S. W. Reese of Post No. 73 was in the chair and called on the various ones present for remarks.

A friendly rivalry showed itself as each one told of how his company saved the country. A comrade present who enlisted in a New York company, thought that from the remarks made, New Jersey had done it all, but he was sure that his company had performad all the hard work.

Commander Hardy of Post 15, proved to be an excellent entertainer, as did also his fellow-comrades of the same Post.

Past-Commander Atwood of Trenton was present and showed the same lively interest in Post 73, as when he was a resident here.

A most encouraging feature of the affair, was that Major Anderson Post, No. 109, was represented by two comrades, who favor a union of the two Posts, and in their remarks said that the feeling of unity was growing stronger, and they hoped it would not be long before it was accomplished.

Past-Commander W. C. Smith of Post 73 was heartily applauded for his singing, which the comrades always enjoy.

Among those present from the New Brunswick Post were: Commannder Hardy and Comrades Giles, Carman, Canon, Forman, Acker, Price and Shuck.

Dr. Cooper of Westfield was mustered in Post 73 during the evening and the remarks by the visitors later showed that 73 exemplified their private work in a manner that is not excelled by any Post in the State.

The nomination of officers for the ensuing year was made and in all probability they will be elected as follows:

Commander—W. W. Corlell.
Senior Vice-Commander—H. C. Drake.
Junior Vice-Commander—W. R. Moore.
Quartermaster—Andrew Cox.
Surgeon—Dr. Sherman Cooper.
Officer of the Day—C. B. Stephens.
Officer of the Guard—W. C. Smith.
Chaplain—John A. Goodwin.
Council of Administration—C. B. Stephens, John E. Stewart, Charles Graves and W. C. Smith.
Delegates to Department Encampment—I. L. McVoy, John Emmons, Robert Milligan and James W. Fink.

There Are Gems

that attract the eye because of their purity and brilliance, but gems that produce delight that is born of great appreciation, are light, of a tempting brown color and served hot. There are several varieties to suit different tastes, among them: Graham "gems" made from Hecker's Premium Graham Flour packed in muslin bags. Old Homestead "gems", made from Hecker's Old Homestead Flap-Jack Flour, and three other brands can be used, Hecker's Griddle-Cake, Hecker's Yellow Sweet Corn and Hecker's Boston Brown Bread Flour.

Going to Switzerland.

A. V. D. Honeyman of North Plainfield says that the Ragan views tonight are of the precise sights which he expects to show his tourists next August. He is already booking members of his 1895 European party, which embraces an eight-days coaching tour in England, and over two weeks on the Rhine, and in and among the higher Swiss Alps.

Suit for Sponges.

The case of Lowden & Hill of Philadelphia against John H. Sayers of Plainfield, was tried in Elizabeth today before Judge McCormick. They sued for $32.35, claimed to be due for sponges sent to Sayers last September. Sayers admitted receiving the goods, but claimed they were not the goods ordered, and shipped them back. Lowden & Hill admitted receiving them, but claimed they were in badly damaged condition. Geo. DeMeza appeared for Sayers. Decision was reserved.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

THE PEARL DIVER.

Sensation of a First Descent in the Diving Suit.

With the single exception of the coral—which has little, if any, popularity at the present day—the pearl is the only water gem; and of all occupations—perhaps excepting aeronautics—pearl diving is the most dangerous, and is a calling followed by few men.

There is a vast distinction between the wreck or dock diver and the pearl diver, though the same dress is worn by both. Those of the former class do not make so many descents, nor pass so many times under water; they are attended by a faithful companion, and the boat from which they dive is firmly anchored; the depth of water also is not usually great; but with the pearl fishes all the manifold dangers become a thousand times magnified, and any accident almost always terminates fatally.

A pearl diver with a heart or lung trouble, that may have existed to but a slight degree before, if he knew of it at all, will after a few months succumb to the malady. Nearly all divers are partially if not totally deaf. Incipient paralysis is another affliction. A descent made at night by the divers, give a curious and intensely interesting observation of shining phosphorescence. Everything aglow with this wondrous light; the diver himself became transformed, the fish sent forth the soft radiance, and the fascinating reefs and tropical growths are enhanced by this strange, faint yet luminous medium.

The pearl shells are the bread and butter of the diver, 200 or 400 pair being gathered in a day, and are worth to the owner about one dollar a pair. The anemones and other growths on the outside of the shell are easily scraped off while fresh, the oyster is thrown overboard, the only edible portion being the muscle which holds the shells together, and which the Mohammedans eat in their diet of fish and rice. The inside of the shell is the beautifully polished and exquisiteiy hued surface called mother-of-pearl.

The pearl is found imbedded in the oyster, and not, as many suppose, attached to the shell. The diver puts the precious stones in a bottle, and the shells are then cleaned and packed by the Malays ready for the London market. Here they are sold by auction to agents, especially from Austria, where so many beautiful buttons and mother-of-pearl ornaments are made.

The value of the lovely pearl, which needs no polishing or cutting, as do the gems that come from mines, depends on their color, lustre, and shape. Though many prefer the pink or black jewel for their oddity, the Oriental and white pearls are the most valuable, with a lustre that reflects its polished home, and a form that is perfectly round, though the pear and button shapes are available for many ornaments.

NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN.

Short Notes of Persons You Have Heard of Before.

Edouard and Jean De Reszke, the singers brought their bicycles with them when they came from France, and they used them on the boulevards of upper New York when the weather permitted.

The Empress of Austria has to give a written receipt for the state jewels every time she wears them, and her majesty, as a result, usually contents herself with a private collection, which is worth about $1,500,000.

Tiberius, the Roman Emperor, was born in November, but when the Senate wished to name it in his honor, as July had been after Julius Caesar, and August after Augustus, he refused, saying: "What will you do, conscript fathers, if you have thirteen Cæsars?"

It is a current literary rumor that Marion Crawford will come back again as a resident of America, and that he has gone back to his Italian home practically to arrange for the removal of his family and their effects.

The Duke of Argyle, whose engagement to Miss Knox Little is announced in London, is over 70 years old and has been married twice already. His son, the Marquis of Lorne, married Queen Victoria's daughter, Princess Louise.

Lotta gave up the stage and went abroad for the purpose of studying art seriously for at least two years, and if she makes a success of it will probably never go back to the footlights. Being more than comfortably well off and possessed of a goodly share of artistic talent, displayed on more than one occasion by dainty bits of color in oils, it seems a sensible move for her to take rest and recreation in the study of art after her many successful years before the theatrical public.

Military Training in Schools.

There is a movement on foot to make instruction in military drill general in the public schools.

The idea of military drill first originated with the parade of 4,5000 public school boys during the Centennial in New York. It was the sight of those erect, manly lads, that moved, it is said, the gallant old General Sherman to tears. Ex-President Harrison, then in office, was also deeply impressed and made the remark "that with such boys for citizens the country was safe."

Aside altogether from the soldierly influence, the patriotic spirit developed, the purely physical benefit of military drill should commend it as a necessity. Sound mind in sound body, you see. We want men of muscle as well as men of brains, whether they may ever be called upon to take up arms or not. But if we carry our point and battle day ever did come, what a splendid thing to have another 15,000,000 soldiers ready at short notice to enter the field.

Art Furniture.

"That stove," began the customer with deadly calmness, "you sold me last week as an 'art stove,' I believe?"

"Yes," admitted the dealer. "Isn't it?"

"It doesn't know any more about art than a hog does about Sunday."

"Eh? What?"

"I say it doesn't know the first thing about art. I haven't tried it on painting yet, but it can't draw worth a cent."—Indianapolis Journal.

PUMAS IN DEADLY CONFLICT.

Great Cats That Make a Rattling Fight When Evenly Matched.

"Pumas, and there's going to be a fight,' said our South American guide in a whisper. When we caught sight of the two animals they were crouching close to the ground, facing each other, in a small space under some large trees. They were the finest specimens of the puma I ever saw.

"They were probably thirty feet apart, and as they crouched there glaring at each other they looked like giant cats about to spring on their prey. Pugilists never sparred with greater caution than did those big brutes. Their tails were switching back and forth, and their eyes were like balls of fire. Slowly they moved around in a circle, all the time cautiously getting closer and closer together. It was evident that each was waiting for the other to make the first lead. For more than ten minutes they watched and waited. The roaring and snarling we had heard when they first met had ceased. They made no sound now as they watched for a chance to spring.

"Our own nerves were trembling under the strain when at last the two great beasts rose in the air at the same instant, and, like catapults, came together with a thud that could have been heard 200 yards away. They dropped to the ground, and for almost ten minutes all we could make out was too great brown bodies rolling over and over in the death struggle. They made no outcry of any kind, but every few seconds we could hear their powerful jaws come together with a snap like the closing of a well-oiled steel trap.

"Finally they began to weaken, and as their struggles became less violent we could see that both of them were covered with blood, while their flesh was torn in shreds. In five minutes more the fight was over and the two giants of the forest were stretched out at full length on the ground, clasped in each other's limbs, just as two playful kittens sometimes lie down together. They struggled feebly a little longer and then both of them lay perfectly still. Both were dead when we got to them, and I never saw animals so torn to pieces. The entrails of both were torn out and scattered over the ground where they had fought, and in their necks were great ragged holes, from which the blood had flowed in streams while they were still fighting. They each had a score of wounds that would have killed any animal with less tenacity of life."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A SMART WOMAN.

She Persuaded an Insurance Company and Is Its Bustling Agent.

Women as insurance agents are certainly an innovation in business life which has not shown itself in every city, but San Francisco boasts of one who successfully manages the woman's department of a life insurance company.

She is described as a "dainty bit of humanity as delicate as Dresden china," and not at all on the order of the advanced women of the age. She also has the honor of being the only woman in that part of the country who holds such a place.

A few years ago she found it necessary to depend upon her own resources for a living, and became interested in the insurance business through the fact that women were obliged to pay $5 a thousand more than men for the insurance on their lives.

The injustice led her to seek a remedy, and she looked up statistics, consulted business men and finally hit upon a plan whereby sex need not be considered in the proposition at all. She had a long struggle to bring the insurance company around to her way of thinking, but she ultimately convinced them of the feasibility of her system. Woman's unreliability in regard to telling her age, the great risk of her husband's putting her out of the way for the money, her life is worth, and, in fact, all objections which militate against women as profitable subjects of life insurance were promptly abandoned by this company's representatives in acknowledgment of her good arguments.

A woman's department was created for her and a corps of female assistants who receive the same rates as the men solicitors, were put under her supervision.

LOWELL'S PRETTY DAUGHTER.

She Didn't Inherit Her Father's Genius or His Tastes.

Mrs. Edward Burnett is the only daughter of the late James Russell Lowell. She was a very pretty, attractive young girl, much admired by the undergraduates at Harvard, as well as by the large number of people whom her father's fame brought about them both. It was one of Miss Lowell's grievances that she was supposed by all the acquaintances whom she made to have the wit and wisdom of her parent. It is a stock story concerning her that when she was asked, as she generally was, "Do you care for poetry?" she always replied fiercely, "No, I hate it!"

Kansas Wind.

"It do blow a little sometimes out in Kansas," said the man with the far-away look that comes to those who are accustomed to gazing across broad prairies.

"Yes," assented the fat man.

"Yes. I remember oucet when it blowed so hard that I couldn't see the barn that was less'n a hundred yards away."

"Air so full of snow or dust?"

"Neither on. Air was as clear as could be. It jist simply blowed so hard that the sight of the barn was blowed away 'fore it could reach me. I was lookin' straight acrost the wind at the time, you see."—Cincinnati Tribune.

SHIPS THAT CAN NEVER COME IN.

Oh, wondrously fair are the Islands of Rest—
Those islands we have never seen—
But we know they are smiling out there in the west,
Their valleys all glowing in green.
No cloud ever crosses this tropical sky,
And there is no sorrow or sin,
And snug in their harbors all peacefully lie
Our ships that never come in.

There dwell the fair faces our fancy may see,
With eyes of the tenderest blue,
That come in our slumbers to you and to me,
In dreams that can never come true.
We joyfully greet them, nor wish they were here
'Mid all the danger and din:
They are blissfully guarding the hopes we hold dear—
Our ships that never come in.

THIS OLD COUNTRY.

Good times or bad times, we're with this country still;
With her on the mountain tops, or slidin' down the hill!
Don't care how corn's a-selling, if cotton's high or low;
This old country, brethren, is the best one that we know!

Good times or bad times, we're with this country still;
Every time we feel her shake, we have a friendly chill!
Don't care how things is goin', nor how the tempests blow.
This here old country, brethren, is the best one that we know!

Good times or bad times, we're with this country still;
With her when we sow the grain, an' when we go to mill.
Don't care what's in the future, we'll whistle as we go.
For this old country, brethren, is the best one that we know!

Knew His Business.

Fair Sufferer—Doctor, are corns always caused by wearing shoes that are too tight?

Chiropodist—Not always, ma'am. That is what causes them in the case of your friend, Miss Biggins, across the way. Her feet was made to fit a No. 6 shoe, and she's a-trying to crowd 'em into a No. 4. Yours, ma'am, is produced by wearing too large a shoe, which makes wrinkles in the leather and causes friction agin the cuticle.—Chicago Daily Tribune.

The Soldierly Way.

The lady was seeking to be disagreeable to the young army officer.

"I suppose," she remarked, with a faint sneer, "that sometime in your career you have beaten a retreat?"

"I have madame," he admitted without a blush.

"Ah, indeed?" Will you tell me how you did it?"

"Certainly, madam. I did it by making an advance. That beats a retreat all to pieces."

CHAPTER I.—DR. GLADE'S TREATMENT.

"Was that Miss Glade I saw driving away as I came in?" asked Maj. Passmore, removing his glasses.

"It was Dr. Glade," replied his sister.

"Doctor; fudge! The idea of calling a young woman fresh from college a doctor."

Maj. Passmore was a tall, gray-haired skeptic of sixty; his sister, Ruth, a shrinking little spinster of fifty.

"Well, what did she say? Is Connie any better?" asked the major, testily.

"Dr. Glade said she was making satisfactory progress."

"Progress! Hum! It's my belief she's getting weaker every day."

"Now, Roger, you know better."

"Now, Ruth, you will pardon my bluntness, but your simple faith in this Miss Glade is extremely childish."

"Dr. Glade has done her good," said Aunt Ruth, assertively.

"Not a bit. We have been at Hastings now a month; her cough has grown worse, her cheeks paler, she's more languid and indifferent and her appetite is entirely gone."

"It's taken time to comprehend her case."

"Rubbish! Dr. Lancewood understood her case, and it's my opinion you made a grave mistake when you left home and took the case out of his hands."

"Dr. Lancewood did nothing to benefit her; and, besides, he recommended Hastings."

"But not a female practitioner; who, I'm convinced, is letting her drift into consumption. So I've sent for Dr. Lancewood to come down."

"What will Dr. Glade think?"

"I don't care what Miss Glade thinks. Connie's life is in danger, and I sh'an't put up with this feminine nonsense any longer. I wrote to him yesterday, and asked him to wire when he could come down."

"Well, all I can say is, it's an insult to Dr. Glade. And if I were in her place, I should throw up the case," said Miss Ruth Passmore, indignantly, as she left the room.

"WHY, DR. GLADE, HOW COULD YOU KNOW THAT?"

Maj. Roger and Miss Ruth Passmore, of Passmore Grange, Hampshire, were the guardians of their niece, Miss Constance Passmore, who had been ailing since the Christmas festivities. Dr. Lancewood, their local practitioner, had been unable to discover anything seriously the matter with the young lady, so that when Aunt Ruth suggested passing the month of March at Hastings, he readily admitted it might do her good. Constance Passmore was an heiress; a romantic, fragile blonde of twenty; being somewhat delicate, she had been a petted child; and nothing that wealth and devotion could procure had been denied her as a girl.

When Dr. Helen Glade took her case in hand, she was greatly perplexed how to prescribe for the symptoms. But gradually she began to see that it was an ailment seldom met with in hospital practice, while the remedy was not to be found in the Pharmacopœia. She prescribed a mild tonic, and applied her own personal sympathy until she had won the girl's confidence.

The morning that Maj. Passmore had been traducing her, Dr. Glade had diagnosed Connie's complaint and settled upon a decisive remedy.

Dr. Helen Glade was a graceful, self-reliant, pale-featured woman of twenty-six, with dark, glossy hair brushed as smoothly over her brow as its rippling tendency would permit. She said to Connie, on calling that morning:

"I think, my dear, I fully comprehend your case now. Little by little I have learned where you got the germs of the fever which is prostrating you."

"Where did I get it?" asked the invalid, languidly reclining on a couch.

"While decorating the Christmas tree, from your cousin."

"Oh Dr. Glade!" rising on her elbow, her transparent cheeks aflame.

"Pardon me, my dear, but a physician to be of any use to the patient must have her full confidence. Did you not feel the first symptoms then?"

"Yes, but more the night after," shyly.

"Which was Christmas; there had been a family party. For three days Cousin Walter had been very attentive. Am I right?"

Her patient nodded assent.

"On Christmas night, after having been all day very merry, facetious, and devoted, you found yourselves alone in the—the conservatory?"

"No, it was the library."

"Ah, the library. Yes, well?"

"I had been reading 'The Newcomes,' and I asked him if he had ever read it. And he said he had just finished it. Wasn't it odd?"

"It was. So he asked you how you liked Ethel Newcome?"

"Yes he did. How strangely you hit upon things."

"And he compared you to Ethel (only you were much prettier), and said: 'If you could only love him as Ethel did Clive, he would be the happiest fellow in the world.'"

"Why, Dr. Glade, how could you know that?"

"Mere conjecture, my dear. But that dear old 'Newcomes' is responsible for many an ill-starred romance in real life. And so you said you could, and you were engaged."

"No." Connie shook her head sadly

"Then, what happened—a quarrel?"

"Oh, no. When Walter spoke to Uncle Roger, he was in a great rage, and—and said he should never consent to it. Walter left the next day—and"—with a sob—"we have never seen each other since. And uncle won't let me mention his name."

Dr. Glade regarded her a moment reflectively, and then said:

"What is your cousin?"

"A medical student at King's college, London."

"His name is Walter—er—?"

"Walter Plyne. His mother was poor mamma's sister. Mamma's relations are all poor."

"Thank you, my dear, for your confidence. I can now prescribe for you, I hope, with more success."

The next day, when she called, Dr. Glade said to Aunt Ruth: "I should like Miss Connie to drive with me this afternoon. I find she wants rousing, and her mind diverting from the subject which I believe you know is depressing her."

"Yes, I know what you mean," said Aunt Ruth; "I wish she could forget it."

"I am comparatively at leisure from two until four in the afternoon, and I shall be glad of her company then."

That afternoon Dr. Glade and her charming patient drove along the sea front in her victoria. For some time the girl did not spontaneously respond to her companion's cheerful conversation; but as they were turning they met old Dr. Wrench driving with his new assistant. As they passed both gentlemen raised their hats.

Connie eagerly grasped Dr. Glade's hand, and asked: "Who was that gentleman?"

"Old Dr. Wrench and his assistant."

"But the other—it is Walter!" her cheeks suddenly aglow with warm pink tints.

"Your Cousin Walter?"

"Yes. Do you think he noticed me?"

"Oh, he must have done so, for he didn't notice me."

"He looked pale, didn't he?"

"I don't think so," said Dr. Glade, reflectively.

"And his mustache has grown longer."

"Has he got one? I didn't notice it."

"Oh yes, dark and curly. How long has he been with Dr. Wrench?"

"Only a short time, I believe."

"He must have obtained his degree."

"Certainly, or Dr. Wrench would not have engaged him."

"Oh, I'm so glad! For poor Walter has had such a struggle—it is so expensive—and the examinations so difficult."

For the remainder of the drive Miss Connie's animation was in marked contrast with her lassitude earlier in the day. The following afternoon, when Dr. Glade called, Aunt Ruth timorously said:

"Will you come into the library, Dr. Glade? My brother wished to speak with you about Connie."

"Yes," said Uncle Roger, when they were all three closeted together. "I—I wished to ask, Miss Glade, if you would object to a consultation regarding Connie's case, with our family physician?"

"OH, WE KNOW EACH OTHER ALREADY."

"Certainly not," replied Dr. Glade, "but I really don't think it necessary."

"Possibly not," broke in Uncle Roger, brusquely, "but for my own satisfaction, I should prefer it."

"Oh, then by all means, let us have the consultation—for your own satisfaction"—replied Dr. Glade, with the faintest tone of irony in the last three words.

While driving that afternoon, Dr. Glade called at the hospital, and asked Connie to go with her to the children's ward, as there were no infectious cases, and it might interest her. To Connie's surprise, they found Dr. Wrench's assistant there, and, to her still greater surprise, he came up and greeted Helen as if he had known her some time.

"Permit me," said Dr. Glade, "to introduce you to a patient of mine; Miss Passmore, this is Dr. Plyne."

"Oh, we—we know each other," stammered the young man.

"Ha! then it is all the better. Will you kindly explain the ward to Miss Passmore, while I transact a little business with the matron. I know you will excuse me, my dear," with a knowing glance at Connie, and then Dr. Glade hastened away.

THE ENGLISH IDIOM.

Amusing Linguistic Experiences of a French Visitor.

A recent French visitor in this country was M. X., a man too talented and too well known to permit of the use of his name in this connection; for this is to set forth some of the difficulties he experienced in the pursuit of the English idiom. Indefatigable in zeal, when literal translation failed him, he resorted to logic; and when this led him into error, as it inevitably did, he depended solely upon his memory, and would often pause to search for a fitting phrase.

He witnessed a play that was a success, and the players were called before the curtain for applause. One actress in particular was applauded.

"She comes in for the lion's share," said a friend to M. X.

M. X. understood, and later attempted to use the same descriptive, but, his memory failing, resorted to translation. "And zis actresse—she come on for ze part of ze lion."

"Was it a trained animal show?" asked the listener.

On another occasion he was speaking of a call he had made on a friend who, he said, lived in a flats house.

"Flat house, you mean," he was corrected.

"Mais non," he persisted, having thought the matter out. "Flat house—zat ees flat on ze top. But flats house—zat has ze flats een eet. And zat ees where he lives."

Politics interested him. "Zey tell me," he said, "zat to obtain an appointment in zis cittie, one must half un drag. Non—zat ees not ze word; non drag—ah! I haf eet! Un pull! Zat ees necessaire."

It was when he ventured into American slang, however, that he found himself at sea without oars, sail or rudder. Some gamin had been rude to him on the street, and in describing the matter, he said: "And I gave heem a good cooking."

"What? A cooking?"

"I do not tink zat ees what I gave heem," he admitted, puzzled.

"A basting, perhaps," was suggested. "You thrashed him."

"Oh, non. I did not put hands on heem."

"Perhaps you scolded him—gave him a roasting?"

His face brightened. "Ah, zat I did, parfaitment. I gave heem a good rrroasting."

When he went back to France he was pained to leave his American friends, who had become dear to him. He declared that he would never miss an opportunity to see them.

"Eef ever I may see you again, I will do so, eef I must come from a very long deestance off. Or, as you Americans say so charrrmingly—even eef I must come from a way back. Zat shall be my pleasure—to come from a way back."—N. Y. Times.

How She Felt.

The woman had been cleaning house, and when she was tired enough to feel like throwing her best parlor chair at any visitor who might come, a book peddler presented himself.

"Madam," he began, "I have here—"

"Stop right there," she interrupted. "Have you a mother?"

"I used to have, madam."

"Have you a wife?"

"Yes, madam, and I'm trying to make a living for her, and I have here—"

"Stop there!" she interrupted again. "if a man came to her when she was as dead tired as I am and made matters worse by trying to sell her a book, what would you want her to do to him?"

"I should want her to buy his book as soon as she could and get rid of him, madam."

"Well," she snapped, "I'm glad I'm not your wife. Now, you get out of this, quick, or she won't have as poor an excuse for a husband as she already has," and he stood not upon the order of his going.—Detroit Free Press.

How They Struck Her.

People have long ceased to be surprised at any abnormal development of the sleeve, which seems to increase in size every season, but it is interesting just now to note how fashion has also attacked the neck—which is being muffled up with bandages, politely called "stocks," and then ornamented with full rosettes, large bows, bunches of material, etc., which to the uninitiated suggest a very bad throat of some kind. An old auntie from the country was present at a fashionable luncheon party given by her niece. She was a humorous old soul, and was seen to chuckle silently as she took in the assemblage. "What is it, Aunt Martha?" asked one of the family, desirous of drawing her out. "Land sakes! Mary Alice!" she exclaimed, "I had heard of the sleeves and expected to see them queer, but what do you 'spose is the reason that all of your girl friends have got the mumps?"—N. Y. Tribune.

In Days to Come.

"It's awfully lonesome at home, Mr. Nexdur, I thought I'd run over and see you a little while. Anything new?"

"No, except that my wife has joined a new club. That's where she is now. You won't mind, Mr. Nayber, if I keep right on washing the dishes? It's Patrick's evening out."—Chicago Tribune.

THE SPOKESMAN OF THE PEOPLE

THE WEATHER.

For Tomorrow: Fair, Colder. Decidedly Northwest Winds.

A Lesson in Fairness.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

John T. Dunn told a Washington newspaper man on Thursday that he had had enough of political life, which is gratifying evidence that John has come to the opinion of the majority of the people in this district—Plainfield Courier-News.

It is always best to be fair, as The Journal is, before election as well as after; but it is generally supposed that after election is the time for generosity toward defeated candidates. The Courier-News doubtless intends to poke a little post-election fun at Mr. Dunn, but it certainly does him injustice. Mr. Dunn did not wait until after he was defeated to state openly that he had had enough of Congressional life to entirely satisfy him He said so before his term was half over; said so long before he was renominated; said so to the members of his own party and members of all other parties with whom he spoke He did not go away to Washington to make the announcement, he made it in this city, time and again. But Mr. Dunn was the logical candidate of his party; he claimed in accordance with party usage, a renomination as his party's approval of his course, and he received it, albeit after very strong opposition. It is only fair to Mr Dunn to state these things, for they are known to be facts by scores of people who have talked with Mr Dunn about his further political ambitions. Moreover he felt that he would not be reelected, for when before election a well-known sporting man proposed to bet on the results, Mr. Dunn advised him to do nothing of the kind, "for", he said, "the odds are too great against me".

PARTICULAR MENTION.

A delightful surprise party was given to Chester B. Dennis of La Grande avenue last night.

Wm. C. Smith and son will drive tomorrow to Matawan, Freehold and Spotswood, for a hunt of several days.

Arthur H. Serrell, a student at Lehigh University, is spending his Thanksgiving vacation at the home of his parents on Plainfield avenue.

H. S. Dederick, Jr., who conducts the Symphony free concert in Association Hall tonight, is a nephew of the late ex-Mayor Evans and was formerly a resident of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Foster of Seventy-second street, New York, and Mrs. Vanderbeek and Miss Laura Vanderbeek are the guests at the home of D. N. Greendyke, Mercer avenue. Miss Vanderbeek will serve as bridemaid tonight at the Murray-Tilney wedding.

Mrs. W. J. Luckey of W. Second street, who for several weeks has been suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism, is doing well under the care of Dr. D. C. Adams. Mrs. Luckey's mother, Mrs. Heidt of Kenoza Lake, N. Y., has been a faithful attendant during her illness.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Families and their guests are planning to take supper Thanksgiving night at the Y. M. C. A. Fair. The supper served last night was an exceedingly good one.

—You will need heavy-sole shoes tomorrow. In order to accommodate you, Doane & Edsall will keep their store open until 9:30 tonight. They will be closed all day tomorrow.

—In the Church of the Redeemer Thanksgiving Day services will be held at 10 a. m. Friday, St. Andrews Day, there will be celebration of Holy Communion at 10 a. m. and evening service at 8.

—All the Symphony concerts at the Fair are to be given in Association Hall, and not in Gymnasium Hall as the book states. They come directly after the children's entertainments, and are always free.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Cansjoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best Cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. At L. W. Randolph's Drug Store. Regular size 50c. and $1 00. Our price 45c. and 90c.

THANKSGIVING REVERIES.

Here we are again at the old farm homestead in the Wabash valley and a few—alas, how few!—representatives of the now widely scattered family are seated at the long table in the old "living room," which is the dining room on the western farm. But the dinner is a composite affair. It shows that the old neighborhood is in a transition state between the conventional Thanksgiving dinner of the east and the "farmer's Sunday dinner" of the olden time.

Turkey? Well, that's as it happens. It is not indispensable. Chicken pie? Most assuredly. The grandchildren would consider themselves swindled if they dined at the old farmhouse and did not get chicken pie. And the "wishbones" must be kept whole at any cost. Boiled ham sliced cold is a sort of standby. Celery? Well, that's an eastern innovation, so to speak, and outside of the towns and cities it is not common; but, of course, "our folks have it. "Pumpkin pie? Generally. Mince pie? Most assuredly. There wouldn't be real Thanksgiving without it. Then fruit and cheese. Homemade cider to start on, and at the close coffee, "made very strong and weakened down with cream and sugar." After that unrestrained fun for the children, cob pipes for the older men, cigars for the younger and smiles for everybody. Such is our Thanksgiving in these days in western Indiana.

The nights are deliciously crisp and cool and just long enough for a fellow to get all the sleep he wants. There are no gnats or mosquitoes or buzzing flies. In the deepest woods there is no danger of treading unawares upon a snake, the blue lizards have gone into winter quarters, the hornets no longer buzz from the big gray ball in the old apple tree, and the pesky yellow jackets are not in it.

Numbers of napkin rings have appeared and seem to indicate some new demand. These are artistic, being bands of flowers irregularly disposed and evidently studied from nature.

New examples of the use of imperfect pearls have been observed in a gondola, the pearls being the hull and the canopy of colored gems. Another was a swan with a diamond, beneath which came the long neck and bill above.—Jewelers' Circular.

Thanksgiving Rhyme and Reason.

Call me early, call me early,
If you want your Oysters prime.
For the Turkey's Thank-day dressing,
Oysters must be had in time
Now's the time to place your orders—
We fresh oysters get for you.
If you don't want turkey dressing,
Try our specials—fry or stew.
Housewives must be up and doing,
For the turkey must be ate,
And when served with Rogers's oysters
All will want a second plate.

THE TALK OF GOTHAM

RUBINSLEIN'S DEATH A BLOW TO AMERICAN MANAGERS.

Dr. Doyle Treats Upon an American Romance at a Dinner of the Lotus Club, and Says Some Very Pleasant Things. Other News of Interest.

Rubinstein's death will have the effect of shutting off a great many men who have been scheming vigorously and persistently for his service in this country for several years. The influences brought to bear on the great pianist last year from this side of the water were so strong that he eventually yielded a quasi consent to come over for another American tour. Nothing was officially sent out about it, but it was know generally that the combination which finally persuaded Rubinstein to undertake another tour in this country was largely dominated by Mr. Abbey and Mr. Steinway. The public had been without a great pianist since the time of the Paderewski furor, and the enormous sums of money taken in by the long haired Pole excited the managers of public amusements to such an extent that the world was practically scoured for somebody who could succeed Paderewski, or, at least divide the field with him. Mr. A. M. Palmer succeeded in finding a musician whose hair was almost as long as Paderewski's and he was brought out with a great flourish of trumpets, but Slavinski lacked in some way the charms of the gifted, red-haired Pole. Josef Hoffman, the boy pianist, whom Mr. Abbey brought out here when he was a little chap in knickerbockers, has grown to be a round-shouldered, mawkish young man, without personal charm and with no great ability as a player. Finally every manager who was after a pianist, and this included a very large number of people, settled down for a long chase after Rubinstein. It is said that the bait which materially assisted Messrs. Abbey and Steinway in their efforts to get him to come over to this country was the promise that the big Metropolitan Opera House company would produce Rubinstein's opera in a gorgeous and unprecedented style. The great pianist had no antipathy to Americans, but he dreaded the ocean, and that was his main objection at all times to a journey to this country.

At a recent dinner tendered Dr. A. Conan Doyle, the English novelist among other good things, had this to say about a feature of America which we had evidently lost sight of: "I have heard even Americans say that life is too prosaic over here; that romance is wanting. I do not know what they mean. Romance is the very air they breathe. You are hedged in with romance on every side. I can take a morning train in this city of New York, I can pass up the historic and beautiful Hudson. I can dine at Schenectady, where the Huron and Canadian did such bloody work; and before evening I have found myself in the Adirondack forest, where the bear and the panther are still to be shot, and where within four generations the Indian and the frontiersman still fought for the mastery. With a rifle and a canoe you can glide into one of the back eddies, which have been left by the stream of civilization. I feel keenly the romance of Europe. I love the memories of the shattered castles and the crumbling abbey; of the steel clad knight and the archer; but to me the romance of the redskin and the trapper is more vivid, as being more recent. It is so piquant also to stay in a comfortable inn where you can have you hair dressed by a barber, at the same place where a century ago you might have been left with no hair to dress. And no less wonderful are those Western cities, which, without any period of development, seem to spring straight into a full growth of every modern convenience, but where, even among the rush of cable cars and the ringing of telephone bells, one seems still to catch the echoes of the woodman's axe and of the scout's rifle. These things are the romance of America, the romance of change or contrast, of danger met and difficulty overcome, and let me say, that we, your kinsmen; upon the other side, exult in your prosperity, and it is those who know British feeling—true British feeling—best, who will best understand how true are my words. I hope you don't think I say this or that I express my admiration for your country merely because I am addressing an American audience. Those who know me better on the other side, will exonerate me from so unworthy a motive.

The general style of abuse to which Superintendent Byrnes has been subjected of late makes curious reading when it is compared with the elaborate and extravagant encomiums which have been lavished upon this public officer during the past decade. The saying "that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country" can find no truer illustration than is furnished by the names of Edison and Byrnes. Everywhere abroad the two names are widely known where the names of our statesmen and millionaires sound strange. Edison, who is a very modest man, was very much astonished during his recent trip in Europe at the honors which were showered upon him, and Byrnes would probably have a similar experience.

ROGER LEWIS.

More Care for Colds.

Catching cold is as easy as falling off a log, but it is not necessary to keep it caught. With the cold comes the consciousness of possession. Then is the time to begin the cure. The first requisite is higher temparature. Turn on the heat, cover up warmly, take a lively walk, go through little exercise, drink a cup of hot tea, milk, lemonade, chocolate or anything but alcohol to promote perspiration; if it is possible to get to sleep in a blanket or two the cold will be over in an hour. Another cure is to take five or ten grains of quinine and a hot drink on retiring and sleep in a woolen gown; on rising take another five grain pill one half hour before meals. If the diet is laxative in character 30 grains of quinine used this way with an ounce of common sense will cure the biggest fresh cold.—Westchester Local News.

THE CZAR AND HIS BRIDE.

Characteristics of the Czarina. She Has Cosmopolitan Ideas.

The young lady who is now Czarina has been one of the most democratic princesses in Europe in the selection of her playmates and friends.

Questions of rank have not influenced her, and few of the young women who have been her intimates at Darmstadt belong to aristocratic circles. She has invariably selected them for their own sterling merits. She is fond of simplicity and dislikes pomp and parade. She likes home life, and among her pet accomplishments is the art of plain stitching.

Princess Alix has brains and reads

THE CZAR AND CZARINA OF RUSSIA.

many historical works and books of travel—she doesn't care for novels. She is a good linguist and has made such progress with the crabbed Russian language that she already talks it with tolerable fluency. Her manner is simple, dignified and gentle, and her expression is pensive, even melancholy. To the fact that her health has never been very strong this expression is probably due. A great deal of nonsense has been printed about her rumored disinclination to marry the young Russian ruler; but it may be taken for granted that even if there is not yet much sentiment in their regard there is hearty liking and respect.

THIS IS A CAPITAL STORY.

How Helena and Anaconda Struggled to be Montana's Capital.

In a recent editorial the New York Sun had this breezy account of the attempt of the Montana Anaconda to swallow Helena's capital honors:

The defeat of the Anaconda millionaire who spent a half of one of his millions at the recent election in trying to make the city of Anaconda, of which he is the chief owner, the capital of the State of Montana, has made Helena, the successful rival of Anaconda, delirious with joy. The millionaire had hired flaming orators and the best of brass bands to sound the glories of Anaconda, and they had made the whole State ring. He "retained" half the lawyers in Montana to prove that Anaconda was the political, if not the geographical, centre of the State. He started newspapers to boost it up, and circulated them by the cart load at his own expense. The excitement was tremendous, and shouts of "Anaconda" were heard from the Bitter Root Mountains to the Little Missouri River.

The men of Helena were in despair for a time; but at last they adopted the enemy's tactics, raised an anti-Anaconda fund, hired pro-Helena orators and bands, and loaded all the procurable Helena wagons with anti-Anaconda newspapers. Never before was there such an uproar in the Stubtoe State. Nobody seemed to care anything about the candidates for Congress and the Legislature, or about Democracy or Republicanism. The overshadowing issue was the Stubtoe capital. At the election the dude city of Helena won the day against the slouch-hat city of Anaconda.

We are satisfied. Helena is thrice as big as Anaconda. Helena's pretty houses are better than Anaconda's unpainted shanties. Helena has three or four nabobs to Anaconda's single millionaire. Helena has been the capital of Montana ever since it became a State five years ago. The name of Helena is as romantic as that of Anaconda is hideous. Let Helena hold the honors of Montana's capital.

Sybil's Soliloquy.

Sybil Graydon was wrapped in thought. She had some other wraps on; but they were usual with her, while the thought was extra. She was thinking of Benson Lane and Jack Stockton, and this is what she thought: "Now, Benson is a beautiful dancer, and he is absolutely au fait at parties or at any kind of fashionable entertainment; but he can't play football, and says it is a rough, nawsty game. Jack is the best guard in the country, but he can't dance any more than a hippopotamus. I know I could never teach Benson football, and I doubt whether I could educate Jack up to dancing—and there is the quandary. If one could do both, it would be easy to choose between them; but as it is, it is hard, very hard, and I really don't know what to do with them. Perhaps, however" (and here an extra gleam of intelligence brightened her violet eyes), "it would simplify matters somewhat if one or the other would propose."

And the chances are a hundred to one, and no takers, that it would.

Possibilities of Texas.

Deleware is not a densely populated State, but were Texas as thickly peopled her population would be about 25,000,000. Were Texas as numerously peopled as Massachusetts her population would exceed by 10,000,000 the total population of the United States according to the census of 1890. More impressive still, if Texas were as densely populated as Rhode Island her population would be more than 83,000,000.

"Jaggs, did your speeches on the stump against the income tax have any effect?" "Did they? Well, I guess yes. The commercial agencies raised my rating twice."—Detroit Tribune.

Harper's Weekly

In 1895

Harper's Weekly is a pictorial history of the times. It presents every important event promptly, accurately, and exhaustively in illustration and descriptive text of the highest order.

The manner in which, during 1894, it has treated the Chicago Railway Strikes and the Chino-Japanese war, and the amount of light it was able to throw on Korea the instant attention was directed to that little-known country, are examples of its almost boundless resources. Julian Ralph, the distinguished writer and correspondent, has been sent to the seat of war, and there joined by C. D. Weldon, the well-known American artist, now for many years resident in Japan, who has been engaged to co-operate with Mr. Ralph in sending to Harper's Weekly exclusive information and illustration.

During 1895 every vital question will be discussed with vigor and without prejudice in the editorial columns, and also in special articles by the highest authorities in each department. Portraits of the men and women who are making history, and powerful and caustic political cartoons, will continue to be characteristic features. This Busy World, with its keen and kindly comment on the lesser doings of the day, will remain a regular department.

Fiction. There will be two powerful serials, both handsomely illustrated—The Red Cockade, a stirring romance of olden days by Stanley J. Weyman, and a novel of New York, entitled The Son of His Father, by Brander Matthews—several novelettes, and many short stories by popular witers.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PROSPECTUS

The Volumes of the Weekly begin with the first Number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order.

Cloth Cases for each volume, suitable for binding, will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of $1.00 each. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

LI HUNG CHANG FALLEN

Compelled To Give Up the Viceroyship of China.

Having Lost All of His Decorations He Now Relinquishes His Office and May Yet Lose His Head—Gone To Meet His Successor—Progress of the War—Pekin Is in Danger.

Shanghai, Nov. 28.—Li Hung Chang has fallen. Stripped first of his peacock feather, then his yellow jacket, the red hat and a lot of other things, he must now give up the viceroyship.

A despatch from Tien-Tsin says that Li Hung Chang has departd for Pao-Ting-Foo, where he will surrender the viceroyship to Liu-Kun-Yi.

A portion of the Japanese force has been withdrawn from Port Arthur, probably to take part in a movement on Talien Wan. The British warship Daphne has left the fleet at Chee-Foo for Tien-Tsin, taking with her a guard of fifty marines.

Merchants of New-Chang, fearing looters, are reshipping merchandise to Shanghai. Chinese troops are disembarking at New-Chang from a foreign vessel.

It is expected in Chee-Foo that Wei-Hai-Wei will be captured early in December. Refugees from Port Arthur are arriving here.

It is said that Col. Von Hanneken was first designated to assist Port Arthur, and that the Chinese plan was altered to enable him to organize the defence of Shan-Hai-Kwan.

This is an immensely important position, inasmuch as it is the point of departure from the coast to the high road to Pekin. It is believed that his labors have made the city impregnable.

It is stated in Chee Foo that 400 Japanese were killed at Port Arthur and that the victors found the mutilated corpses of a number of fellow-countrymen who had been captured. The Chinese do not regard the capture of Port Arthur as decisive. They rely upon the winter to check any further advance of the Japanese until the end of March.

Yokohama, Nov. 28.—Mr. Detring, chief of the Chinese customs at Tien-Tsin, who was sent to Japan to arrange the terms of a peace, has arrived at Kobe and has asked Prime Minister Ito to grant him an audience.

A correspondent in Tien-Tsin says that the railway to that place from the coast is daily overloaded with refugees. The alarm is caused chiefly by retreating or disbanded soldiery.

Many have joined the permanent banditti, who now are a dagerous body since their chief tersor, Tso, was killed at Ping Yang. Robbery is prevalent beyond the Great Wall and is extending within the Wall. All traffic is suspended.

The peasants have implicit faith in foreign protection and ask only the nearest way to an English settlement.

London, Nov. 28.—A despatch from Che-Foo says that the United States cruiser Baltimore entered Port Arthur on the 25th. Six of her officers made an inspection ashore, but were permitted to send only official despatches to Washington.

Regarding the battle at Port Arthur it says: After the capture of the third pass the Japanese were fourteen miles from Port Arthur in a cultivated valley two miles square, forming a good battle-ground. On the 19th the Chinese sent two columns inland. The Japanese fired a few shells and then retired. The real battle lasted from noon on the 20th to the night of the 21st.

The Chinese made a better defence than on any previous occasion. The troops were mostly from the Anhoi province, a few being trained in Western tactics. The leaders mostly followed old methods of combination that were defective. Seven kinds of breech-loaders were afterwards collected on the battlefield.

It is reported that fifteen thousand Japanese and eight thousand Chinese were engaged. The Japanese found great difficulty in climbing the hills, whose sides slope at angles of 30 to 45 degrees.

They delivered a steady attack at several points. The Chinese were completely disorganized and were allowed to retire with their arms. Some fled westward in sampans and junks, but most retreated eastward.

A few joined Sung's force near Talien Wan. It is rumored that after the battle 200 Chinese were massacred in revenge for the Japanese that had been mutilated. This rumor needs confirmation. More than two days were devoted to burying the dead. No provisions were seen. Taotai Kung escaped in a junk. Chinese coolies aided the Japanese on the march.

Fresh Japanese transports have arrived at Port Arthur with provisions and the latest reserves. It will be useless for the Japanese to attack Wai-Hei-Wai. If peace be refused, the next move will probably be to Shan Hai Kwan and thence to Pekin."

A Milkman Kills a Lawyer.

TAMMANY IS SHAMED.

Open Frauds in an Ohio County Beats the New York Braves.

West Union, O., Nov. 28.—Tammany in its toughest day was guilty of no graver fraud on the ballot box than those which have for years disgraced Adams county. It became so common that the result of an election ever since the war has been figured on the amount of money each party had to spend.

It was the regular, proper and expected thing that at every election in every precinct from one to one hundred men assembled and stood in groups to be bought. Sometimes they would band together and sell out in a body. Both parties were guilty of the outrage.

The New Era, a local paper tells of an incident that occurred at the Tiffin precinct polls. James King was on hand to sell his vote. The republicans bid $2, the democrats $4. The figures ran up to $12.80, at which price he was sold to the democratics. The money was publicly paid, and escorted by John Crawford and Peter McKenzie he went to the polls and put in the ballot which the judges knew was a fraudulent one.

In the crowd, and openly applauding the sale, was the prosecuting attorney of the county and other sworn officers and many so-called prominent citizens, among them the leading church members.

SEMINARIES WON'T OBEY.

Several Will Not Mind the Presbyterian Church.

New York, Nov. 28.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church appointed a committee at Saratoga last May, consisting of fifteen persons, to confer with the various theological seminaries of the church with a view of securing their approval of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly relative to their property, governing bodies and teaching faculties. The resolution referring to the property was as follows:

That each and all of the seminaries of the church be requested to secure at the earliest moment practicable such changes to their charters, or amendments thereto, as will provide that all funds and property, subject to the terms and conditions of existing or specific trusts, shall be declared to be held by them in trust for the Presbyterian church.

Auburn seminary has declined to accept the suggestion of the assembly, and so has McCormick seminary, in Chicago. The board of directors of the Union theological seminary in this city has also declined to accede to the recommendation.

CAR THIEVES TRACED.

Quantities of Their Plunder Found Near the Bergen Station.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 28.—Six detectives, under charge of Detective McNally of the Pennsylvania railroad, have unearthed a clew which, they hope, will run down the most determined gang of freight car fiends in the country.

Goods to the value of $20,000 have been stolen between this city and Elizabeth on the west and Jersey City on the east during the past two months.

Last night the detectives employed by the all the railroads entering here started out to run down their clew. Near the Bergen station they unearthed 1,120 pounds of copper, which had been buried a mile from the station. Nearby they found 1,100 pounds of brass railroad journals and quantities of goods valued at $2,500.

In making their research they discovered evidence which they say will lead to the arrest of the gang. Detective McNally said that the robbers would be arrested within twenty-four hours.

FOUGHT FOR LIBERTY.

Charles Carlson Gave the Police a Desperate Struggle.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 28.—Charles Carlson, a Swede just discharged from the schooner Marguerite, was arrested on South Water street. The sailor, who is six feet four inches tall and of athletic build, resisted arrest and the policeman who had him under arrest was obliged to use his club.

About half way to the station the prisoner again showed fight and both men struggled on the ground. At this juncture a crowd of about thirty sailors gathered around the officer and his prisoner, and one of them struck the policeman over the head with a stone, making three gashes.

Storekeepers and citizens kept the crowd at bay until the arrival of Lieut. Scott with a squad of police from a near by station.

Betrayed by His Whiskers.

Bradford, Pa., Nov. 28.—James O'Hara, a glycerine salesman, who disappeared recently owing his firm $3,000 was arrested here as a suspicious person, because of the disguise he wore, consisting of a comic opera wig and whiskers.

Judge Lawrence Resigns.

GOLD IN GREAT FLOODS

Millions Paid to the New York Sub-Treasury.

The Stewart Syndicate Has Paid in $38,000,000 Since the Bonds Were Allotted Monday—Streams from Other Sources—Exports of the Past Year—Report of the Mint Director.

New York, Nov. 28.—A tremendous stream of gold is flowing into the sub-treasury. At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon there had been received from the Stewart syndicate $27,000,000 of gold for the day, making $38,000,000 since the allotment was made Monday, including the $1,000,000 received from the British Bank of North America.

The officials at the sub-treasury were astonished at he rush of orders and the in-pouring of inquiries. Over $4,000,000 of the bonds were sold at 119 and the price will be advanced to 119 1-2 to-day as soon as the remainder of the first $5,000,000 is placed.

One block of $500,000 was sold and two blocks of $225,000 each. The purchasers of large blocks were unsuccessful subscribers to the loan. Considerable purchases of the bonds are made by those desirous of escaping the payment of the income tax.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28.—Mr. R. E. Preston, the director of the mint has submitted to the secretary of the treasury his report of the operation of the mints and assay offices for the fiscal year 1894. The value of the gold deposited is stated at $140,942,000.

The gold coinage for the year was the largest ever executed at the mints of the United States in any one year. Of this coinage, $76,219,912.50 was executed by the mint at Philadelphia and was made from buillion which had accumulated at the New York Assay Office since 1880, and which, to meet the requirements of the treasury, it became necessary to transfer and coin.

The director also states that the highest price of silver during the year was $0.7645 and the lowest $0.5918, showing a fluctuation of $0.1725 per fine ounce.

The net gold exports for the fiscal year were $4,172,665 as against $86,897,275 for the prior fiscal year. The net exports of silver for the fiscal year were $31,041,359 as against $7,653,813 for the fiscal year 1893.

Mr. Preston estimates the values of the gold used in the industrial arts, in the United States, during the calender year 1893, at $12,523,523, and silver at $9,534,277. Of the gold $8,354,482 and of the silver $6,570737 was new bullion.

The production of gold and silver in the United States during the calender year was: Gold, 1,739,323 fine ounces, of the value of $35,955,000; silver, 60,000,000 fine ounces, the commercial value of the same being $45,800,000 and the coining value $77,576,000.

Revised estimates of the world's production of the precious metals for the calendar year 1893 show $157,228,100 in gold and $209,165,000 in silver.

WANTED THE PRESIDENT.

California Strikers Tried To Have Him as a Witness.

San Francisco, Nov. 28.—During the trial of strikers in the United States district court the attorney for the defence asked the court to issue a subpoena for President Cleveland, claiming that he was a material witness.

The matter was argued and the court held that he issuance of a subpoena or the appointment of a commissioner to take the deposition of the president was not within the province of the court.

Throat Cut from Ear to Ear.

Tyrone, Pa., Nov. 28.—The body of a man, evidently a tramp, was found lying a short distance west of Tyrone, along the railroad tracks, with his throat cut from ear to ear. A number of tramps camped at that place last night, and a fight resulted in the death of one of the number. The ground where the body was found showed that a desperate encounter must have taken place. The razor which was used by the murderer was also discovered.

Tillman's Legislature Organized.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 28.—The legislature was organized, and Gov. Tillman's last message was read. A bill was introduced inflicting a fine of $50 upon telegraph companies failing to deliver messages in good time. Senator Butler's successor will be elected today.

A Suffering Woman Testifies.

Mrs. Henrietta Burton, of Janvier, N. J., writes: For a long time I suffered from a disordered stomach. My appetite was gone and what little I ate distressed me terribly. My health failed rapidly. I became very weak and feared I should never be well. After reading your "Guide to Health," I was encouraged to try Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. Its action was so prompt that I soon felt like a new woman, and am now completely cured."

MUNYON'S STOMACH AND DYSPEPSIA CURE cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

WAR SCARE IN THE NAVY

Cruisers Sent Flying South Under Sealed Orders.

More Trouble with Great Britain Over Nicaragua Leads Naval Officials To Have the Whole North Atlantic Squadron Prepared for Sea—Secrecy at the Capital.

Washington, Nov. 28.—As a result of a conference at Woodley between the president and Secretary Gresham the cruiser Columbia, which has been for several weeks at Kingston, Jamaica, was cabled peremptory orders to proceed at once to Bluefields for the protection of American interests.

Mr. Gresham's visit to the president's country home followed immediately upon an interview he had with the Nicaraguan minister. All the officials acquainted with the affair refuse to divulge the reason of the hurried orders to the Columbia or to confirm statements circulated in Panama in regard to a refusal of Great Britain to recognize the Nicaraguan government.

Acting Secretary McAdoo said that if it were true that the Columbia had gone to Bluefields it was probably on a cruise conforming with established policy of the government to keep a ship in Central American waters, as as the Navy department had no recent reports from Bluefields indicating trouble there.

It is learned, however, that only not the Columbia, but the Marblehead which arrived at Kingston, will remain at Bluefields continously this winter and that the Montgomery may be sent there from Mobile, but that preliminary orders have been sent to New York to have all the ships in commission of the North Atlantic squadron prepared for a West Indian cruise at the earliest possible moment.

In addition the sailing orders for the San Francisco, which was to leave December 15 to become the flagship in European waters, have been withheld and she may be sent immediately to the Gulf of Mexico. The Castine cruise to the south Atlantic, which was to commence early next month, will in all probability be interrupted when she reaches the West Indies. Instructions to prepare the Minneapolis for sea at once have also been sent to navy department chiefs.

There seems to be in fact almost a war scare pervading the navy, brought about by diplomatic rumors to the effect that Great Britain, which several months ago expressed a willingness to recognize the full jurisdictional rights of Nicaragua over the Mosquito coast, had shown a disposition resent what appears to be the practical annexation of that territory and its complete incorporation as a portion of Nicargua.

As long as the inter-oceanic canal bill seemed under favorable consideration at the last session of congress, Great Britain remained quiescent in the Mosquito controversy, and as a result of conferences which were held at Washington, Lord Rosebery's cabinet consented to receive a special envoy from Nicargua whose mission related solely to the abrogation of the treaty which gave Great Britain a guardianship over the now almost extinct tribe of Mosquito Indians.

This envoy, it is understood, has been in London for some time, but when congress adjourned without acting on the canal bill, the reorganization committee of the canal company went to England in September last to seek money, and the suggested abrogation of the British treaty has been put in the background.

Not until now was it definitely learned that Great Britain had declined to recognize the legality of the new order of things on the Mosquito coast and that it had so notified Nicaragua, although such action had been anticipated for several weeks, which accounts for the fact that the Columbia and Marblehead were not long ago brought home.

It may also explain to some extent why the Montgomery was sent south to Mobile. The near approach of the meeting of congress, it is said, gives the president assurance that he will be supported to the fullest extent in preventing foreign interference near the route of the proposed inter-oceanic canal.

Managua, Nov. 28.—The Nicaraguan government has been informed by the British minister, Mr. Goshing, that Great Britain has refused to recognize Nicaraguan sovereignty over the Mosquito strip and Mr. Goshing has sent to Port Limon asking that a British wahship be sent to Bluefields.

In pursuance of instructions Mr. Guzman, the Nicaraguan minister at Washington, advised the United States government of Great Britain's action.

Another Bridge Jumper.

New York, Nov. 27.—Harry Menier, a professional aeronaut, lately landed from Liverpool, England, leaped from the Brooklyn bridge with the aid of a parachute. He landed safely in the water 158 feet below. The parachute failed to open properly and Menier received considerable shock. He was picked up by a small boat, bruised.

New Pan Handle Bonds.

Philadelphia, Nov. 28.—The board of directors of the Pan Handle railroad held a meeting and decided to issue $4,811,000 of 4 1-2 per cent. consolidated mortgage bonds to pay for the cost of construction and for the retirement of the 5 per cent. bonds.

The Aged Princess Expires from a Dropsical Complaint Surrounded by Her Family and in Her Husband's Arms—Bismarck Broken-Hearted—Great Grief in Germany.

Berlin, Nov. 28.—Princess Bismarck, wife of Prince Bismarck, died at Varzin of a dropsical complaint. All the family were hastily summoned to her bedside. Count Herbert Bismarck arrived last evening and was present when his mother died. Although it is feared that the effect of his wife's death upon the prince will be serious, it is given out that he has been in better health lately and has been able to resume his daily drives.

The princess had been in poor health for a long time, but her illness became pronounced two months ago. She was deeply affected by the death of her life-long friend, Frau Eugenie Reckow, prioress of the Stolp Institute for unmarried women.

Varzin, Nov. 28.—Prince Bismarck is completely broken down by the death of his wife, although her death was not altogether unexpected, in view of her recent repeated attacks of fainting fits.

A few weeks ago, when the Princess's condition was growing worse, Prince Bismarck said to his old butler, whose wife was dangerously ill: "My friend, I share your grief heartily. I am in the same terrible position as yourself. Everybody is passing away before ourselves."

Dr. Schweninger, fearing serious consequences in the case of Prince Bismarck, owing to symptoms of a recurrence of the Prince's old troubles, is concentrating his attention upon the ex-chancellor.

Prince Bismarck has for some time past had a premonition of catastrophe to himself or his wife before they should leave Varzin, and has repeatedly said that if Princess Bismarck could only go to Friedrichsruh in tolerably fair condition all might be well. He now has fears that he may not make the journey in safety.

Prince Bismarck this morning sent a telegram to the Emperor apprising his majesty of the death of the princess, in reply to which the Kaiser wired the ex-chancellor a long message of sympathy.

The funeral of the princess will probably take place at Schoenhausen.

Berlin, Nov. 28.—The North German Gazette, in an editorial article on the death of Princess Bismarck, says:

"The nation sympathizes sincerely with its old and great statesman and co-founder of the empire in the irreparable loss he has experienced. It is well known what share she took in Prince Bismarck's work, and full thanks belong to her from Germany for aiding her husband to attain his ideals."

Johanna Fredricke Charlotte Eleanore von Bismarck was born on April 11, 1824, of a noble Pomeranian family. Her father, Heinrich-Ernst Jacob von Puttkamer, of Viarthem, belonged to the ancient family of Lords of the Manor, Von Schlawe, Von Rugenwalde and Counts of Newenburg and Tauchel who, since the fourteenth century, have ranked among the most powerful of Pomeranian nobles.

Burned Out the Cupola.

Boston, Nov. 28.—A fire started in the cupola of the Western Union Telegraph company's building, No. 109 State street. A crossed electric light wire probably caused the blaze. The fire was confined to the cupola and the roof adjoining, but 200 wires entering the cupola were melted. Twenty operators at work in the top story escaped uninjured. The loss will be heavy.

Judge Ricks Pleaded Ignorance.

Cleveland, Ohio., Nov. 28.—The case of Judge Ricks, accused of retaining pension fees while a court clerk, was continued to-day, and during the proceedings Judge Ricks pleaded ignorance of the law relating to fees, as his excuse for his acts.

Swept by Prairie Fires.

Guthrie, O. T., Nov. 28.—Everything is very dry in this territory and prairie fires are doing much damage. In Payne county, a large area was swept and a number of farmers lost heavily In Pawnee county a child was burned to death.

McDonald Nearly Burned.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 28.—At the oil town of McDonald, fifteen miles from Pittsburg, on the Panhandle railroad, fire destroyed twenty houses and their contents. The flames were of unknown origin.

More Torpedoes Delivered.

Newport, R. I., Nov. 28.—Another lot of Whitehead torpedoes was received at the torpedo station, making 145 of these engines of war already delivered there. This leaves but five more to complete the contract.

Stockton's Mine Cave-in.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 28.—A mine cave-in took place near Stockton. The hole, which is a large one, starts from the surface and extends into No. 8 mine, and drops down almost perpendicularly.

Postoffice Burglars Foiled.

Southington, Conn., Nov. 28.—Burglars shattered the safe in the postoffice at Plantsville, but the bolts held the pieces in such a manner that they could not reach the contents.

Ready To Resist Kolbites.

Selma, Ala., Nov. 28.—A regiment of infantry is under arms ready to move to Montgomery in case the populists attempt to seize the capitol and seat Kolb as governor.

Must Be a Citizen.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 28.—Attorney General Hensel has decided that none but a citizen of Pennsylvania can be a fire boss in this state.

Another Free Library.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 28.—J. M. Thompson of West Hartford has given $1,000 for a free library in that town.

WILL RECOVER HALF.

Embezzler Baker's Estate Must Yield Stolen Money.

New York, Nov. 28.—President Crane of the National Shoe and Leather bank said that actions would soon be brought against the estate of the dead lawyer and thief, Frederick Baker, and that the investigation made by the bank officers and Counsellor James L. Bishop will show what Baker and Seely embezzled.

Mr. Crane did not, however, hesitate to say that the bank considered that it would be able to recover over $200,000 of the sum embezzled, or, as Mr. Crane puts it cautiously, "one-half."

"The money stolen, or at least the most part of it," said President Crane, "is in a tangible form that can be seized on. It is not as if it had been dissipated at the race track or in the pool room.

"All the real property that Baker died seized of we can hold and sell to make up the impairment of the bank's capital. Counsellor Bishop is now at work, aided by two sets of clerks, working day and night making searches and collating memoranda for the purpose of the actions. Until that work is finished it will be impossible to give the exact sum which we have hopes of recovering."

Cashier Van Vleck made a statement for the purpose, he said, of correcting an erroneous report that had gone out as to the impairment of the bank's capital, and the amount, therefore, that had to be made good.

Besides the impairment of $188,000, as announced, he said there was not an additional impairment of $70,000, caused by bad loans, made by the officers of the bank. The entire impairment of the capital, he said, including the $354,000 embezzled, was comprised in the $188,000.

Mr. Van Vleck tacitly admitted that the bank had made loans that can never be realized on to the extent of $188,000.

COAL AGENTS MEET.

December's Anthracite Output Restricted to 2,600,000 Tons.

New York, Nov. 28.—The general coal sales agents of the anthracite coal companies met in the offices of the Pennsylvania Coal company at No. 1 Broadway. Meetings previously have been held at the offices of Coxe Brothers & Co. in the Jersey Central Building on Liberty street.

The meeting was considered to be very important. Efforts, it was expected, would be made to bring prices nearer the circular, which, up to the present time, has been practically a dead letter, and to restrict the production to prevent further demoralization.

All companies usually attending were represented. No individual operators were reported to be present. The result of the meeting was an agreement, subject to the decision of the superior officers of the companies, that the output for December should be half of the production in June last, which was 5,200,000 tons. This would make the December output 2,600,000 tons.

Prices at shipping ports were agreed upon at $3.50 for grate and egg and $3.75 for stove and chestnut. This is the same as in June.

BLOWN UP BY POWDER.

A Man Killed and Many Windows Shattered at Waterbury.

Waterbury, Conn., Nov. 28.—The mixing house of the Waterbury Brass company was blown to pieces by the explosion of 100 pounds of powder.

Michael J. Kelley, the mixer, was blown into fragments that were scattered all over the yard. Every window in the south side of the New England railway station was shattered, as well as hundreds of other windows in the city.

The cause of the accident is unknown. The loss to the brass company is slight. The report of the explosion was heard in New Haven, twenty-six miles distant.

Linson Will Try Fellows.

Albany, Nov. 28.—Gov. Flower has appointed ex-Senator John J. Linson, of Kingston, as a commissioner to take testimony in the charges filed against District Attorney Fellows, of New York city. Mr. Linson has announced that the hearings will begin in New York city on Monday next. The governor will act on the findings reported to him by Mr. Linson after the testimony is in.

Will Build a Southern Mill.

Boston, Nov. 28.—A special meeting of the stockholders of the Massachusetts Cotton company voted to rescind the action taken at the special meeting on Aug. 16, by which it was decided to increase the capital stock from $1,000,000 to $2,400,000. It was then unanimously voted to authorize the directors to build a mill in the South, which shall be leased to a separate organization.

Will Hold a Special Session.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 28.—A special session of the general conference of the United Evangelical Church will be held in Naperville, Ill., beginning on Thanksgiving day. Delegates will be present from Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut and other states.

St. Ann's Church Burned.

Boston, Nov. 28.—St. Ann's Roman Catholic Church, corner of Medford and Thurston streets, Somerville, was destroyed by fire this afternoon. The organ, a piano, the vestments and altar plate were saved. Loss, $12,000; insured for $8,000.

A VICTORY FOR PASKOLA.

It Receives the Official Endorsement of Eminent Experts and a Jury of Representative Citizens.

The suit brought by Ohio's Food Commissioner against a Cincinnati druggist for selling Paskola on the ground that it was nothing but glucose, resulted in a great victory for Paskola and a verdict against the State.

During the course of the trial, Prof. Shaller of the University of Cincinnati, testified that Paskola was not glucose, and even if it was, it would be harmless. He also bore witness to its activity as a digestive agent.

Prof. Wm. Dickore of the Miami College, testified to the same facts. So did Prof. Schmidt, the chemist of the Board of Health, Prof. Wm. Hoffman and others.

A practical test was made in court, showing the digestive action of Paskola on eggs and meats of various kinds, whereas glucose under precisely the same conditions produced no effect whatever.

This test but confirmed the experts statements and proved Paskola to be of great value in indigestion and wasting diseases.

This verdict disposes of the malicious attack that has been made against Paskola by interested rivals, and suits have now been brought against the proprietors of a well-known emulsion of cod liver oil for having given wide circulation to a false formula and other misrepresentations regarding it.

The animus of this attack will be the better understood when it is that Paskola is being largely used in the place of cod liver oil.

III.

It was late November the year after Dr. Ashurst's death, and his two daughters and their mother were in a good deal of trouble. He had been a man of infinite generosities; he had gathered some good books and a very few good pictures. He had made his family happier than any other family in all that region ever dreamed of being. He was still a good bit this side of age when an attack of pneumonia brought him quickly to his end. People who had allowed themselves to take his talents and gifts for granted were surprised into doing him tardy honor, by finding what recognition was given him on every hand. Those who knew him best praised him most, and many a city man, who had, perhaps, only seen him once at some medical club meeting, to which on rare occasions Dr. Best or his little group of intimate friends beguiled the busy and self-sacrificing country doctor—many a city man owed to him the best of inspiration or enlightenment from some chance word, or some new way of looking at old things. "Ashurst has more genius for his profession than any of us," old Dr. Best used to say.

It had been a long, sad year since the good man died—indeed "they needed a doctor up at Alton," as he had said at the beginning of his brave career. There was many a poor soul that felt unbefriended now, and uncompanioned, with no one to look to for help, spiritual or material. And as for Dr. Ashurst's own household, the sorrow of poverty was added to sorrow itself. The mother and her two children were left really poor. John Ashurst always hoped to leave his family a good sum of money, to buy a comfortable life insurance before he should be taken away, but the necessities of the moment always hid the fear of the future. He had lost what money he had by the failure of a bank, and he had never been provident. It was the rainy day of the moment and not of the future with which he concerned himself. Now that the small bills that could be collected were all paid, many accounts having never been kept at all and still more forgiven—it was but a poor dependence, and the girls were wondering what they could possibly do. One had inherited her father's gift of teaching, and had gathered a little school, but it was more a thing of love than of business, and of late she had taken the district school near at hand, and her poor pay was the mainstay that was left. They had always felt so rich all their lives that they did not know how to feel poor, exactly. In the late years when Dr. Ashurst had been sent for far and wide, and now and then a large fee came in his way, they had begun to feel like people of fortune. And only the last Thanksgiving day, the fortnight before his three days' illness began, what joy they had in making happiness for many poor households! The old chaise had gone its rounds with a high-heaped mound of benefactions under the buffalo robe, and this old woman must have this thing to make her happy, and the other something else, for Thanksgiving was still kept in all its glory of neighborliness and good cheer in Alton, and Christmas itself seemed to be the happier for young people, because their elders and betters made the most of the earlier festival.

The doctor's study, where a light was apt to burn so late on winter nights, was a plain room full of books, with a great desk and some three-cornered chairs which had been old Dr. Ashurst's before they belonged to our friend, whom the elder people still call the young doctor. There was a curious dry odor of drugs and Russia leather bindings. There was a huge wasp's nest on one bookcase, and a bust of Dante on the other, and a beautiful old engraving of Sydenham hanging on the wall. One could not help finding it a charming, scholarly sort of a place; there was still a delightful air of sympathy and friendliness, as of a place where people were sure to come to tell their troubles, and sure to go away comforted.

It was the day before Thanksgiving, and one of the doctor's daughters, who had oftenest been his companion, was sitting there alone. She had been looking at the books and making a list of some of them, about which one of her father's friends had written her. He had made a good offer, out of frendliness, but both Dr. Ashursts had known what good books were, and had left behind them some volumes of very great value. Of course they must sell them, and it was a good chance, but Nelly Ashurst loved these particular books, and treasured them all the more because her father and grandfather had treasured them too. She took down the old copy of the Religio Medici, and held it for a moment—then she kissed it and put it back again, and went over to the old desk to lay her head on her folded arms and cry. The night before a proposal had come from her mother's sister in one of the seaboard towns, that they two should come to her to spend the winter, leaving the elder sister, who was the teacher, to board somewhere and go on with her school. In the summer they could perhaps let their house, for Alton was near one of the hill towns where many people came to pass the summer. "At any rate," the aunt had said kindly, "when you are fairly here, we can talk over plans and do what seems best." She was not a rich woman, and Nelly Ashurst was grateful for such thoughtfulness, but her mother, who had had many illnesses, was only well among these high, dry hills, and she sobbed to herself over the old desk: "This is an end of our home, an end of our home!" There seemed to be nowhere else to look, for the winter at least. Perhaps when summer came they could indeed come back, and find some people who would come to board in the pleasant old house. But their independence and old free ways were assailed; they must do what they could now, and never any more what they wished. Nelly Ashurst mourned with the despair of youth. She could almost feel her father's hand on her shoulder in kindly reproach, but her trouble was all the more bitter, poor girl, because it seemed in some vague way to be a rebuke to him whom she loved and made her hero. She had never felt the weight of pain and care as she felt it now. She thought of her mother's hopeless face.

"Nelly, where are you?" said her mother, suddenly, just outside the door, and Nelly dried her eyes in a hurry, and crossed the room to stand before the bookcase in the shadow. "Nelly, dear," said Mrs. Ashurst, coming in. "Here are some letters, and the poor old Dent sisters are coming up the yard to see us—think of it, this cold day! I wish we had something—I really don't know how to be poor at Thanksgiving time," and her voice faltered. "They shall have a pie, at any rate, and they shall come and sit in here in the dear study—they will like that best."

"Mother, mother, quick!" said Nelly. "Don't mind them, let them wait a minute. Oh, see here!" and she held a large letter sheet before her mother's eyes. She had turned quite gray and pale. "I thought it was only some circular, or something like that—it was directed to father. Somebody who lived in Cuba—who died last month, has left father and his heirs—" she could not hold her voice steady—"has left father in kind remembrance of most helpful services in time of need, fifty thousand dollars, to be paid at once according to directions. Oh, mother, mother!"

"Let me see it, dear," said the frail little woman, shaking with excitement and coming back across the room. "Oh, if your dear father were only here! And how often I have thought that so many people were ungrateful, and he always said that the poor had the best paymaster, or that he only asked for happiness enough to get his work done, and was glad of the liberty to use what skill he had—and now this comes, like a gift of his provision, for his girls and me! Why, Nelly, dear, don't cry so!"

"There are those two old Dents knocking and knocking—could you let them in, mother?" said Nelly, laughing and crying at once. "Oh, what a Thanksgiving we'll have! I wish Sister Lizzie would come. What will she say? Fifty thousand dollars! Why, father said once that he wished he had just that for his old age and for us, and no more; it would be all—"

Her mother, a little dazed, had gone to bid the poor old guests a glad welcome. Old Sarah, the dependence of the doctor's household, who seemed entirely one of themselves, was away that afternoon, and part of the sorrow and uncertainty that was hardest to bear had been in the thought of turning her out of her home, if they themselves must go. Now the dear old home was going on, and the little comforts and helps for many a poor person who was sick and old were to go on, too.

The ca[illegible] was never made clear. Nelly vaguely remembered her father's saying something about a sick, old man, a merchant in Cuba, to whom he lent his thick plaid in the cars one cold day, and to whom he gave advice; and that was all. The good doctor was always doing such things, but the fact remained that one heart, that seemed at the moment to forget his kindness, had really remembered, and was grateful for years of health and activity, which he had ceased to expect. Out of his wealth he had made return, not only for himself, but for many another beside.

And on Thanksgiving day, the doctor's children and his wife took double joy in doing everything and more that they had always loved to do in the old days. They tried to give all the old patients who were sick or sorry, something to remind them of their friend, but indeed a life that shines with love and self-forgetfulness is a true star of light, and cannot be forgotten, no matter in what part of our heaven it may be placed.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. REMARKABLE CURES
Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:
I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.
I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.
JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:
For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.
So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.
I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.
PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

A ROMANCE OF THE FAIR.

What her name is, I can never
Unto you declare;
But I love her, oh, forever!—
Fairest of the Fair!
'Mong the nations there assembled
Grace celestial hers resembled,
In her glance a radiance trembled
Far beyond compare.

Was it at gay Sweden's bower
Saw I first those eyes?
Or behind a Japan flower
Lurked the reachless prize?
Or where Spain beamed bright and sunny?
Or where Kringle took my money?
Or at grocery store so funny?
Or 'neath Venice skies?

Did the Gypsies' camp enfold her,
Queen of tawny hue?
Did the Russians' guests behold her,
Drinking honeyed dew?
Gondoliers may know her singing—
Cavaliers their tribute bringing—
All the world her praises ringing—
Do n't you wish you knew?

Whether France, Spain, Venice, Sweden,
Or where'er her bloom,
'Twas for me a glimpse of Eden—
For my heart a tomb.
Since before her smile I tarried,
At her feet my heart lies buried—
Buried there with comrades varied,
Sharing common doom.

Woman never was diviner
Than her I adore,
And I shall not be repiner
For the love I bore.
All her beauty most besetting,
All her grace, I 'm not forgetting—
But forever I 'm regretting
Marriage ring she wore.

THANKSGIVING FOOTBALL.

Stevens and Plainfield Combine to Defeat Leal.

A football eleven composed of seven boys from Stevens School in Hoboken and four of Plainfield's crack players defeated the Leal School team yesterday afternoon, by the score of 6 to 0, after a most exciting game

The elevens lined up at the beginning of the game as follows:

STEVENS.		LEALS.
E. Buxo	left end	J. Wills
W. Kinsherf	left tackle	C. Lord
J. McCracken	left guard	G. Bull
A. Kelly	centre	E. Hall
C. Colwell	right guard	E. Brown
G. Richardson	right tackle	W. McClure
E. Stewart	right end	H. Wills
G. Harris	quarter back	H. Hall
T. Smith	left half back	V. Green
W. Lawrence	right half back	F. Freeman
G. Cathcart	full back	L. Waring

Referee—Wesley Abbott.
Umpire—Geo. Schoonmaker.
Linesmen—A. Woltman, M. Dryden.

Stewart injured his knee during the first half and A. B. Crane took his place. The playing of the Stevens team was very good throughout, Cathcart and Lawrence especially distinguishing themselves by brilliant tackles and long runs. The Stevens boys played with a snap that was entirely lacking in the other eleven and although outweighed by a number of friends they held their opponents and constantly broke through and downed the opposing backs before they had fairly started.

The touchdown was made on a blocked kick. Waring kicked but the ball struck an opposing player and bounded back of the goal line where Smith fell on it. Cathcart kicked the goal.

At the end of the first half it was discovered that Leal's team was playing with twelve men and the referee ordered one of them off the team.

A Plainfield Pastor's Warm Reception.

Rev. W. A. Alexander, pastor of Bethel Chapel, has just returned from his vacation during which time he visited Catawba Synod and his former pastorate, Chestnut Street Presbyterian Church, Wilmington, N. C., in which the synod convened. Mr. Alexander had a warm reception. As an evidence of appreciation by his former parishioners he preached to large audiences, performed the marriage ceremony of a member of one of the most popular families of the city, and baptized three children. The Wilmington Messenger, leading local paper, said many things highly complimentary to Mr. Alexander in connection with his pastorate in that city. He will resume charge of pulpit ministrations Sunday and will preach a special sermon at 8 p. m., the occasion being the tenth anniversary of the organization of Bethel Chapel and the entrance upon the fifth year of his pastorate. Special anniversary services of the Sunday-school will be held at 3 p. m. All friends of Bethel Chapel are cordially invited to join the services.

BULLET IN HIS BRAIN.

Terrible Accident to Michael Evans.

CARELESS SHOOTING THE CAUSE.

Fifteen-Year-Old Lads Were Playing with a Repeating Rifle, and One of the Bullets Felled Evans in His Dooryard.

Michael Evans, a Hebrew peddler, age 45, of 547 South Second street, is dying at Muhlenberg Hospital of a bullet wound in the head.

Mrs. John Scudder, who lives next door, saw Evans lying motionless in his dooryard at 11:45 yesterday morning. She called to his wife, and it was found that the man was unconscious and bleeding from a bullet hole near his temple. Drs. Simpson and Probasco were summoned, and Evans was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. It was ascertained that the ball had penetrated the skull and lodged in the brain. Probing to a depth of 3½ inches failed to locate the bullet, and effort to extract it was abandoned. Evans did not regain consciousness, but seemed like a man in deep sleep. His faithful wife staid at his side and was unremitting in her devotion.

While the hospital attendants were caring for the wounded man, the police were actively investigating the cause of his injury. Dr. Probasco had notified Chief Grant, who instituted a thorough search. Policeman McCue found that ten minutes before Evans was found a number of boys had been shooting in the yard of Mrs. Ann Kane, 543 West Third street. This yard backs up to the Evans backyard, and a high board fence separates them. The boys who had been there were Mrs. Kane's fifteen-year-old son Peter, fifteen-year-old James Walsh, James Barry, Richard Waldron, James Fitzpatrick, and Thomas Newman.

The boys were easily found. They admitted they had been firing off a gun indiscriminately, and were horrified to learn that one of their shots had found a human target. They had been aiming at tin cans, knots in the fence, and a cat.

The gun was a repeating rifle, 22 calibre, owned by City Judge Wm. A. Coddington. The judge had loaned it to George Voehl; and Walsh, who worked for Voehl, had borrowed it.

The distance from the board fence to where Evans was found was 37 yards. The ball had passed through the riband of the man's hat into the side of his forehead.

The boys said that all the shooting had been done by Kane and Walsh, and that the others had been mere spectators. Those two were therefore locked in the police station to await the result of the man's injury, and the others were notified to appear this morning for examination.

Chief Grant telephoned to County Physician O'Reilly, and that official said it would not be necessary for him to come to Plainfield on the case unless the man died.

Kane's home is with his widowed mother. Walsh has no relatives here. His father, Thomas Walsh, was killed by the cars a few years ago, and friends sent the widow back to Ireland.

Today eight surgeons attempted to find and extract the ball, but without success.

The brain is oozing out of the wound, and death is only a matter of a few hours.

Prosecutor Marsh today ordered that the boys be held without bail awaiting the result of the man's injury.

A Successful Dance.

The Plainfield Saengerbund Society gave one of their delightful dances in their hall on Somerset street, Wednesday evening. The attendance was very large, and all had a thoroughly enjoyable time. Charles F. Meyer was the efficient floor manager and he was assisted by the following committee: Fred Conce, chairman; Max Otto, Carl Felber and Fred Laing.

Dancing was kept up till about 4, interspersed with singing by the society, an exhibitions of tumbling by Charles Meyer and F. Schroder.

—Boehm tells much valuable shopping news in his ad in The Press. His big bazar offers endless attractions.

—The North Plainfield fire-alarm gong gave an extra long blow last night at 6, caused by the valve catching fast.

—Supt. Adleman should instruct his conductors to call out "come to Peck's" when the car is near his store, so many ladies wish to stop at Peck's.

—The workmen employed on the sewer trench received substantial proof yesterday of the generous hospitality of Mrs. C. B. Corwin, who provided them with as much good hot coffee as they could drink.

—The members of No. 2 Engine Company took the engine out yesterday afternoon at 2 for a wash. After a most satisfactory test, a picture of the company was taken by Photographer Thorn. The steamer was then taken back to headquarters, and the members adjourned to the Crescent Hotel, where they enjoyed a dinner, which was a delightful affair.

STOLE THE CASH.

THE REGISTER AND ITS CONENTS TAKEN AWAY.

Bold Robbery at Force's Hotel, Scotch Plains.

A very bold robbery was committed between 3 and 4 this morning at Force's Hotel Scotch Plains.

The robbers went to a window in the rear of the hotel which opens to the barroom, removed the putty from around one of the panes and took the glass out. Then without much difficulty the catch was pushed back, and at the same time some drapery was torn. They then entered the bar-room. A National cash register valued at $175, six quarts of rum, a straw holder and some absinthe were stolen.

Mr. and Mrs. Force slept very soundly and they heard nothing but the barking of a dog which attracted no especial attention.

The register which weighs about 160 pounds contained $3.

There were many valuable things near by which they might have secured, but they were not touched.

Mrs. Cole living on Park avenue, Scotch Plains, about one-fourth of a mile from the hotel, sent word to Mr. Force this forenoon that when her hired man took the cows out to pasture this morning he found the cash register in the lot back of the house. Mr. Force went to see her and found the register The drawer was badly smashed, but otherwise it was all right.

He then called on Justice Mosher and had search warrants issued for Wallace and Shea, whom he thinks are implicated.

GENEROUS PUPILS.

They Contribute Clothing, Fuel and Food for the Poor's Thanksgiving.

Goods were delivered to the Relief Association free of charge; by A. B. Summers, for the Franklin, Bryant, Irving and Washington Schools; and by A. E. Hoagland, for the High School and Wadsworth Schools.

Black Crook Tomorrow Night.

The Music Hall attraction for tomorrow night is the spectacular play "The Black Crook", to be presented by a large company representing the original cast during the remarkably successful year's revival of the play at the Academy of Music, New York. Three magnificent ballets have been specially arranged, one being composed exclusively of children Elaborate new scenery has been painted and brilliant artistic effects will illuminate the various animated scenes, by means of countless colored electric lights. There will be grand marches headed by the beautiful and stately fair Amazons clad in dazzling armor, and among the numerous artistes of European reputation engaged to contribute specialties, will be the famous quartette of French dancers from the Paris Folies Bergeres, Miles. Cruskee, Coquilicot, and Siracco also Rexo & Reno, from the Cirque Cisinelli, St. Petersburg. It is promised that the production will eclipse all previous attempts at high-class spectacle.

Testing Fire Apparatus.

A test of the fire-alarm boxes in North Plainfield was made by Chief Fairchild, and everything worked satisfactorily, yesterday.

Warren Engine No. 1 was taken to the brook at the foot of Elm street for a "wash" and the steamer was found to be in first-class condition in every respect.

—Preparatory service will be held tonight at 8 in the Trinity Reformed Church. Communion services will be held Sunday morning at 10:30.

—The wedding decorations at the Crescent Avenue Church, Wednesday evening, were furnished and arranged by Miss A. E. Lincoln, the Park avenue florist, who displayed her usual good taste and artistic ability.

A PINK WEDDING.

PLAINFIELD SOCIETY WITNESSES A BEAUTIFUL EVENT.

Union of Two of the Leading Families of the Town—Miss Murray Weds Mr. Tilney.

Plainfield society people thronged the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church Wednesday evening at 7 to witness the marriage of Miss Augusta K. Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, and Albert Arthur Tilney.

About 1,500 people were present when the bride entered leaning on the arm of her father. The maid of honor, Miss Wadsworth, preceded, accompanied by the bridemaids, Miss Grace Yerkes, Miss Vanderbeek, Miss Fairbairn and Miss Drake. When the bridal party reached the altar they were met by Rev. Dr. Richards, who performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her father.

The ceremony was a beautiful one, and very impressive. The bride was gowned in lovely white satin and duchess lace; the maid of honor wore a very pretty gown of white silk mull, with white satin ribbons and lace trimmings; and the bridemaids were gowned in pink satin with white chiffon.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom were driven to the home of the bride, where a reception was given. About 300 guests were present, representing the wealth and fashion of the town and joined in hearty congratulation. The home was very prettily decorated with pink roses and chrysanthemums. Pink was the prevailing color in the decorations, and the effect was superb.

Mr. and Mrs. Tilney left town later in the evening for a short wedding trip. On their return they will reside in Newbury street, Boston.

The music at the reception was furnished by Austin, and Maresi was the caterer.

The ushers were Percy Stewart, George S. Beebe, Fred Walz, Howard Beebe, W. F. Murray, and J. E. Murray.

THANK-DAY SERMONS.

Pastors Herring and Richards Preach from Harvest-Decorated Pulpits.

The union Thanksgiving Day services in the First M. E. and Park Avenue Baptist Churches were very largely attended yesterday morning.

At the First M. E. Church the sermon was preached by Rev. C. E. Herring, and was a masterly discourse taken from the text Heb. 2, part of the ninth verse, "We see Jesus".

The opening prayer was made by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist Church, and was an eloquent soul-stirring invocation for divine blessings. Rev. Cornelius Schenck then followed with the Scripture lesson.

In closing the service the doxology was sung and Dr. Barnes of the First M. E Church led the congregation in repeating the Lord's prayer, after which Rev. Herbert Randolph, of Grace M. E. Church, pronounced the benediction.

At the Park Avenue Baptist Church another very large congregation assembled to unite in giving thanks to Almighty God for his temporal and spiritual blessings. Surrounding the pulpit and platform was a very choice display of fruits, vegetables, and other signs of harvest.

A large chorus choir rendered appropriate music assisted by the congregation.

The Scripture lesson was read by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, and Dr. A. H. Lewis of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church offered prayer.

Rev. Dr. W. Richards then preached the sermon, which was a strong and impressive one.

At the close Dr. Richards pronounced the benediction.

The Episcopal churches all held appropriate services.

A Plainfield Racer.

In the one-half mile boys race in Madison Square Garden, yesterday morning, W. I. Smith got second place in the first heat and in the final would have secured place but was run into by another rider and had a fall, cutting his knees very badly.

He was able to walk soon after, and had no trouble in getting home.

Dunavan Won.

In the contest for the double-barreled breech-loading gun at Charles Lister's place on North avenue yesterday, the result was follows: L. L. Dunavan, 94; Mr Pierson, 91; Charles Stephens, 90 Mr. Dunavan was congratulated on his excellent shooting.

Mr. Ira P. Wetmore, a prominent real estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in his family for several years as occasion required, and always with perfect success. He says: "I find it a perfect cure for our baby when troubled with colic or dysentery. I now feel that my outfit is not complete without a bottle of this Remedy at home or on a trip away from home. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HUBBARD WILL ACCEPT.

Willing His Friends Shall Vote for Him.

PASTER BALLOTS TO BE USED.

Many Leading Citizens, Regardless of Politics, Working for His Return to the Office of City Assessor.

As has already been told in this paper and in no other, paster ballots are to play an important part in the municipal election next Tuesday. Influential men of all parties have forsaken partisanship and are engineering a campaign in favor of J. A. Hubbard for Assessor.

The Daily Press is authorized to say that Mr. Hubbard considers himself in the hands of his friends and is willing to serve again as assessor if the ballots of the people so decide.

Paster ballots are to be liberally circulated, and everybody will be given an opportunity to vote for whichever of the candidates he chooses.

The feeling among many that Mr. Hubbard should be kept in the assessorship because of his equitable valuations and his great service to Plainfield in keeping down her assessment in the County Board, is responsible for the movement to re-elect him in spite of the fact that Mr MacDonald secured the regular nomination.

THE Y. M. C. A. FAIR.

Great Crowds in Attendance, and the Receipts Immense.

There was an immense crowd at the Y. M. C. A. Fair last night. The National Festivities were twice given. The approximate receipts to date are: Tuesday, $1,060; Wednesday, $550; Thursday, $1,100.

The great prize-giving goose has been secured by L. G. Timpson as an additional feature.

Mrs. J. Parker Mason and Miss Maud VanBoskerck took the Misses Holly's place in the Venetian dance last evening

Miss MacL. Eager who arranged the National Festivities was present last evening at the two performances. The enthusiasm was so great at the second one that the audience rose to their feet and called for Miss Eager, and she was compelled to appear before the curtain.

With the two performances this evening this part of the Fair will close. The drills will be seen to better advantage at the second performance.

Miss Eager is now arranging a kirmess to be given in Miner's Theatre, Newark, Dec. 17, 18, 19.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—A sleight-of-hand performance for the children will be given at the Y. M. C. A. Fair tomorrow afternoon at 4.

—Lederer's great list of bargains in his ad today will bring a large trade tomorrow. Go early to get your selections.

—The Independent Gun Club members had abundant merriment and sport yesterday shooting for the choice cuts of a fatted pig.

—Charles Lister will put up a double-barreled breech-loading gun and a flobert rifle tonight, to be contested for at his shooting gallery. The winner will be decided Christmas.

—The new Century Cyclopaedia of Names has just been added to the reference department of the Free Public Library. It is an outgrowth of the Century Dictionary which the library also possesses.

—All members of the J. O. U. A. M. are reminded that next Sunday evening Rev. J. W. Richardson will preach a sermon in the Park Avenue Baptist Church to the order. Every member is expected to attend.

—Miss Lizzie Sheldon of West Second street was agreeably entertained by her young friends last evening in celebrating the anniversary of her birthday. Dancing, singing and games occupied the attention of the young people until 11, when refreshments were served. Those present were: Annie Stewart, Annie Donovan, Georgie Nedles, Lizzie Donovan, Eva Sargent, Nora Donovan, Emma Drake and Hattie Dunlap.

—A happy reunion of the children and grandchildren of Emmor K. Vail of Greenbrook took place yesterday. It was a complete surprise, and the day was passed most pleasantly. There were twenty-six present, as follows: Henry Vail and wife, the Misses Grace and Millie Vail, Harry Vail and wife, Fred Wilcox and family of Dunellen, Charles Vail and family of Plainfield, and James Bell and family of Hasbrouck Heights.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

NOT PLAINFIELD'S HONOR.

BOUND BROOK HISTORY ROBS US OF A LAUREL.

Evidence That the First Free Public School in the State Was Established Outside This City.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—In The Press of November 28, under the heading "Talking Local History", you say "Another paper prepared by O. B. Leonard was read", etc. "It told that in 1843 the first free public school in the State was started, after repeated attempts, and how it grew till through the efforts of its leaders a law was passed granting support from the State to the township committees", etc.

In order to vindicate the truth of history, the writer begs to call the attention of Citizen Leonard to the following facts which may prove to him that Bound Brook antedates Plainfield in respect to the establishment of free public schools.

By will dated Oct. 14, 1791, and probated in 1792, a resident near Bound Brook bequeathed "The sum of five hundred pounds lawful money of the State aforesaid toward a free school that may be erected hereafter within the Presbyterian congregation of Bound Brook".

The will required the £500 to be put and kept at interest "until the said Free School House shall be built, and then to apply the said interest money for that purpose and supporting said school and for no other use".

The house was built, and school established which was afterwards known as the Academy, and now as the Bound Brook Public School. PLAINFIELD.

WOMEN PROTEST.

They Don't Like the Class of Shows Manager Varian Is Running.

The following is sent to The Daily Press by the corresponding secretary of the W. C. T. U. with a request for publication:

The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Plainfield learn with much regret of the contemplated presentation at Music Hall in our fair city of a drama of the objectionable type of "The Black Crook". Its special appeal to the sensuous and the sensual renders it a most unhappy educational influence in any community, especially for the young of both sexes, educating downward to the level of social degradation and impurity. We appeal to you in the name of the homes, to protect Plainfield from the harmful influence of the illegitimate drama.

Manager Varian has received a letter from the Tuesday Morning Women's Club asking him to cancel the contract with "The Black Crook" and promising him their support for any good attraction presented instead.

WILD ANIMALS IN VERMONT.

Good Hunting in the Green Mountain State.

A farmer living five miles from Rutland entered complaint last week that a herd of deer had destroyed an acre and a half of buckwheat and devoured his vegetables. George H. Woodward, of the mountainous community of Cuttingsville reports that the deer come into his fields seven or eight strong every afternoon at sundown and stay until he drives them away in the morning. They are so tame that they do not leave their feeding grounds or the yards where cows are kept at night until some person approaches within three or four rods. Even then they sometimes refuse to move off, and actually have to be driven away. They have great fondness for herding with domestic animals, especially cows. Occasionally a bull shows fight, but they seem not to care for his angry, threatening movements. What the result would be in a fair field and fair fight none can predict.

Within two miles of Rutland the other day two deer were met trotting along the travelled road as docile as a house dog. Reports come of them in all sections of the mountainous regions, and the feeding with cows in the pastures is of frequent occurrence. One day a few weeks ago a man crossing the mountain to Woodstock saw fifteen of the fleet-footed animals at close range. A fox hunter a fortnight ago ran into seven in the vicinity of Plymouth.

Another animal that has increased rapidly in Vermont is what is commonly known as the hedge-hog, or porcupine. A party of people of Rutland one night recently occupied a deserted house in a lumberman's camp in Mount Tabor. A pack of porcupines, attracted by the light or the smell of the food, or possibly the beer, attacked the shanty, and crawling up the sides to the roof, kept up a continual scratching and howling during the night. Several of them fell off the building, setting off fearful cries, greatly to the annoyance of the sleepers within, but all disappeared with break of day.

Farmers in the mountains also complain of the abundance of partridges, which overrun their gardens, making havoc with fruit and berries, flowers and growing vegetables.

Bears also are very numerous, and often, with their young, take a hand in destroying fruit and vegetables, and are almost as tame as the wild deer unless their cubs are molested. Their young are of varied size and weight, and are equally as destructive as their parents. These Vermont bears are not only getting plentiful in the woods, but they are learning how to avoid some of the annoyances that come with advanced civilization. Mr. Silas N. Wheeler has a hilly farm in Stamford. Mr. Wheeler recently went into a pasture and saw a good-sized cub eating sweet apples. The animal was in a corner made by two barbed-wire fences. He thought if he could entangle the young bear in the barbed-wire fence he would have a good opportunity of killing him. He therefore drove him on the run for the fence, but the bear jumped over the top of the wire as nimbly as an athlete could do it and escaped in the woods.

The protection the wild animals of Vermont have received from the State laws in the effort to allow animals to breed unhindered by the sportsman is likely to be somewhat modified in the near future. The law affecting deer is and has been for years prohibitive, and has been rigidly observed. It was first extended to ten years, and then to fifteen years, and now is operative until 1900 unless repealed or modified by the next Legislature, which meets in October. By this law the killing or capturing of deer, or the mere possession of its meat, is punishable by a fine of $50, and the informant of such deer-killing gets half the fine. A dog found pursuing a deer is liable to be shot.

The statutes affecting fur-bearing animals—mink, lynx, otter and beaver—or those affecting wild birds are equally strict and rigidly enforced, except in the open season.—Boston Journal.

MISS BLAKE OF BOSTON.

She is Clever, Exhilarating and Believes in Herself.

In one of the new plays recently produced in New York is a Boston girl, who is clever, shrewd, witty and at all times a most agreeable and exhilarating sort of person.

"Miss Blake, you walk almost as the girls over here," said Larry, her Irish admirer.

"I suppose you are paying me a great compliment in saying that," she answered in an amused tone.

"Yes."

"But you must remember I come from Boston."

"Is Boston particularly noted for its good pedestrians?"

"My dear old chap, as they say over here, Boston is noted for everything that is good. We have the smartest men, the handsomest women and the finest State House in the world, not forgetting our Common, and, I might add in parenthesis, our brown bread and beans."

"You are awfully proud of Boston, aren't you?"

"Yes, and Boston reciprocates."

"I wish we were fighting with America now."

"Yes?"

"Yes—that we might keep you here as a prisoner of war."

"Why?"

"Because, Miss Blake, I love you."

"Of course you do."

"And do you care a little for me?"

"Of course I don't."

"Why do you laugh?"

"Because that is such a stock expression. When other topics of conversation sink out of sight the man always comes to the surface with, 'I love you; my darling, make me the happiest of men; will you be mine—my own?' or other stupid words to that effect."

"Please don't laugh, this is a very serious matter."

"To you—so of course you don't laugh; to me it's funny, so of course I do."

And going on in the same vein of pretty badinage this girl of Boston declares herself "a modern female Diogenes, going around the world with a searchlight look for a good man."

"Suppose you should discover the man—what then?"

"I should marry him."

"But suppose you shouldn't love him?"

"That isn't probable."

"But suppose he shouldn't love you?"

"That isn't possible.

"If the ancients sneezed while putting on their shoes when getting up in the morning, they immediately went back to bed again, because it was unlucky.

Kansas Point of View.

Everything a man likes to do a woman can prove is wicked.

Some people of forty have ambitions, but they are terribly shelf-worn.

A great many people would know more if they thought they knew less.

There is one thing colder than the tomb—a room warmed by a grate fire.

The better men and women know each other the less they say about ideals.

Nothing seems very terrible to a woman if it is committed in the name of love.

A man who can eat buckwheat cakes and sausages and digest them need not worry about death.

No doubt the devil often complains that he could accomplish more if it were not for his environment.

There was a time when a man who was hard up tried to hide it, but there is no such thing as hiding it now.

The women do not rob birds' nests for eggs, but they use the birds after they are hatched to ornament their hats.

The only time a man of experience takes his wife into his confidence is to tell her he is not making any money.

AN AMUSING BLUNDER.

Dr. Holmes Takes a Prince of the Blood For One of the Waiters.

An English paper tells the following story about Dr. Holmes: When he was in England, in 1886, he found himself on one occasion at a "crush" in London among a great mass of people, including several royal personages. He sat quietly in a corner, but presently, feeling a little faint, and observing refreshments in the distance, he turned to an elderly personage standing near, whom he supposed to be a butler or something of that kind, and asked for a harmless beverage.

The supposed servant brought this with great alacrity and remarked, "I am very glad to meet you, Dr. Holmes."

The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table was a little taken aback, and the stranger ended, "I am Prince Christian."

"Dear me," said Holmes, alive at once to the joke, "I have not had much acquaintance with Princes, and, do you know, I took you for the waiter!"

At this Prince Christian went off into a burst of merriment. "Where is my wife?" he said, "I must tell her this. She admires you immensely."

Off went Prince Christian to fetch the Princess, and the genial American philosopher was soon the center of a circle of royalty, greatly delighted by the incident.

Mrs. Ahmen Corner (in a whisper, as the collection is being taken)—Who is the man in the next aisle with the basket? Isn't it wonderful how he seems to be able to make everybody contribute? QUEER THINGS OF ANIMAL LIFE.

Habits and Freaks of the Big and Little Inhabitants of the Globe.

European marmots remain dormant during winter. Before becoming torpid they carefully cement the entrance to their dwelling.

The outer layers of the alligator's skin are said to contain a large percentage of silica, hence the hardness of the animal's hide.

Although on land, a clumsy animal, the seal is wonderfully quick in the water, and in a fair race can generally catch any fish.

With both the alligator and the crocodile the tail is the most formidable weapon. One stroke may break the legs of the strongest man.

It is said that the flesh on the forequarters of the beaver resembles that of land animals, while that on the hindquarters has a fishy taste.

It is believed by microscopists that the highest powers of their instruments have not yet revealed the most minute forms of animal life.

Voluntary muscles are almost always red; involuntary muscles are generally white, the most notable exception in the latter case being the heart.

Snakes have the singular property of being able to elevate the head and remain that way without the slightest movement for many minutes at a time.

A decapitated snail kept in a moist place, will, in a few weeks grow a new head, quite as serviceable and good looking as the one taken away.

Cats and other animals have false eyelids, which can be drawn over the eyeball, either to cleanse it or to protect it from a too strong a light.

The muscles of a pig's snout are exceedingly powerful for their size, and thus enable the animal to turn up very hard ground with the utmost ease.

A bat finds his way about without the assistance of its eyes. A blinded bat will avoid wires and obstructions as dexterously as though it could see perfectly.

When falling, as out of a tree or down a deep declivity, bears will roll themselves into a close resemblance to a huge furry ball, and thus escape without injury.

The mole is not blind, as many persons suppose. Its eye is hardly larger than a pinhead and is carefully protected from dust and dirt by means of enclosing hairs.

No parental care ever falls to the lot of a single member of the insect tribe. In general the eggs of an insect are destined to be hatched long after the parents are dead.

The elephant is commonly supposed to be a a slow, clumsy animal, but, when excited or frightened, can attain a speed of twenty miles an hour and can keep it up for half a day.

The blessing of Palestine is a small falcon, or hawk, which destroys the field mice. Were the hawk exterminated the human population would be obliged to abandon the country.

The Provident Loan Society Contemplates Increasing Its Capital.

The Provident Loan Society, which was started last May by some wealthy and benevolent members of Dr. Greer's St. Bartholomew's Church, as a means of assisting the city's poor, has been so successful that its managers have determined to enlarge the field of the society's usefulness.

The capital stock originally subscribed was $100,000, but since the loan bureau was opened about $130,000 has been lent, and of this amount $105,000 is outstanding. Charitable people of this city are now to be asked to subscribe enough money to raise the capital to $250,000, and if that be done, it is proposed to open branch offices in the more thickly inhabited quarters in order that the very poor may have a better chance of becoming acquainted with the society's benefits.

The rate of interest the society charges on loans is uniformly one per cent. a month. The regular pawnbrokers are allowed to charge by law three per cent. a month for the first six months, and two per cent. a month thereafter. Some of them get more, on various pretexts—storage, insurance, and the like.

What an ex-Boss is Doing in Mexico.

An American who is a celebrated factor in the development of the silver mining industry in Mexico is none other than that mighty bulldog of a man, the once famous "boss" of Washington, Alexander Shepherd. He is general manager of a company which operates from New York, and his energy, courage and executive capacity enabled him to achieve such wonders in the vicinity of his hacienda in Chihuahua that the Mexican Government actually authorized him to issue paper money, based upon the value of the silver which he expected to take from the mine. Official confidence could go no further, but the neighborhood's storekeepers did not look upon it in that light, but tried to charge the workmen a discount for accepting the Shepherd currency. That did not worry the general manager. He was not that kind of a man. He became a storekeeper himself on a large scale, and his rivals soon had the option of going out of business or taking his money at full value. Shepherd has built a tremendous aqueduct and bought a 2,000 foot tunnel. And his activities keep him so busy that he has, he declares, quite forgotten the ingratitude of the District of Columbia.

Her Bones Break Like Pipestems.

Sarah Scott, aged 36, living at Oak Grove Village, is attracting much attention from the medical fraternity. In 1893, while on her way to the Massachusettes General Hospital, she broke her thigh in alighting from a car. Her leg was amputated. While turning in bed at the hospital her other leg was broken. Before it had healed she was removed to her home. The other day while chewing she broke her jawbone, and later on, while attempting to put her hand behind her, she broke the bones of her arm.

BERBER MARRIAGE MARKETS.

The Brides Are Painted Surprisingly and Laden With Borrowed Finery.

Among the Kabyle clans in northern Afric women are looked upon as chattels to be sold like other possessions, and they are according disposed of to the person who makes the highest offer to the father or other male guardian. Many of the Berber tribes of Morocco, Algiers and Tunis hold yearly marriage markets, to which all the marriageable girls and widows from the neighboring villages are brought. The markets are attended not only by young men and old on the lookout for a wife, but also by a curious crowd anxious to see what lots are for sale and what prices they fetch. The girls when on view, are allowed to have a voice in the selection of their husbands, and many decline any proposals.

They are arranged in rows right across the market place; decked in the most telling Berber costumes: painted, powdered, and patches in the highest style of Kabyle art; loaded down with rings and bangles, brooches, chains, and coins enough to stock a jeweller's shop. The jewels are rarely the girl's property, but are borrowed for the occasion from friends and neighbors, as every village takes pride in its girls and wishes them to sell well. The young women are all seated on small squares of carpet spread upon the ground. Each has an elderly woman beside her, and in front, she has as if for sale, a small roll of stuff woven by her own hands. The faces of the girls are uncovered, for Berber women do not wear the face-concealing haik of the Arabs but it is impossible to tell whether they are pretty or not, for their faces and foreheads are so painted and tattooed that the natural features cannot be made out.

The man who wishes to purchase steps up to the women of his choice and asks the price of the woven stuff before her. If he pleases her, she names a very low figure; and then a loud, shrill, and prolonged Yu-yu-yu-u-u uttered by the old woman at her side, announces that a bargain has been made, and the crowd shouts its approval. If she does not care for the man she names an absurdly high price; then he walks off to inspect the next lot. The girls are perfectly self-possessed. The young men are a great deal more nervous, and look as sheepish as a European might in their place. They are dressed in their best, in long red burnous, with high straw hats surmounted by cabbage shaped plumes.

One will spend an hour, and sometimes two or three walking about the girl he wants before he dares to ask the price of the woven roll. The girls watch the men out of the corners of their eyes, apparently unconcerned, chatting and laughing at them. When the suitor presents himself, they eye him boldly from head to foot as they would a horse, and if he suits he gets a prompt anewer. Sometimes the old woman will encourage a bashful youth with a wink or a nod. The old men set to work in a business-like manner, and walk down the line making their proposal to one after another till they find some one who will accept their offer.

FOUND A WASHINGTON LETTER.

It Was in an Old Trunk With Other Papers Written in 1791.

In searching for a missing will in the former residence of Mrs. Caroline Easton in Washington the Register of Wills found in an old trunk an autograph letter of Gen. Washington in excellent condition and written in that clear hand for which he was noted. It bears the date of Nov. 16, 1791, and concerns the selection of Richard Harrison as Auditor of the Treasury, besides giving an insight into the political methods of the Father of his Country in appointments to office. It is a matter of history that Mr. Harrison received the nomination thirteen days later, and served through successive administrations in that capacity till Nov. 1836, dying in Washington five years later. The letter follows:

Dear Sir: The office of Auditor in the Department of the Treasury of the United States has not yet been filled. Reasons (unnecessary to detail at this time) have hitherto prevented.

The inclosed points out what is expected from the officer and the emolument of the office. If Mr. Richard Harrison, now your son-in-law, which I congratulate you for, inclines to accept it I will bring him forward for nomination in the Senate.

He must decide without delay, and if on the side of acceptance, as there are many candidates for the office, and the public business suffers for want of the appointment. Let me hear from you or him by return of the post.

My best wishes, in which Mrs. Washington unites, attends you and Mrs. Craik and the rest of your family. I am always your sincere friend and affectionate servant. (Signed) GEORGE WASHINGTON.

DOCT. CRAIK.

In the old trunk where this letter was found were several other epistles from distinguished men, including one from Lafayette, dated Nov. 5, 1821, apparently intended to persuade the Legislature of Maryland or Virginia to extend aid in some project to Col. Robert H. Harrison. Col. Harrison (who was an ancestor of the lady whose will was being searched for) served Gen. Washington as secretary, and afterward became Chief Justice of Maryland, but declined the appointment of Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

He Sold It.

"Don't want soap, nor pictures," said the hard faced woman to the strange young man at the door.

"I'm not a peddler, madame," said the stranger; "my business is of an entirely different nature. Do you remember a weary, ragged and hungry tramp calling at your kitched door a short while ago?"

She didn't remember.

"Let me refresh your memory; you were dressed in an old morning wrap, tied at the waist with a string, your front hair was in pins, and there was a dark smudge across your nose——" She turned to slam the door, but his foot happened to be in the way.

"You had a rolling pin in one hand and a kettle of hot water in the other, with which you threatened to scald the poor wayfarer."

"Well, I didn't scald him, anyhow. You can't get any assault and battery against me."

"Nothing of the sort was intended, ma'am. I merely wish to let you know I was that supposed tramp. The bundle that I carried was a lightning camera and I have already been offered 10s. by a neighbor of yours for the picture I obtained; but if you want it for 7s. 6d., it is yours."

He effected the sale.—Tidbits.

IN THE STORM.

When Ben asked her if she would marry him she said "No!" After this she tempered the refusal a little by explaining to him that she liked him quite as well as anybody, but she had certain ideas about independence and winning her own way in the world, and she wanted to be free to follow these to their logical conclusion. Ben Howard did his best to prove to her the futility of these notions, and wasted a good deal of valuable time in the effort.

When he saw that no eloquence of his was likely to make Susie Barton change her mind he packed together his few belongings and started toward the land on which his eyes had long and longingly been set—the Dakotas.

Howard's first year's crop in his new home did well, and after the winter was on he permitted himself to add some comforts to the bare equipment of his home and bought some books and prepared to get through the dreary, lonesome time as best he could.

The long, cold winter of the north was fairly on when Howard, looking from his door one morning, saw smoke ascending from the school-house chimney for the first time.

"So they have found a teacher," he said to himself. "I suppose it is all right. But I dare say it's a girl—they always get girls out here—and she's bound to have a hard time of it. Girls that have to earn their own living ought to stay East. It's bad enough out here for a man."

The snow came, and the whole rolling plain lay white and glistening from horizon to horizon. The cattle had been brought in from the fields and hidden in the sheds that now were covered with snow, and so made only little hillocks in the land.

One day Howard looked at his flour barrel and in his potato sack and found that supplies were getting low. It was ten miles to the nearest town. Early next morning he hitched up his team and started off, on the way passing the schoolhouse. There a boy was just starting the fires. He had hardly completed his errands in the town and started back when a sudden storm came up, a terrible blizzard, such as only the wide plains of the frozen north can know. It would have been the part of wisdom for Howard to turn and get to shelter as quickly as he could in the town.

But somehow the thought of the schoolmistress and her little charges had been on his mind all day. He did not know who she was, had never heard her name, had seen her only across the distance of the white fields, but he knew she was a woman who was struggling alone to make her way in the world. This fact appealed to him.

The storm had come so suddenly that no one would dare to venture out until its fury was spent. The girl and her pupils would be alone in the schoolhouse prisoners perhaps for many terrible hours. Even the people nearest would not dare to try to make their way there, for they could not hope to battle against the blinding, driving, freezing storm. As for Howard, he was already in the fight, and it was only a question whether he should try to return to town or push on a few miles further. He felt instinctively that a man was needed at the schoolhouse. He pushed steadily forward.

The snow drove about him and covered the track and blinded him. It stung where it struck his face and hands. It froze upon his beard and upon the harness of his horses. More than once he thought he had lost his way and halted and groped about for the road. He became chilled, so that he could hardly move, could hardly guide his horses. Once he felt it was no use to battle further and stopped, and the storm raged about him. But he knew it was cowardly to give it up, so he urged the horses forward again. Then he sank into a lethargy, and the cold began to do its work upon him. Suddenly he was aroused. The horses had stopped, and a house loomed up before him, dimly seen through the storm. Howard drew up his stiffened limbs and stumbled from the wagon and threw himself against the door. It opened, and he half fell inside, carrying with him great guests of chilling wind and snow.

As soon as he had brushed the snow from his eyes and become used to the dim light of the room this is what he saw: A dozen children huddled about a stove, in which there was only the last spark of fire, and a woman, standing upright, looking at him with white face, but with an intensity of questioning that seemed to ask if he were a man or ghost. Half dazed with cold and suffering as he was, that look brought him to himself. He said but one word, "Susie!" and opened his arms. And the next moment he held her to him and was pressing his frozen beard against her cheek.

A man may be warmed from within as well as from without. He forgot his hours of suffering and battling with the storm. He put aside her questioning and all thought of himself. The fire in the stove gave out only the least glimmering of heat. The fuel was all gone, and the children shook with cold. Howard seized the axe, and going out into the storm once more began to demolish his wagon. From it he made a great armful of firewood and brought it in and he added it on the fire. Then he managed to get his horses out of the harness and brought them into the schoolroom. Then he sat down with Susie to talk—and to wait. It was quite night when the last stick from his wagon had been burned and the storm abated. Then from all about anxious parents came streaming toward the schoolhouse, plowing their way through drifts, and finding their children safe were glad to join in congratulations that Howard frankly told them were in order.

It was not very difficult to persuade Susie to give up the idea of making her own way in the world. But the children were not willing to give up their teacher. So a compromise was effected, after the wedding, by moving the schoolhouse over on to Howard's claim. And there for many a day Susie taught, while Howard tilled his land, and together they built a home that was in every way deserving of that name, which was much better, I protest, than if each had continued alone.—Cincinnati Post.

Small Matters.

The railway line between Ismid, near Constantinople, and Angora, 300 miles in length, is built entirely of iron—bridges, ties, telegraph poles and all—except the stations.

One passenger in every 2,000,000 that travel on steamboats is lost.

Since their discovery, in 1871, the famous Kimberley mines, of South Africa have yielded five and a half tons of diamonds, worth probably $200,000,000.

THE BUSINESS OF JOKE MAKING.

New York the Centre of a Flourishing Industry.

The business of joke making and short verse writing is a trade in itself and has its centre in New York. In almost every city or large town there are one or two bright wits who have cracked some exceptional jokes which some comic paper has printed and paid for. In many a place there is some local punster whose efforts are the pride of his narrow circle. But only in New York does it centre itself. When I speak of joke writing as a business with some I mean it literally. There is a coterie of about forty writers most of whom live in New York, who do nothing but write for the comic papers.

They do not wait for a happy inspiration, but make the inspiration come to them. They write jokes and verses for their living, and with some of them it is a very good living indeed. These are the men the comic papers depend upon for most of their material, and at least ten of them make from forty to eighty dollars a week "just joke writing." Some of these are well known to the general public from their names over verses or short sketches. But some of them again, who merely write short squibs, are known only to the editor.

It is no uncommon thing for any of these men to turn out from fifty to two hundred jokes (brand new, warranted not to fade) a week, and ten bits of verse. The professional joke writer frequently sits down without an idea in his head. Some turn of speech comes to him—he writes down his joke on a small rectangular slip of paper, just the size to slip into an envelope conveniently. That joke, or his train of thought suggests another, and so on he goes until in two hours he may have written twenty-five jokes.

Then the business part of it comes in. By a system of special bookkeeping, he enters the head of each joke in a book, and places opposite the title the paper to which the joke is sent. As a general thing he will put the twenty-five squibs which he has just finished in an envelope with an "address and directed envelope" inside, and start the package around the world of humor.

He sends it first to the paper which pays the highest price, and then in regular order from weekly to weekly, until he has exhausted the list and gotten down to where they pay as low as 15 cents per joke—a starvation price for the professional humorist. Suppose the first paper to which he sent the package took three jokes. When the others come back, he checks off the three as "taken" and "paid for," if the paper in question pays on acceptance—and most of them do to the leading writer. The rest he sends to the second paper, which may, perhaps, take four. The remaining jokes are again checked off and the package started again.—Printer's Ink.

PUTTING UP PRESERVES.

Factories That Had Their Origin in the Kitchen of a Clever Housewife.

Modern factory preserving is in many instances the direct outgrowth of some clever housewife's art. One of the largest packing houses, known almost the world over, had its origin in the kitchen kettle of a Long Island housewife. Her husband was a manufacturer of fancy soaps, and she was a prime hand at all sorts of domestic preserves. When she needed pin money she sometimes sold her surplus to her husband's customers, and from this grew up a business now involving hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

A single grocer buys annually about $15,000 worth of preserves from a woman up in Central New York. The business began a good many years ago in the kitchen of the present proprietor's sister. For a long time the product was put up in the kitchen by ordinary domestic processes. Even now the factory is in the back yard of the homestead. For years all the jars came to town with manuscript labels, but a litograph is now employed as a labor-saving device because the business has outgrown the manuscript stage.

Boston has a characteristic preserving establishment also the outgrowth of an ordinary kitchen. A family of that city began, many years ago, to peddle preserves. The product became popular and the plant was gradually enlarged, though steam apparatus was introduced only a few years ago. The proprietor still carries his goods to the chief grocers of Boston. They are sold on commission, and every morning a wagon delivers a fresh supply. The first essential with such an establishment is to maintain the original standard of excellence. A popular brand of pickles originated in a Virginia plantation kitchen.

There are a score of like instances, and new domestic factories are developed every year. It is not unusual for a family in New Jersey, or elsewhere in the suburbs of New York, to ask a grocer to take the surplus product of the preserving season. If the preserves bearing the manuscript label of the household are liked and customers ask for them, the grocer calls for more the next year, and thus a little business is gradually established.

Methods of Earning a Living.

Women exhibit most admirable inventive powers when they are obliged to find a new way to earn a living and wish it to be one of refinement and pleasure as well as profit. The latest profession originated with a Miss Shippen of Philadelphia, who is an "entertainer of young persons and children," and a sort of conductor, as it were, of their parties. Her aim is to direct the amusements of the little ones according to their ages and tastes and to inform herself on the subject. She consults with the parents a few days before the party is to be given, and discusses all the details of menu, decorations and games. She arrives at the house a few hours before the time to see that everything is in readiness, and when they are all assembled she entertains them, interests them in games, both old and new, some of which she has invented, and through these teaches them a bit of German and French. While they are enjoying a game to the fullest she sits down to the piano and plays a waltz, and they all begin to dance, so they are sure not to tire of any one thing. The key to her method is to make each child as happy as possible.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Louise Billings of Central avenue spent Thanksgiving Day in Elizabeth.

Proprietor Conover of Hotel Albion is welcomed out again after an attack of illness.

The Misses Glenn and Craig, place ate Thanksgiving dinner with an aunt in Elizabeth.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kiederling and family spent Thanksgiving with relatives at Raritan.

Gen. Eli Long and family returned to their home on Grove street yesterday from Penn Yan.

Charles Hall of Reynolds's Pharmacy is planning a Christmas visit to his mother in Peekskill.

Lewis Lowrie of Reynolds's Pharmacy has been summoned to Trenton by the death of his brother.

John H. Tier, Jr., and daughter Gertrude spent Thanksgiving in Newark, with Mrs. Tier's father.

Mrs A. V. Lunger and daughter Ella of East Front street, spent Thanksgiving with relatives at White House.

Miss Mildred Gaskill of New Market spent Thanksgiving with her cousin, Miss Margaret Corlell of Church street.

F. L. C. Martin and J. H. Doane were among those attending the races in Madison Square Garden. Mr. Martin was one of the timers.

Chas. Wadsworth, formerly of Central avenue, came to Plainfield yesterday especially to see the National Festivities at the Y. M. C. A. Fair.

D. A. MacPhie, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., has rented a house at Liberty and Front streets through W. D. Thickstun, real estate agent.

John H Carney was "the" attraction at a turkey supper in the M. E. Church at Mt Horeb, last night. His Dutch dialect so delighted the large audience that he was recalled over a half dozen times.

One of the pleasant family gatherings enjoyed yesterday was that at the home of Mrs. Calvin Bunyon on Arlington avenue. All of the children and grandchildren were present except two who were at distant points and unable to get there.

Mr. and Mrs. William Mosher of East Fourth street, spent a very pleasant Thanksgiving at home with their immediate relatives. Those present were: Justice and Mrs. J. E. Mosher, Mrs. Case, Miss Carrie Case, Charles Case and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wyckoff and children.

"There's no place like Plainfield, after all", is the opinion of Mr. and Mrs. F C. Knowland, and they have returned from Logan's Ferry, and taken up temporary residence at the Albion. As soon as their home on East Seventh street can be gotten in order they will remove there and probably reside permanently in Plainfield

A most enjoyable surprise party was given to Henry Perrine of 220 West Second street, last evening. It was arranged by Fred Snyder and John W. Vroom. There were about fifty present, who passed a very pleasant evening playing games and dancing, after which all partook of the excellent refreshments provided. The happy company left for their homes at a late hour.

PRINCETON'S PROF.

SOMETHING ABOUT PRINCETON'S MOST FAMOUS PRESIDENT.

A Man of Great Force, Kindly Heart, a Scotch Brogue, and a Quick Temper. How His Later Years Were Spent in Studious Retirement in His Home.

The death of Dr. James McCosh, for 20 years the honored and much beloved president of Princeton College, has long been expected by thousands of former students in every part of the country, whose memories of college and campus life are indissolubly mingled with pleasant and sometimes humorous recollections of the self-willed, white haired old gentleman, whose sway was so absolute and whose ways as seemingly tyrannical as his heart was kindly and gentle.

Nowman identified with Princeton College since its beginning, away back before the Revolution, whether president or professor ever so strongly stamped his personality upon the institution as did Dr. McCosh, or so impressed himself upon the minds and recollections of the students.

In the later years of his presidency—he resigned in 1888—he was decidedly stooped, the result of much labor at his study desk. But he lost nothing of his majesty for that reason, for his face, always very impressive, then took upon it the added majesty of years and white hairs.

His dress befitted his bearing. He always wore, except in the hot June days toward the close of the college year, a long, sweeping Prince Albert coat over black waistcoat and trousers. He often wore a silk hat, but varied this sometimes with a derby, which, if not always in the mode, was invariably of dignified proportions. His walk was rapid for one of his years and indicative of the physical vigor which he retained long after he was entitled to it.

He was fond of a broad old fashioned collar, which, with his usual white lawn tie, accorded admirably with the rare dignity of his presence. Gold rimmed glasses usually dangled from a chain or ribbon around his neck.

While a sturdy and patriotic American Dr. McCosh's tongue always remained intensely Scotch. His brogue was as rich in the later days of his sway as it was when he assumed the presidency in 1868. This was particularly true in conversation, and it served to make his personality all the more strongly marked.

DR. JAMES MCCOSH.

It helped to endear him still more to the students, too, through that mysterious principle which makes a foreign flavor, if musical, attractive to the ear. Dr. McCosh's brogue was always musical. It seemed also to add strength to a manner of speech already commanding by reason of the quality of mind that prompted it.

So thoroughly did Dr. McCosh identify himself with his institution that he seldom, at least, in conversation, referred to it as Princeton College. He generally said "my college."

"I am sorry to have to say to you, young gentlemen," he would say, with the blood mounting in his cheeks "that such conduct is better befitting a band of naked Comanche savages in war paint on the plains of Arizona, than a body of civilized and supposedly scholarly young men in a great institution of learning. I tell you," he would go on with increasing warmth, "that I won't have such unholy doings in my college, and if I catch you —if I catch you——"

Here his feelings would generally choke further utterance and he would abandon the subject, and a moment later would talk gently and calmly on other matters.

To be summoned before the faculty in those days was an experience that no student longed to have.

If the student attepted to excuse himself, Dr. McCosh, who sat in a big chair at the head of the room, could never long restrain himself. With flushing face, he would abandon his judicial capacity, take the role of prosecutor summarily from the hands of the officials who held it, and, in the student's phrase, "jumped on the neck" of the offender, often browbeating him unmercifully.

But if the delinquent made frank avowal, even without confessing penitence, the sometimes hot headed president would look at him sternly, but with a suggestion of kindness in his gaze, and dismiss him with a lecture that generally began fiercely and ended temperately.

I remember almost his last appearance at an alumni dinner, when, upon his arising to speak, every class represented, from the oldest to the one just graduated insisted on getting in its three cheers with the long drawn Princeton "rocket" at the end.

It was a matter of six or seven minutes before the good man was allowed to say the first word, and then he said, brokenly that such greeting from "me boys" nearly made his heart burst with happiness. And it was evident that he spoke the truth. Such moments were the reward of his life.

If Dr. McCosh was gifted with practical genius in one way more than another it was as a money getter. A college cannot become a great university without great sums of money, and Princeton owes to Dr. McCosh a tremendous debt of gratitude for this cause alone. It was his theory that the college must grow upon capital coming from without—that the institution should not attempt to make a profit from its students, but rather to reduce the cost of education in every possible way.

He Knew His Business.

Maud—I understand that Jack proposed to you last night and you refused him.

Marie—Yes, although, poor fellow, I am afraid that if he had not left me so hurriedly I might have relented and accepted him.

Maud—So he told me.

AN ARTIST'S INSPIRATION.

Walter Burridge, the artist, tells a good story on himself and proves it by showing the blank space on the wall where the picture, one of the accessories of the tale, used to hang.

He went one day to the studio of a friend and found there an anatomical figure, such as are to be seen in studios everywhere. It was a good one, and Burridge wanted it, for his own had been broken. He expressed a desire to have it, but the artist friend wouldn't give it up for any money. It was his inspiration, he said. He needed it even for the composition of a letter. And as for drawing anything in the human figure without it, that was simply hopeless. He couldn't spare it.

So Burridge went away. But another day, while in the same studio, and in the absence of the owner, a third artist, who commonly shared the place and worked there, said Burridge could have the model if he wanted. The owner had concluded to get along without it.

And about an hour after the owner came back. He sat down and tried to draw a wagon. But he couldn't. He tried to write a letter that had long been overdue. But he could not get his thoughts together.

"Something is gone," said he. "I can't do anything. I have lost something."

"Maybe it is your brains," said the man who shared his room. "Burridge has been over."

"The figure!" cried the artist. "That's it." And he started out. When he came back he brought not only the figure, but a water color sketch as well. It had taken Burridge days to complete the picture, and it marked one of the pleasantest events in his sojourn along the Grand canyon of the Colorado.

But it squared him.—Chicago Herald.

A MOVING MOUNTAIN.

It Is Traveling Slowly But Surely Down the Columbia River.

A traveling mountain is found at the Cascades of the Columbia. It is a triple-peaked mass of dark brown basalt, 6 or 8 miles in length where it fronts the river, and rises to the height of almost 2,000 feet above the water. That it is in motion is the last thought that would be likely to suggest itself to the mind of anyone passing it, yet it is a well-established fact that this entire mountain is moving slowly but steadily down to the river, as if it had a deliberate purpose some time in the future to dam the Columbia and form a great lake from the Cascades to the Dalles.

In its forward and downward movement the forest along the base of the ridge has become submerged in the river. Large tree stumps can be seen standing dead in the water on this shore. The railway engineers and brakemen find that the line of railway that skirts the foot of the mountain is being continually forced out of place. At certain points the permanent way and rails have been pushed 8 or 10 feet out of line in a few years.

Geologists attribute this strange phenomenon to the fact that the basalt, which constitutes the bulk of the mountain, rests on a substratum of conglomerate or of soft sandstone, which the deep, swift current of the mighty river is constantly wearing away, or that this softer subrock is of itself yielding at great depths to the enormous weight of the harder mineral above.—Goldthwait's Geographical Magazine.

An Island for Turtles.

It is said that one of the West India islands is inhabited exclusively by turtles, some of which grow to an enormous size. Attempts to establish human habitations on the island have always failed. The turtles undermine the foundations of the houses, and not infrequently attack the inmates.

DRAMA AND OPERA.

FEATURES OF THIS SEASON'S GRAND OPERA IN NEW YORK.

The Ever Popular Bostonians have a New Piece in "Prince Ananias." Ada Rehan Again Before Metropolitan Audiences. "The Coming Woman" Not Successful.

"The Coming Woman" was not at all politely received when she presented her card at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. It was found at once that the lady had assumed a name that was not hers, that she was an impostor—dramatically speaking—of the very worst type. There's much in a name, Juliet to the c..trary notwithstanding, and nine out of every ten persons who had gone to witness the first performance expected a play, no doubt, that dealt with a problem—a play that contained many intellectual subtleties and a new truth of two. Why? For no other reason, I am sure, but because the play's title smacked of modernity, of the sexual question, of Noraism, Hedda Gablerism and all that sort of thing. Instead of which the spectator was confronted with the lawdriest kind of melodrama—with a heroine who is a horse doctor, and an old scapegrace of a father who had contracted a mock marriage and committed forgery, with a polished villain who brags at the club of his triumphs over the weaker sex, with an incognito uncle who lends money at good fat interest and saves his niece from a circus life, and with a monstrous gray horse which played a most exacting part like a scholar and a gentleman.

Revivals and resuscitations will not alone make up the repertoire this season at the Metropolitan Opera House. Many new works are promised. Within a month it is expected that Bemberg's "Elaine" will have been produced, with Mme. Melba and M. Jean de Reszke in the roles they created in London when the work was first represented at Covent Garden. Round about the same period Verdi's last contribution to the literature of the the lyric stage, "Falstaff," will be seen, with M. Victor Maurel in his original part of the Fat Knight. Miss Sibyl Sanderson's arrival early in January will be followed by a production of "Esclarmonde," the title role of which Massenet wrote with a special view to Miss Sanderson's characteristic of voice and style. The same composer's "Thais" and Saint-Saens' musical dramatization of the impious, though luckily beautiful "Phryne," are both promised. Not a bad list, even though the prospectus proposes and the manager disposes. "Elaine" will in all probability be the first novelty of the season. It is the first essay of M. H. Bemberg in grand opera. "It is my first work of large dimensions—my first serious work for the stage," said M. Bemberg a few days ago.

Corbett's business has increased 20 per cent., according to the despatches, since the death of Fitzsimmons's sparring partner. This goes to show the thoroughly commercial nature of prize fighting at the present time, and how directly free advertizing of pugilists affects their theatrical fortunes. It is evident now that the Corbett-Fitzsimmons match will not be fought next fall, for "Lanky Bob" will not get through his trial until well along in the summer, and will thus be deprived of the time for training stipulated in the articles of agreement. It will be easy enough, however, to move the date of the fight a year or two ahead, in case Fitzsimmons is obliged to serve the State meanwhile, so that Corbett and the man he is matched to fight will continue to figure as prize pugilists without facing one another for a long time to come. It would seem to be better to accept both men as actors, and give up all discussion about them as fighters. Corbett does not want to fight again. He is a shrewd, hard-working, money-making man, without brutal instincts, and with a desire to get ahead. He has been aided by luck thus far to an extraordinary extent, and it is likely that nothing will force him into the ring again, despite all the agreements and incessant advertising which he manages to get.

Nowadays scenery and costumes count for almost as much as music and words in the success of a comic opera. Bearing this fact in mind, the Bostonians have spared no pains in the preparation of the stage pictures for "Prince Ananias," the new comic opera by Victor Herbert and Francis Neilson, which is at the Broadway Theatre. The scenes of the opera, which is in two acts, are laid in France in the sixteenth century. The cast will be as follows: George Frothingham, Wm. Castleman, Peter Lang, W. H. McDonald, Eugene Cowles, H. C. Barnabee, Jerome Sykes, Joseph Sheehan, Josephine Bartlett, Eloise Morgan, Caroline Hamilton and Jessie Bartlett Davis.

After an absence of a year, during which time she has visited Europe, Ada Rehan is again in New York at Daly's. Miss Rehan opened in "Twelfth Night." She is supported by Mr. James Lewis, Mr. Herbert Gresham, Mr. John Craig, Mr. Sidney Herbert, Mr. Charles Wheatleigh, Mr. Lloyd Danbigny, Miss Sybil Carlisle, Miss Lily Post and Mr. Henry Dixey. "Twelfth Night will be presented for only a few nights and will be followed in quick succession by "Love on Crutches," "The Railroad of Love," "Taming the Shrew," "The Magistrate" and "The Wonder." None of these plays will run more than twelve nights, and after this series has been completed a number of novelties will be produced.

LINWARD.

UNGALLANT SICILY.

The Advent of a Daughter is Considered a Calamity.

In some parts of Sicily the birth of a girl is always an unwelcome announcement. In fact, it is regarded as a sad event and is made known to the world by a black flag, which is hung out of the window. The reason that such an event is looked upon as a misfortune is because the young woman has to be supported by her family until married, and then she is supposed to come to the bridgroom with a dot. This, of course, is trying, but the Sicilian father is not as badly off as the American parent. Girls in Sicily are married between the ages of 14 and 16 They live in seclusion until they are married, when they are disposed of on a purely financial basis.

Forgot the Keyhole.

Jack (rapturously)—Now, darling, will you please name the happy day?

Minnie (blushingly)—Three weeks from Thursday, Jack.

Nora, the kitchen maid (through the keyhole)—Av you plaze, Miss, that's me reg'lar day out. Ye'll have to get married in the early part of the wake.—American Hebrew (N. Y.)

CORSET OR NO CORSET?

Views of Prominent French Actresses for and Against It.

The Gaulois asks the opinion of a certain number of prominent professional ladies upon the use of the corset. The following are among some of their replies:

Mlle. Bartet—I can do nothing better than give you a line from "Francillon," which is sufficiently significant: "The corset! Oh, the horrid thing!"

Mme. Jane Hading—The corset may be a hand of iron or a glove of velvet. Since my recent trip to America I am for Independence.

Mme. Worms Barretta—You may say that on principle I am against the corset. I favor it in certain cases, but on condition that it be light, short and very elastic, something like a brace, which lightly encloses the waist. My little three-year-old girl will wear it that way, and if later on she renounces the corset entirely her mamma will be only too glad of it.

Mlle. Reichenberg—The corset is an ordinary piece of feminine clothing, just like a belt, shoes, gloves, &c. I have always worn one, and found it very comfortable. Why should it be regarded as the evidence of coquetry and bad taste? But I cannot give any particular opinion upon the subject, because for me a corset is a thing of very little importance. It should be a light affair, enclosing the waist very gently.

Mme. Judic—It is a very delicate question, and I am not sufficiently learned to criticise it or to make an apology for it. Nevertheless, if I had the great advantage, especially for an artist, of remaining slight, I would most assuredly follow the example of Mme. Tallien, who never consented to shut her waist up in an iron prison. For all that, I owe to the corset a daily pleasure, because the bother of putting it on every morning is more than compensated for, to my mind, by the pleasure of taking it off every night.

Mlle. Darlaud—Oh, pshaw! that beastly cuirasse, fit only for a coquette! Up to her twentieth year a young woman can do without it. I dispense with it, and I have adopted the brace (brassiere) of such refined elegance, in white satin, set off with Valenciennes.

Mlle. Yvette Guilbert—All women, fat and lean alike, belittle the services rendered by the corset, because they all pretend to be able to dispense with it without impairing the beauty of their figures. For my part, I admit that since I began to get a little fat I have rarely worn one; but when I was lean it helped me in the manufacture of a shape, and consequently I owe some little gratitude to the corset.

TAILS OF THE WHITE HOUSE HORSES.

President Cleveland Changes the Old Fashion and Has Them Docked.

All of the horses in the President's stables in Washington have their tails docked. The discovery of the fact has caused some excitement among that class of persons who depricate such a radical departure from the long-tailed fashion that has prevailed among the White House horses since the days of Thomas Jefferson. It has always been regarded as essential to the rule of humanity and dignity that the President should ride behind horses with flowing manes and tails, and the persons who are responsible for the present concession to fashion will, no doubt, be criticised as severely as were those who proposed to hang Watt's painting of "Love and Life" in the White House corridor.

During President Grant's second administration the docking of horses' tails was considered the proper thing among those who set the "court" styles, and a persistent attempt was made to obtain Gen. Grant's consent to an abbreviation of the tails of his favorite roadster, "Cincinnatus," and the other fine horses in his stable. The General, however, regarded docking as cruel and the long, flowing tail as a thing of beauty, and he refused to be persuaded. The local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals thereupon passed appropriate resolutions commending the President for his humane sentiments. It is intimated that President Cleveland was also opposed to the docking operation that has just taken place, but that he was overruled by those whose desires he is in duty bound to respect.

DEER HUNTING ON LONG ISLAND.

Better Sport to be Found There Than on More Remote Fields.

In Long Island, about 47 miles from New York, lies a territory that abounds in wild deer, and during the one week in November allowed by law that section of the country was overrun with hunters and nightly camp fires gleamed through the thick woods of the "deer country." Such things, while common in the Adirondack section, are novelties so near this city. The grounds in which the deer are found are about four miles square and lie along the north and south sides of the main line of the Long Island Railroad. The grounds extend on the west from Central Islip to Ronkonkoma Station on the east.

The formation of the land is particularly adapted to the growth and shelter of deer. The high rolling Pond Hills furnish shelter to the deer during winter. This, with the abundance of feed, has made this territory the natural breeding ground of deer. There are no other deer found on Long Island outside the limits of this territory. Conservative judges estimate that it contains more than five hundred deer.

The deer were almost extinct ten years ago on Long Island. Then a law was passed prohibiting the shooting of deer for several years. When the act was amended five years ago allowing deer to be shot it was found that the deer had increased rapidly. In fact, many of the farmers of Holbrook, Waverly, Ronkonkoma and Central Islip complain of the large and rapidly increasing number of deer. Charles Squires, a farmer of Holbrook, says he has lost several hundred dollars through the destruction of his turnip and cabbage fields this season. Samuel Penney has been another large loser.

Had It All the Same.

Harry—If I had known the electric light was going out and the car would be dark so long I would have snatched a kiss.

She—Heavens! I thought you did. Anyhow, somebody did.—Detroit Sun.

Elimination of the Horse.

Is the horse to fall into innocuous desuetude? Electricity and the cable have driven him from the streets, and now the bicycle has broken his record on the race track. And will Dame Nature in the end think herself complimented in the development of the man's ingenuity rather than humiliated by the animal's defeat.—Baltimore American.

DEATH WAS THE VICTOR

Football Players Killed by an Express Train.

The Stage Containing the Southbridge Eleven Is Dashed Into Splinters and the Men Are Thrown in All Directions—Street of Williams College and Three Other Victims.

Southbridge, Mass., Nov. 30. The city is in mourning and in place of enthusiasm over a football victory four homes are bereaved and eleven others are in a state of apprehension expecting hourly the death of a son or husband. All this is due to an awful calamity which resulted in the killing of four young football players and the probable death of the others, who are believed to be fatally injured.

The victims were all members of the Southbridge football team. The eleven was scheduled to play a game with the students of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute here. The grounds are about a mile from the town, and to reach them the team had engaged a large stage. The young men were in high spirits, laughing and joking, when the tracks of the New York and New England Railroad were reached. Just as the vehicle reached the crossing there was a shrill whistle, followed by a crash of timbers and groans.

The Hartford express ha dstruck the stage, smashing it into kindling wood, instantly killing the driver, four horses and four of the players. All of the latter were thrown into the air. The train was stopped in a quarter of a mile, and when the conductor and passengers got back to the scene of the accident they found Chrales Canthier, Victor Nelson, Joseph Cook and William Street, lying beside the roadbed dead and horribly mangled. Street was the quarterback of Williams College.

All the other members of the eleven were badly injured. Charles Simpson had both legs broken and sustained internal injuries. A. E. Hughes, internal injuries; W. J. Burshaw, badly cut all over body; Bert Clemens, ear split and leg bruised; Frank Morse, slightly injured; James Taylor, head cut and badly cut about body; Henry Belknap, arm broken; Edward Durgin, Leslie Newell and Andrew Taylor, all badly injured.

Slight hopes are entertained for Hughes, Burshaw and Andrew Taylor's recovery.

The barge containing the Worcester eleven only escaped by a miracle.

BULLETS IN A COURT ROOM.

Kentucky Mountaineers Fight a Duel With Fatal Results.

MOUNT STERLING, Ky., Nov. 30.—Tragic scenes unparalleled in the history of the American Bar took place to-day in the United States court room of this city.

Court opened quietly, but with a tense, nervous feeling, for those present expected trouble before the session was over, and adjourned amid a flying of bullets and the frightened cries of flying spectators. The man whose testimony precipitated the conflict will die, while his assailant is now in jail awaiting trial for hiscold blooded crime.

Lee Sturgall, of Elliott county, was on trial for moonshining, and United States Commissioner Thomas F. Rodgers was on the bench. The arrest of Sturgall was brought about, so the mountaineers claim, through enmity of neighbors.

Elliott county has its fued, and Sturgall is a leader of one of the factions. A score of witnesses about equally divided between the factions, were summoned and trouble had already occurred between these men. Feeling was intensely bitter and the court room was crowded with partisans.

Green Atkins, one of Sturgall's lieutenants, was the third witness for the defense, mounted the stand, was sworn and awaited interrogation.

Immediately Charles Watkins, of Carter county, arose from his seat and, amid deathlike stillness, walked deliberately up the court room and inside the railing, taking a position just behind Sturgall and opposite Atkins upon whom he blared in a significant manner.

Atkins returned the look of hatred and smiled contemptuously, but his hand went to his gun pocket, nevertheless. He had ben warned that Watkins would shoot him if he gave certain testimony, but this did not deter him. He answered promptly the commissioner's questions, and was explaining a statement he had made when Watkins, with a cry of rage, drew his pistol and rushed forward.

Atkins also drew and bullets flew in all directions, causing a stampede.

Lawyers, spectators, the jury and Court went to cover enthusiastically, while the few women present rent the air with their screams.

Atkins and Watkins fought like demons, overturning chairs, tables and scattering stationery until every bullet was gone, when United States Marshal Pat Pouch seized Watkins just as Atkins dropped to the floor unconscious.

Watkins was hurried to the county jail, the officers fighting off Atkins' friends, while surgeons were summoned for the wounded man. It was found that one bullet entered his abdomen and recovery is impossible.

Atkins has a wife and children living in Elliott county, near the home of Sturgall, whose witness he was. Watkins is badly beaten up, but otherwise unhurt as yet. Atkins' friends are wild with rage, and swear they will kill Watkins. The latter claims the dying man perjured himself on the witness stand.

Watkins lives near the home of Oscar Morton, who was lynched at Beattyville recently. The Sturgall faction are talking of another lynching.

TWO MORE CAPTURED.

Deputy Marshals Arrest That Number of the Cook Gang.

Muskogee, I. T., Nov. 30.—French and four other members of the Cook gang, which looted the Lafayette Brothers store were seen on Boody's Creek, six miles south of Muskogee, in camp.

The officers at once placed in the field a posse of Indian police and deputy marshals. Judge Stuart says he and Marshal McAlester have fifty or sixty deputies in the field. Indian Agent Wisdom and Judge Stuart reported that two of the gang were captured in a canon eight miles south of Checotah. Stuart says the two captured joined the gang recently and were not in the last robbery. There are fifteen of the bandits yet at large and within ten miles of Muskogee. All passenger trains are heavily guarded.

STUDENTS WITH GUNS.

A Servian Professor Is Compelled To Fly To Save His Life.

Berlin, Nov. 30.—The Belgrade University has been closed, owing to disorders among the students. Ex-Minister Georgevich is now professor of jurisprudence at the university, and he is very unpopular—so much so, in fact, that some of the students threatened to shoot him.

The professor feared that the students would put their threats into execution, and fled to save his life. The closing of the university followed.

Three Tramps Killed.

San Francisco, Nov. 30.—Four unknown young men, supposed to be tramps, were asleep on the railroad track when a train ran over them, at Elmira, between this city and Sacramento. Three were instantly killed.

JONES AGAINST GORMAN.

The Populist Senator Will Uphold the Tariff Bills.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Senator Jones said to-night that he had not taken any part in the Gorman-Brice-Smith conferences in New York, which had for their object the strangling of the pop-gun tariff bills. The Arkansas Senator was, in fact, quite emphatic in declaring he had not joined the anti-cuckoos.

He had heard that he was included in the plan to hang up all the tariff measures during the coming session of Congress. That, he said, could not be, as he could not see how the Democratic Senators could, under all the circumstances, afford not to at least make an effort to pass the bills. Here the enthusiasm of the Senator died away to zero. It was evident he did not expect any further tariff measures could be successfully passed before March 4 next.

"However," said he, "if there im a majority in the Senate against them, we shall not be able to get them through, but that is one of the things that remains to be seen. If certain Democratic Senators who are supposed to be against the bills prove upon the test to be really opposed to them, we shall no be able to get favorable action in case the Republicans should stand solid against further action by the present Congress."

Asked if he thought all the Republican Senators would oppose the bills, Senator Jones said that was one of the things he wanted to ascertain. "I think," he said, "the Republicans ought to be put on record on the Sugar bill. They have twitted the Democrats mercilessly on the charge of selling out to the Sugar Trust, when, as many believe, there is a larger element on the Republican side friendly to a duty on refined sugar than on the Democratic side.

"I want to see if the Republican Senators will put themselves in that attitude after the charges tha have been made against the Democarts in that connection. For that reason, as well as others, I think the pop-gun bills will be pressed in the Senate during the short session, and I hope we may have the test of a vote on them."

ALL HER CREW GONE.

A Schooner Discovered off the Massachusetts Coast Abandoned.

Orleans, Mass., Nov. 30.—A schooner without sails or spars, flying signals of distress, was sighted off this place by Captain Charles, of the life saving station, who, with his crew, in spite of a terrific sea, succeeded in boarding her.

They found no one on board of her. She was the James H. Deputy, of Bath, Me., built at South Milford, Del., 1849. Captain Charles was obliged to abandon her, and with his crew, had much difficulty in getting back to shore.

New Brunswick, Nov. 30.—By the accidental discharge of a gun during the Thanksgiving Day shoot of the East Side Rod and Gun Club two men were fatally injured and the third will his sight. Henry McCawley was loading a gun to take his place at the traps.

As the butt of the gun barrels struck the breech both shells exploded. William Griggs, shoe manufacturer, received almost the entire load of shot from one shell in his right temple and fell to the ground without uthtering a sound. George Holzworth, a ship captain, who stood near by, was also wounded in the right temple, and William Hoover received the second shell in his eyes.

KILLED BY A TOOTH BRUSH.

Dr. Fordmer Dies of a Peculiar Cause at Camden, N. J.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 30.—The bristles from a tooth brush, which lodged in the throat of Dr. George R. Fordmer, formed the primary cause of his death at his home here.

Dr. Fordmer was one of the best known practitioners in Camden, and until he met with the singular and distressing accident was in excellent health.

While Dr. Fordmer was cleaning his teeth one morning a bunch of bristles became detached from the brush and in an inspiratory movement were drawn down into his throat. A throat specialist was finally consulted, and he succeeded in dislodging some of the bristles and considerable relief was afforded the sufferer.

As the months wore on, Dr. Fordmer was subject to a persistent cough, and was never entirely free from pain in the region of the lungs. Thus weakened, Dr. Fordmer became an easy prey to pneumonia, and, when attacked, rapidly succumbed.

UNDER MOUNTAIN SEAS.

Fearful Experience of the Overdue Steamer Palestine.

BOSTON, Nov. 30.—The steamer Palestine, from Liverpool, reached here six days overdue. Captain Whiteway says that on Nov. 21 a mountainous wave engulfed the forward part of the vessel, and with tidal fury swept its entire length, carrying everything before it.

He expected that it would carry them to the bottom. The sea struck the strongly built iron house forward and completely wrecked it, ripped up the hurricane deck and carried away everything movable.

Another volume of water almost as terrific as the first followed immediately, and the saloon bulkhead was forced in and the cabin flooded with water, and much valuable property was destroyed. A life boat was smashed to kindling wood and the private saloon was flooded. One man was disabled.

World Cycle Records Broken.

Denver, Col., Nov. 30.—At the Denver athletic track Gerwyn and Pugh on a tandem, broke the following world's records unpaced: Two miles in 4:19; three miles in 7 minutes; four miles in 9:20; five miles in 11:35. J. D. Parks broke the 2-3 mile world's record, doing it in 1:28 1-5, Class A unpaced.

Ingalls in New York.

New York, Nov. 30.—Ex-Senator John J. Ingalls is in the city. He stopped at the Grand Union Hotel. Many friends called on him during the morning. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon he paid his bill, drove to the Thirty-fourth street ferry, crossed and took train to Riverhead, L. I., where he spent his Thanksgiving.

New York, Nov. 30.—Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, who has been in New York almost constantly since the end of September, having been a guest at the Fifth Avenue Hotel and later at the Brevoort House during that time, left the city for St. Paul last Wednesday night.

It is learned that Archbishop Ireland's reason for visiting New York on this occasion was to negotiate a loan of $500,000 on real estate which he owns in St. Paul, the loan to be used in paying the indebtednes of the archdiocese of St. Paul.

Owing to the insecure feeling which existed among capitalists before election the Archbishop could not manage to effect the loan until recently. This he did through Mr. John A. Stewart, president of the United States Trust Company, who a few days ago organized a syndicate which bought $50,000,000 worth of United States bonds just issued by the government.

Pittsburg, Nov. 30.—Crazed by the sight of her eight-year-old boy being ground under a trolley car almost in front of his home, Mrs. Mary Leidner tried to cut her throat to-day. The boy had kissed her good-bye and started to cross Frankstown avenue on his way to his grandmother's home. He did not see an approaching electric car, which struck and killed him.

When the boy's body was brought home the boy's mother attempted to end her life. Her husband is in the Mercy Hospital undergoing an operation on his eyes. He lost his sight in an accident. The mother probably will die.

MILLIONS WERE STOLEN

Secretary Smith Tells of Lumber Robberies.

Government Lands Denuded by Forest Thieves—Work of the Interior Department Explained—The Pension List Increased—and Indians Are Being Educated in Farming.

Washington, Nov. 30.—The annual report of the Secretary of the Interior, Hoke Smith, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, has been isued. It is a voluminous pamphlet of 9 3pages, fifty-six of which are devoted to the report proper, and the balance to an appendix of documents, statements and so forth bearing on the subject matter of the report.

Mr. Smith leads off with a consideration of Indian affairs. The work of the Indian bureau, he says, is to the end of turning a people far from civilized into being fit for American citizens. The two menas chiefly relied on to accomplish this are education and allotments of land in severalty. He takes exception to alowing allotments before Indians are so far civilized as to properly utilize the land. He recommends that when land is sold for the benefit of Indians the department should act as a trustee of the money realized. Mr. Smith admits that some of the agents are not of a desirable type. The work in and the results from the Indian schools are on the whole satisfactory. The work of the various commissions is touched on. Destruction of game charged to the Indians is said to be probably due to white men, and this section of the report closes with a reference to white intruders in the reservations.

The public lands disposed of during the year amounted to 10,377,224 acres; 28,876 acres of Indian land being also disposed of. The remaining vacant public lands are estimated at 606,040,313 acres, exclusive of Alaska, military, railroad and other reservations. Over 35,000 agricultural patents have been issued. Lands have been certified for railroad and wagon roads to the extent of 865,556 acres. Surveys have been made in 13 States. Forty agents have been kept busy investigating fraudulent land entries. Timber has been stolen to the value of $1,000,000. The formation of a new Land Court is proposed.

Touching on pensions, Mr. Smith states that the pension list has during the year been enlarged by 3,532 names; 969,544 persons are now drawing pensions, among these being 9 widows and 3 daughters of the Revolution. The amount expended was $139,804,461.

During the year the Patent Office received 35,952 applications for patents, 1,050 for designs, 108 for reissues, 2,192 caveats, 1,720 for trade marks and 368 for labels. Twenty-two thousand five hundred and forty-six patents were granted and 13,167 expired. The total expenditures were $1,053,962, and the receipts over expenditures $129,560.

The taking of the eleventh census cost $10,365,676. Twenty-five volumes contain the facts gathered. A good deal of work yet remains to be done.

Geological surveys have been made in twenty-one States and Territories. Two hundred thousand dollars was appropriated for topographic surveys. Special investigations of mineral wealth have been made in a number of States. Work has begun on the final publication of the geologic atlas.

The International Congress of Education held in Chicago at the beginning of the year did, in Mr. Smith's opinion, stimulate public interest in the work of the Bureau of Education. This was shown by the great increase in the home and foreign correspondence of the bureau. There are 13,442 098 public schools pupils, 121,717 male and 258,901 female teachers. The total expenditure for the year was $163,359,016.

A dry summary of the work of the Government Printing Office is given in the report. The bureau of railroads calls attention to the fact that, in spite of the general depression, only one of the bond aided roads has gone into the hands of a receiver, and the status of the various Territories is discussed at length.

National parks and forest reserves are treated in detail. The Cascade Mountains and the Ashland Forest reserves have been added to public parks during the year. The proposed Yellowstone Park Railroad is inferentially condemned; game is said to be increasing in all the parks, and the condition of the reservations is, as a whole, considered satisfactory.

The report closes with statements about Government hospitals and charitable institutions, the United States Capitol and a plea for more space for Mr. Smith's department.

POVERTY AND POLITICS.

New Foundland Fishermen Starving While Parties Quarrel.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Nov. 30.—Further difficulties have been created here by appeals for relief from localities where the inhabitants are destitute, owing to the failure of the fisheries. The residents of several settlements on Conception Bay are in a state of almost complete starvation, having absolutely nothing but potatoes to eat.

Several hundred families are involved. All had been engaged in the Labrodar fisheries, but have returned home without having met with success, and now have no means of support for the winter.

The government is urged to provide public works to give the destitute people means of existence. The Whiteway party protest against the governor permitting the expenditure of moneys by the minority. They assert that they compose the majority of the Legislature, and will provide all needful relief, if called upon to assume the duties of government, which rightly belong to them.

This step on their part may force the immediate resignation of the government.

Fed Street Arabs.

Newport, Nov. 30.—Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt gave a turkey dinner to-day to 300 of Newport's newboys and messenger boys. Mrs. Vanderbilt was present herself as a spectator. Admission was to be by ticket, but just as the feast was about to be served it was reported that many unfortunate little fellows without tickets were a the door, and Mrs. Vanderbilt ordered that they be allowed to come in. They entered Masonic Hall with a rush and a glad shout.

A band was present and played street tunes, which the boys sand. "The Bowery" and "Two Little Girls in Blue" were the favorites. Mayor Fearing proposed three cheers and a tiger for Mrs. Vanderbilt, and the lads got up in their chairs to yell. Mrs. Vanderbilt found one boy who did not know how to handle the knife and fork, and she taught him. She cut his meat for him and gave him her special attention. Society people waited on the tables.

Satolli on a Throne.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Mgr. Satolli, Papal Ablegate, presided at the special Thanksgiving services held at St. Aloysius' Church. The vast auditorium as well as the galleries of the church, were crowded, and those present included many of the Catholic dignitaries of the city. The ablegate occupied a beautifully decorated throne in the sanctuary, and was assisted by the Rev. Father Sharrett.

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 30.—A Chicago Great Western pasenger train was wrecked six miles from here by a broken axle. The train was full of passengers and every coach left the track. The track was torn up for 200 yards and the coaches badly damaged.

TORTURED THIRTY YEARS.

His Suffering Ended After Using Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Mr. George Smith, of Tacony, Pa., says: "I suffered from rheumatism for 30 years, and had so many severe attacks that some of my joints were twisted out of shape. At times I suffered terrible pain, and, although I tried many remedies, I never obtained any permanent relief until I procured Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. The action of this remedy was wonderfully quick, and although I have only taken a small quantity, I consider myself permanently cured."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

HOW THE CRIMSON FELL

Harvard Men No Match for Pennsylvania's Eleven.

Captain Emmons and Other Players Were Still Suffering from Springfield Injuries and Every Rush Left a Harvard Man Stretched Helpless on the Ground.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30—Overwhelmed, broken and shattered, but fighting desperately to the last, Harvard went down before Pennsylvania by the score of 18 to 4.

The precious four was wrenched out of the jaws of defeat by desperate playing and a reckless disregard of life or limb by the wearers of the crimson. The Harvard men showed the effects of the terrible struggle they went through at Springfield on Saturday last, and in almost every rush some of their bruised and battered players would remain stretched out helpless on the turf.

Early in the game Harvard suffered an irreparable loss in the injury and retirement of Captain Emmons, and before the game was over Fairchild, Charlie Brewer, Hallowell and Frank Shaw were borne from the field.

Pennsylvania made her first point three minutes before the call of time in the first half, when Gelbert threw Hayes across the line after catching a punt for a safety touchdown. In the second half Pennsylvania scored three touchdowns, from two of which goals were kicked, making the total score for the red and blue 18.

Waters made Harvard's one touchdown about the middle of the second half, but Arthur Brewer failed at the try of goal and Harvard did not succeed in scoring again.

But for a palpable oversight on the part of the umpire, Harvard would probably have been shut out. The ball had been punted into Pennsylvania's territory, and striking on the ground, one of the Harvard rushers kicked it against Brooke's body and it bounded back and a Harvard man fell upon it.

The umpire gave the ball to Harvard though it was clearly an off-side play, and then it was that by a series of fierce plunges through Pennsylvania's line from the 23-yard line that the crimson carried the ball up and over the goal line of the red and blue.

The fine condition of the Pennsylvania players told as the struggle progressed and from the middle of the first half until the end of the game, with the exception of when Harvard made its touchdown, the play was mostly in the crimson territory.

Though Pennsylvania's play lacked the fierce that overbore Princeton, still, as the certainty of victory grew brighter, the red and blue played with greater ardor and toward the close of the game they were sweeping Harvard before them almost as the dust is carried before the winds.

Though Harvard's list of casualties was large, it was due only to the hard game that was being played and the poor condition of its men, for in marked contrast to the Springfield game, there was no slugging or brutal playing indulged in by either team. Only good, hard, clean football was played by both sides, and throughout the game the best of feeling was shown by the players on each side.

Pennsylvania is fairly revelling in the delirium of joy, for through long years of defeat and disaster, they have struggled on to victory and they close the season of 1894 with an untarnished record of victories. Pennsylvania claim that they are fairly entitled to the honor of the championship of the college football world, as Yale has refused to meet them, and as they have defeated Harvard, Yale's greatest antagonist, by a lager score than the blue made. Pennsylvania now awaits anxiously the result of the game with Princeton, which Yale plays on Saturday, and if the Tigers should down the New Haven boys, Pennsylvania will have a clear title to the championship.

Never was there a more perfectly ideal day for a football game. The sun came up in the morning and a cloudless sky and a crisp cold air sent the blood dancing through the veins.

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 30.—For the first time in its history Ithaca had a Thanksgiving day football game, and a larger crowd than had ever before assembled on Percy field witnessed the struggle between th Lhigh and Cornll tams. Songs specially written for the occasion were sung with much effect. The final score, as announced by the referee, was Cornell 10, Lehigh 6.

Middletown, Conn., Nov. 30.—Twenty-five hundred people witnessed a football game between Middletown high school and Stoors agricultural colege on the campus here. It was a rough game, won by Middletown by a score of 10 to 0.

PRINCETON, Nov. 30.—Evelyn College has been closed because of an outbreak of diphtheria. On Friday last Miss Orma Lindsley, of Utica, who was graduated at Evelyn last year and was taking a post-graduate course, went to bed early with sore throat. Her condition grew more serious during the night, and Dr. A. K. Kline was called in on Saturday morning. Dr. A. K. McDonald was also summoned. The physicians declared that Miss Lindsley was suffering from diphtheria and ordered the school to be closed.

The thirty-five students left at once. A part went to their homes on Saturday. The rest put up at the Princeton Inn and Nassau Hotel, where they stayed over Sunday. Some left for home yesterday and some the day before. Miss Lindsley grew worse, and on Saturday night her parents were summoned.

On Sunday she rallied slightly. On Sunday night she began to sink. She died at 1 o'clock on Monday morning. Dr. McDonald notified the State Board of Health, and placed all who had been exposed to the disease in quarantine. Among these were Miss Lindsley's roommate, Miss Hill, of St. Louis, and Miss Mary Burroughs, of Manasquan, N. J.

Miss Burroughs was quite well on Tuesday, having what she supposed was only a slight attack of quinsy. She cheerily wrote letters to her friends and chatted with the attendants. On Tuesday night, however, she was taken ill and lived until 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Miss Lindsley's body was sealed in a metallic casket and taken to Utica on Monday.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 30.—Engineer W. Jerome Lewis, of the New York and New England Railroad, was killed in a collision between the switch engine which he was running and a North-bound pasenger train on the valley division of the New York New Haven and Hartford Railroad. The accident ocurred near North street, at a point where the tracks of the valley division cross the New England tracks. The switch engine was running into the freight yard when the passenger train came along. The valley engine struck the switcher throwing it down the embankment and separating it from the tender. Lewis reversed his engine but stuck to his post and was thrown under the tender which fell upon him. He leaves a wife and son.

Bombay, Nov. 30.—In consequence of the serious news from Waziristan, another large force from various regiments has been ordered to Dera Ismail and others have been warned to be in readiness. Dispatches state that the Waziris are pouring into Baddar Shakar to join Chieftain Powindah, who is rousing the country against the British.

New York, Nov. 30.—Lord Aberdeen, the Governor-General of Canada, is at the Waldorf. He is here to attend the dinner of the St. Andrews' Society, which will to-day celebrate St. Andrew's Day.

NEWS OF THE COUNTRY.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Japan will continue the war to the bitter end. This news comes from an official source in St. Petersburg, and is accompanied by a threat that the Russian government will interfere.

Russia has a big fleet already in the Chinese seas and an army of 50,000 men in Vladivostock. This land force can be landed in Corea, or wherever it may be needed, in about ten days.

Accompanying the above news from the Russian capital is the statement that M. de Giers and his colleagues are annoyed at Japan's refusal of China's peace proposal, and insist that it is time the powers demanded an explanation from Japan as to her ultimate object in seizing Pekin, which has evidently been determined upon.

The reported Japanese atrocities at Port Arthur are confirmed from various sources, but it is believed that they were due to continued atrocities upon the part of the Chinese. A letter to the Times from Tokio, dated Oct. 24, says that nothing could exceed the humane and considerate treatment extended by the Japanese to their prisoners. This, it is added, reflects credit upon the Japanese, for they had to witness shocking Chinese cruelties.

On the battle field, it appears, the Chinese do not take prisoners, and from the dead and wounded vanquished they shear off the heads, mutilate them in various ways and string them together with a rope passed through the mouth and gullet. The Japanese have seen these ghastly remnants of their comrades. A barrel full of the mutilated remains was found by the Japanese after the battle of Ping-Yang.

Washington, Nov. 29.—Thanksgiving Day is being generally observed in Washington, largely as a religious and athletic holiday. The weather is fine. The departments and most business establishments are closed. The fair weather brought large attendance upon both classes of function—church services in the morning and football in the afternoon.

The President spent the day at Woodley with his family, having no company. The members of his cabinet who are in the city dined quietly at their homes.

Oneonta, N. Y., Nov. 30.—James B. Cleveland of this place committed suicide by taking morphine.

He was distantly related to President Cleveland, and for many years was employed in the Treasury Department at Washington and had recently been connected with the New York Custom House.

He left a note saying he was tired of life.

Edinburgh, Nov. 29.—The body of J. T. Stewart, a farmer of Dumfriesshire, was this morning found in a quarry a short distance from his residence.

It is believed that while on his way home during the night Stewart missed his way and fell over the bridge of the quarry and was instantly killed or so seriously injured as to prevent his attracting the attention of any passersby.

The dead man was a claimant to the estate of the late A. T. Stewart, the millionaire merchant of New York, and a suit instituted by him in prosecution of his claim is till pending.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—An Odessa dispatch to the Daily News says it is rumored there that Grand Duke George, the Czarewitch, died on Sunday last. No official confirmation of the report has been received. The report, however, has thrown the city into a state of gloom.

Grand Duke George is the second son of the late Czar Alexander, and was born at Tsarskoe-Selo, April 27, 1871. He has long been a sufferer from lung disease, and for two years past has ben compelled by his physicians to reside in the Caucasus, where he makes his home at Abbastumen.

Shamokin, Pa., Nov. 30.—At Coal Run Stephen Madden, aged eight years, was shot and instantly killed, and his little sister was severely burned by the discharge of a shot gun which was accidentally knocked down by a younger brother while the children were dressing.

Carlisle, Pa., Nov. 30.—Eight of the leading chiefs of the Assinaboines and Gros Ventres were at the Carlisle Indian School visiting children in charge of Captain Kelly, agent of the Fort Belknap Agency, Montana. They left for the west later.

St. Johns, Que., Nov. 30.—Antoine Gregoire, who was sentenced to a year's imprisonment for petit larceny the ither day, was found dead in his cell. He had hanged himself upon the prison bars by means of his suspenders, and had tied his ankles with his handkerchief. He was about to be married when arrested.

Holyoke, Mass., Nov. 30.—The new German Reformed Church at the corner of Elm and Sargeant streets, in this city, was dedicated last night.

Millville, N. J., Nov. 30.—In a football game her between the Millville team and the Stockton Camden Athletic Association, Charles Jones, of the latter team, suffered a concussion of the skull and is unconscious and in a critical condition.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 30.—Ex-United States Senator Joseph E. Brown, famous as Georgia's war governor, and perhaps the wealthiest man in the South, is in a critical condition at his home here.

Baltimore, Nov. 30.—John Maronsek, a thirteen-year-old boy, shot himself through the heart. Until recently he was a student at Elmhurst College, near Chicago. While there he fell down a flight of stairs. It is thought by his friends that the fall may have affected his brain. No other cause for the suicide can be advanced.

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 30.—Dr. J. A. Henderson, a prominent physician, was shot and killed in his house at Sevierville by W. H. Gass, a leading business man of the town.

Lima, Nov. 30.—An engagement has taken place between the government troops and the insurgents under General Seminaria. The latter were defeated.

Ballston, N. Y., Nov. 30.—The cigar and candy store of P. C. Andersen, postmaster at Stillwater, was burglarized. The post-office safe was blown open and 8,000 two-cent stamps, a registered letter and a small amount of money were stolen.

Berlin, Nov. 30.—At the Czar's instance a bill to introduce edementary public education throughout Russia is preparing.

Lamoni, Ia., Nov. 30.—The Commercial Bank here was entered and the safe blown open by robers at an early hour this morning. An entrance was drilled through the rear door. Holes were drilled into the safe above the combination, and a charge of powder threw the door across the room. The robbers secured $10,000 in money and considerable jewelry.

Pittsburg, Nov. 30.—George M. Irwin, the discretionary pool operator, has returned to Pittsburg from New York, arriving on the Western express at 7:45 o'clock this morning. Friends were in waiting at the Union Station and with them Mr. Irwin immediately disappeared. Reports are current that Irwin was placed under arrest shortly after his arrival and that he gave bail for a hearing.

Middleton, Conn., Nov. 30.—The typhoid fever at Wesleyan is on the wane. Prof. Fisher is out and all the sick students are on the gain, except McAuley, whose condition is critical and whose death is expected.

Rome, Nov. 30.—Thirty-six arrests have been made in Tortolli, Sardinia, in consequence of the recent raid by brigands. Among the prisoners are policemen, an ex-officer of the army, a priest, a judge and two land owners.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 30.—At the American Institute of Christian Sociology Prof. Herron read a paper on "The Political Revival of Christianity" at the Plymouth Tabernacle. Ten minute addresses were made by the Rev. Dr. Dickinson, of Boston; Prof. Herron, the Rev. D. D. McLaurin and local pastors.

Jess—I didn't know Mrs. Stickler was such an entertaining person.

Bess—Indeed she is. She knows a disagreeable story about every woman in her set.—N. Y. World.

WENT DOWN IN THE BAY

Docks at Tacoma Collapse With Frightful Results.

Overwhelmed by a Tidal Wave Buildings and Piers Carry Away and Drown Full a Dozen People—Warehouses and Stock-yards Washed Overboard—Great Losses.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 30.—Amid the roar of what some believe to have been an immense tidal wave beating against the shores of Puget Sound, 600 feet of Tacoma's ocean docks plunged into Commencement Bay. Half a dozen steamers were tossed about like chips, and two were disabled. The filled-in portion of the ocean docks is still settling, and the accident, under the threatening conditions, is beginning to assume the form of a calamity to the city.

H. H. Alger's boat house, containing himself, wife and six children, was turned upside down, spilling the children out of their bunks into the icy water, and it is feared that they were drowned. John Hanson, a watchman at the Northern Pacific hydraulic pump, went down in the debris and cannot be found. He was roasted or drowned in the opinion of steamboat men. The fire department was called out and 500 or more people gatahered at the wharf.

WATKINS, N. Y., Nov. 30.—A terrible tragedy enacted here is no doubt the most revolting ever occurring in Schuyler county. Charles N. Richards, a well known saloon keeper and former proprietor of the Jefferson House, in this place, entered the room of Kate Quirk, a domestic employed at the Kendall House, and after brutally killing her by cutting her throat inflicted injuries upon himself whcih resulted in his death a few hours later.

When Miss Quirk was called by another domestic no response was made. After a second call the door was forced open and a ghastly spectacle was revealed. Richards and his victim were lying on the bed reeking in gore, the latter dead and cold, the former dying.

There was a pool of blood on the carpet at the foot of the bed, and the instrument with which the deed was done, a long carving knife, was lying on the dresser covered with blood. The girl was undressed, as she had retired for the night, but the murderer had all his clothes on. The fact that the knife belonged to the restaurant conducted by Richards shows that he went to the room with murderous designs.

The crime was prompted by jealousy. The actions of Richards and his victim had been such for two or three years as to create gossip, and was the cause of much difficulty between Richards and his wife.

Lately Miss Quirk had been receiving attentions from others, to which Richards strongly objected, and several quarrels have occurred between the two. Yesterday Miss Quirk went to Elmira to do some shopping, and on the same train was Daniel Roach, a salesman for the Goundry Wagon Company, who was going to Cort-

Roach had been paying some attention to the girl and this aroused Richards' jealousy. It is alleged that he had warned her that if she had anything more to do with Roach he would kill her.

Richards aroused Druggist Waugh before going to the hotel and purchased an ounce of laudanum, which he took, but whether before or after cutting his own throat is not known. Richards was thirty-eight years old, and before coming to Watkins he resided at Newburg. He conducted the Jefferson House here for a time, but without much success. Then he opened a restaurant, to which his wife gave her personal attention. Of late he has neglected his business. Miss Quirk was twenty-nine years of age.

For a distance of 1,500 feet the ocean dock had settled, and it is feared the big wheat elevators and coal bunkers will pitch into the bay. Several times, when the ground settled from six inches to a foot, a panic resulted, and there was a wild rush for places of safety.

All the cattle pens of the Northern Pacific, together with the office and that company's 400-foot freight house, went down. Fire at once broke out, and the pump station soon disappeared in the debris.

Nearly all of the dock which fell into the bay is that portion of the water front which the city of Tacoma has been endeavoring to secure from the railroad and the Tacoma Land Company.

Already the damage is estimated at $500,000. Steamboat men claim a tidal wave, twenty feet high, had rushed up the sound and tore the dock away. Employes at the wharf believe that there has been a great subterranean landslide, or that a great fissure or hole has been formed in the bay, causing the dock to be swallowed.

It is not positively known whether the plunging of the docks into the bay caused the heavy sea which overturned Alger's boat house and bore the steamers away from their fastenings, or whether it was, in fact, a tidal wave.

BOMB DOWN A MINE.

Explodes in a Shaft Setting the Mine on Fire and Damaging the Shaft.

BRAZIL, Ind., Nov. 30.—An attempt was made to blow up the new shaft belonging to thet Brazil Block Company, in which were six workmen. At a late hour the engineer left his post for a short time and was startled by a terrific explosion at the engine house. Flames burst out and in a few minutes it was fast consuming the structure.

As the escape shaft is not completed the imprisoned men had no means of escape except from the main entrance, and it was thought for some time they would be suffocated.

After the flames had been subdued the miners succeeded in reaching the top safely by climbing up the cage ropes. The explosive used was placed in a bucket between the boiler and engine, doing much damage to the machinery.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 30.—About a half mile east of Elka two masked men climbed over the engine tank of a Southern Pacific train and made the engineer stop the train. When the train came to a full stop the engineer and fireman were driven from the cab, and the fireman was ordered to cut the train behind the express car. The robbers fired several shots to intimidate trainmen and passengers.

The fireman only cut the hose and ran to the coaches. The robbers boarded the engine and tried to pull out, but could not. They then left the engine and nothing more was seen of them. Bloodhounds have been telegraphed for and will be here in a few hours. Officers think they have a clew.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—The Chicago police have discovered an organized thieving association and arested ten of its members last night. The asociation was organized for the purpose of systematically burglarizing residences.

The gang occupied a deserted and dilapidated cottage at 116 West Taylor street, where bunks and cooking arrangements were fitted up to accommodate about fifteen persons.

The pass word was "Teddy Flaherty," and had to be followed by three short raps on the door to enter the cottage. Police officers located the cottage, and, by lying on the roof of the hut for several hours, learned the pass word which gained them admission.

Over $400 worth of stolen property was found in the cottage.

A VICTORY FOR PASKOLA.

It Receives the Official Endorsement of Eminent Experts and a Jury of Representative Citizens.

The suit brought by Ohio's Food Commissioner against a Cincinnati druggist for selling Paskola on the ground that it was nothing but glucose, resulted in a great victory for Paskola and a verdict against the State.

During the course of the trial, Prof. Shaller of the University of Cincinnati, testified that Paskola was not glucose, and even if it was, it would be harmless. He also bore witness to its activity as a digestive agent.

Prof. Wm. Dickore of the Miami College, testified to the same facts. So did Prof. Schmidt, the chemist of the Board of Health, Prof. Wm. Hoffman and others.

A practical test was made in court, showing the digestive action of Paskola on eggs and meats of various kinds, whereas glucose under precisely the same conditions produced no effect whatever.

This test but confirmed the experts statements and proved Paskola to be of great value in indigestion and wasting diseases.

This verdict disposes of the malicious attack that has been made against Paskola by interested rivals, and suits have now been brought against the proprietors of a well-known emulsion of cod liver oil for having given wide circulation to a false formula and other misrepresentations regarding it.

The animus of this attack will be the better understood when it is known that Paskola is being largely used in the place of cod liver oil.

The lovers were so completely surprised and embarrassed, they stood speechless for some moments, then the girl said:

"How strange it seems, Walter, to hear you called Doctor Plyne."

"Yes. I—I am hardly used to it myself, yet."

Then he lapsed into silence again, and she caught him furtively examining her features, as she was trying to scan his.

"I am so glad, Wal—Dr. Plyne—you have got your degree," she observed at length.

"Oh, thank you, Connie. I thought you would be, that is, why I sent you word."

"Sent me word? I only learned of it yesterday, from Dr. Glade."

"Didn't you receive the notice I sent you from Kings?"

"No. I received nothing."

"That is queer. It must have been lost in the mails," he said, gravely.

"What a pity, for I should have been awfully glad to hear of your success."

Walter reflected a moment (he knew Uncle Roger had destroyed it) and then remarked, as if to change the subject:

"You have been ill, Connie?"

"Who told you?"

He smiled faintly as he replied: "My medical training must have been remiss, if I could not discover that without a stethoscope."

"Do I look—er—so faded, Walter?"

"Oh no, not exactly faded; but something like a budding rose deprived of the sun's rays," a simile nearer the truth than he thought.

When Dr. Glade presently joined them, they were conversing without the slightest embarrassment. That afternoon, as they were returning from their drive, the doctor said to her patient:

"I'M SO GLAD YOU HAVE GOT YOUR DEGREE," SHE SAID.

"Well, my dear, how do you like my new treatment?"

"Oh, Dr. Glade, did you know that Walter was here?"

"Possibly I did; what then?"

"Then you are a perfect dear of a physician. I could hug you for it!" exclaimed Connie rapturously.

"Not here in the carriage, dear. I know how you feel; for, as a Yankee friend of mine would say: 'I've been thar' myself.' Au revoir until tomorrow."

CHAPTER II.—THE DOCTORS DISAGREE, AND THEN—

When Dr. Lancewood assented to a consultation with Dr. Glade, he little knew what a trial was in store for him.

Some years before he was a man of thirty; a clever, easy-going, prosperous London medical coach; he fell seriously in love with one of his pupils, a charming, ambitious girl about twenty. But through her jealousy of another young lady pupil they quarreled, and she had refused him. Afterwards Dr. Lancewood bought a good practice in Hampshire, where he had settled, and often felt the need of a helpmate, for bachelor doctors are not favored by prudish old maids or anxious mammas with growing daughters.

Aunt Ruth led Dr. Helen Glade to the library when she called the next day, and introduced her to Dr. Lancewood. Instantly there was a mutual recognition between the ex-coach and his former pupil, but neither of them orally acknowledged the fact, until Aunt Ruth closed the door and left them, when Dr. Lancewood asked, with ill-concealed amusement:

"Did I understand Miss Passmore to say Dr. Glade?"

"You did, Dr. Lancewood," replied Helen, with chilling politeness.

"Really, I—I am surprised, Helen—Miss Glade—that is, Dr. Glade."

"Why are you surprised?"

"I did not expect this—I—" He continued to look at her with an incredulous smile, mingled with admiration for her beauty, her self-possession and her professional style, which she assumed with elegance, it seemed to him.

"Did you not understand you were to consult with a lady?"

"Yes, yes; but I expected an older one than you are, Helen." There was a tenderness in the way he pronounced her name that touched her, but she smothered it, and frigidly broke in with:

"Pardon me, I must ask you not to use my Christian name."

"Oh, very well," he answered, reddening, "but I once had the privilege—"

"Which you forfeited—and therefore it is indelicate to assume it now."

"I never forfeited it, nor shall I ever relinquish it—in my own self-communion with you—as you were in the old days," he replied with some fervor.

"I prefer not to discuss follies of the past," she said with indifference. "Let us confine ourselves to the consultation."

"As you please," he said with resignation.

"Will you examine the patient?"

"I have already done so, last night."

"Done so! Examine my patient without my being present!" exclaimed Helen, astonished.

"Excuse me, my patient.'

"Pardon me, my patient. I must say I never heard of such a breach of professional etiquette!"

"What nonsense! She was first under my care."

"But you gave her up."

"Only temporarily."

"Even so, you were not justified in making an examination without my presence," she said, her eyes flashing angrily.

"Ha, ha! Well, upon my word, you're as imperious as ever, Helen—"

"Dr. Lancewood, I must insist upon—"

"My calling you doctor," he said, with playful raillery.

"I should be warranted in giving up the case after that."

"Oh, pray don't! for you're conducting the case very well, very well indeed."

Helen was still more indignant at this patronizing compliment and said, with hauteur:

"I did not ask for your opinion, Dr. Lancewood."

"Then what are we consulting for, Dr. Glade?" with humorous twinkle in his eyes.

"Not for my satisfaction, I assure you."

"But it is for mine, Helen—er—Dr. Glade, for I never enjoyed a consultation more, I assure you—"

"Will you oblige me by confining your observations to our patient."

"Our patient is good; it's a slight concession, but 'twill serve."

"What have you to suggest about—"

"Our patient?" he broke in, facetiously.

"As you choose—about Miss Connie Passmore's illness?"

"Well, Dr. Glade, to speak bluntly, there are symptoms of tuberculosis."

"Oh! Oh, indeed!" cried Helen, faintly ironical.

"That you had discovered, I presume."

"No, I can't say I had."

"Eh? You don't mean to say you disagree with my conclusion?"

"I do, decidedly."

"Have you examined her?"

"Yes. More than once."

"And yet you have not hit upon the source and cause of her prostration?"

"Oh, yes, I have," with an air of triumph.

"Her lungs are tainted with—"

"Fudge! Not the slightest."

"Well, upon my word! Such—such downright egotism is——"

"Quite masculine," sarcastically.

"Bah! I'll throw up the case!"

"Thank you."

"I thank the fates our affair never got beyond a—a—flirtation."

"So do I; a mere flirtation."

"Enough of that," he said, completely baffled by her indifference. "Let us consider the patient."

"I AM SURPRISED, HELEN."

"But I understood you to relinquish the case."

"I do, I do," mechanically putting on his gloves. "I leave it to you."

"Thanks. I believe I can satisfactorily conduct it."

"To the undertaker," he said sneeringly, pacing the room, as he struggled with his gloves.

"No, to the church," she retorted smiling.

"The churchyard," sarcastically.

"No, to the chancel," a whimsical smile playing about her lips.

"Eh, chancel? What do you mean?" He paused with his hand on the door knob.

"That concerns my patient," disdainfully.

"But I shall have to make some report to Maj. Passmore."

"Tell him we disagree," she replied, undisguisedly enjoying his dilemma.

"Now, Helen, why will you not be reasonable? You are concealing something from me. In spite of your perversity, I—I love you."

She could have melted then, but, with an effort, calmly said:

"Let us stick to the patient, please."

"No, confound the patient! I've given up the patient. Now sit down, Helen, and I'll listen to your opinion with all the respect I'd give to—"

"Will you, indeed?" archly.

"Yes, I will. Now, do be seated. I'm anxious to know what you have discovered about Miss Passmore."

"And you will listen to it without prejudice?" she asked, mechanically taking a seat on the opposite side of the table.

"Certainly I will."

"Very well then, since you concede I'm entitled to an opinion, I will give you my diagnosis."

Thereupon Helen related Connie's love story, and dwelt upon how she had improved since meeting Walter Plyne. When she had finished Dr. Lancewood exclaimed:

"Well, I declare! I should never have looked at her case in that light."

"Of course not. Men have such tough, leathern hearts they rarely think of the female organ being so much more fragile and sensitive."

"Then you believe her lungs are sound?"

"Quite sound yet, but I admit they are delicate."

"There can be no doubt of that," he said, musingly, playing with the paper knife. "Her mother, you perhaps know, died of consumption."

"Yes—so her aunt told me. But the girl has no will power; she has been petted and pampered from the cradle; every trivial disappointment she meets with she takes to heart. If she is allowed to mope and repine, as she has done for the last three months, and further weaken an already delicate constitution, we may expect an attack on her weakest organs, the lungs."

"Admirably reasoned! I quite agree with you."

Helen was flattered. In spite of an effort at cool indifference, her cheeks glowed with pleasure at this spontaneous acknowledgment. Still, she tried to deprecate his compliment by saying:

"That is only a feminine practitioner's view."

"Nevetheless, rational. Now what do you propose doing—what do you advise?"

He saw the advantage he had gained, and astutely followed it up with deferential acquiesence.

"Well," said Helen, with that gratification which every woman feels when the man she loves appeals to her judgment, "we should advise Maj. Passmore to withdraw his opposition to her lover. If he doesn't, we cannot be responsible for the consequences."

"That is right," he assented. "There really was no need of a consultation you had mastered the case so completely. I must confess I should never have sought for the trouble in that direction."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Which Was It?

The mother of two sons, twins, met one of the brothers in the yard.

"Which of you two boys am I talking to?" asked the mother; "is it you or your brother?"

"Why do you ask?" inquired the lad, prudently.

"Because, if it is your brother, I'll box his ears."

"It is not my brother; it is I."

"Then your brother is wearing your coat, because yours had a hole in it."

"No, mother; I'm wearing my own coat."

"Good heavens," shrieked the mother, looking him intently; "you are your brother after all."—Texas Siftings.

"THE RED BADGE OF COURAGE"

BY STEPHEN CRANE.

It is a war story of remarkable power and contains descriptive passages that rise to the highest levels of Tolstoi and Zola. There are scenes in it which show how death comes to the soldier while he is still on his feet and even unconscious that he is hurt. The story is full of action. Mr W. D. Howells says of this young writer that he is the most promising now before the public. Mr. Hamlin Garland also ranks him very high in a bit of recent criticism. "The Red Badge of Courage" is the best piece of fiction Mr. Crane has yet written. Don't fail to read the opening chapters on Dec. 3.

REMARKABLE CURES
Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.
